U. S. Business To Seek Part In New Deal's Future Trend

Chamber Leaders, Here Friday, Are Ready to Co-operate.

Berry Issues Call To Capital Parley

O'Mahoney Seeks to License Interstate Corporations.

By William V. Nessly.

Indications were forthcoming here yesterday that American business, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, henceforth will offer a more cooperative attitude toward policies of the Roosevelt Administration in hope of modifying or being permitted to help shape the attitude of the Administration toward business itself.

Members of the board of directors of the chamber are preparing to assemble here next Friday to map the chamber's program for the next session of Congress. That the organization will abandon or at least considerably lessen its highly critical stand on Administration activities during the past two or three years is indicated in circles close to the business body's officialdom.

Meanwhile, business leaders were presented with another opportunity to get close to the Administration in its program for the coming year or longer, when Maj. George L. Berry, the President's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, sent out a call to all representatives of industry and labor to meet with the Council for Industrial Progress here on December 10 and 11. Formulation of a program of legislation to stabilize recovery and improve labor and competitive conditions will be the main goal of the conference.

Another Government-business development yesterday was announcement by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, that he is preparing a new bill to license corporations engaged in interstate commerce, thereby providing, in the minds of many, much of the control over business that marked the invalidated NRA.

Roper Drafts NRA Report.

This announcement came simultaneously with word that Secretary of Commerce Roper is preparing for the President a comprehensive report on the NRA which would be ready in about a month.

Leaders of the chamber were represented yesterday as feeling that in view of the election result continuation of a struggle with the Administration is worse than useless and only by joining in and promoting friendlier relations can there be any hope of applying influence against the trend toward Government control.

Berry's invitation to all trade associations and labor organizations to the council meeting next month carried the declaration that "industry, and the Government as well, must yield to and reflect the people's will. Our program will go forward and will affect all those who operate the business affairs of this democracy."

Little doubt was expressed that the forthcoming meeting will be more generally attended and participated in than was his industrial conference last year. At that time national associations of several industries, such as steel, automobiles and textiles, declined to take part, and other groups that participated in the first sessions failed to name representatives to the council which grew out of the original session.

Welcomes Former Critics.

To all of these, Berry said in his call yesterday:

"Industrialists who have previously remained aloof from the industrial council, and some who have severely criticized its operations, will be welcomed in friendly spirit."

Urging full attendance, he said:

"In the great task of preparing to lay before the President and Congress a sound and balanced program which will advance the general welfare by stabilizing industry in its various phases, meanwhile guarding equally the interests of ownership, management, worker

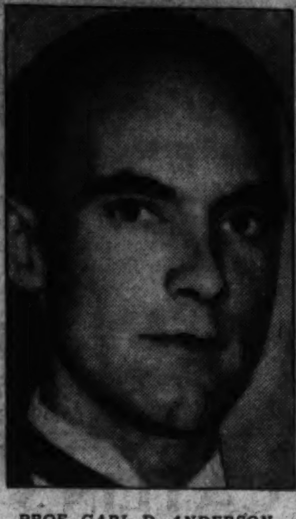
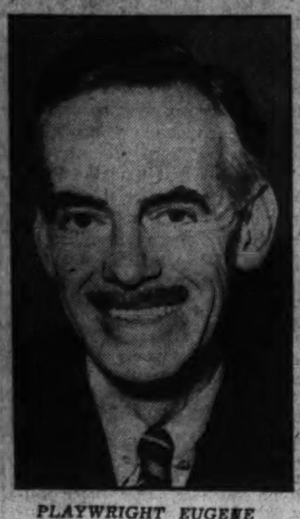
Nobel Prize for Literature Awarded to Eugene O'Neill



PROF. CARL D. ANDERSON.



PLAYWRIGHT EUGENE O'NEILL.

Dramatist Second American to Receive Honor; Prof. Carl Anderson, California Institute of Technology, Shares Physics Award With Austrian.

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 12.—Eugene O'Neill, noted American dramatist, was awarded the Nobel Prize in literature today.

Prof. Carl David Anderson, of the California Institute of Technology, shared the prize for physics with Prof. V. G. Hess, of Innsbruck University, Austria.

Prof. Peter Debye, of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Physics in Berlin, was granted the chemistry prize for his studies of the structure of the molecule.

O'Neill—whose better plays include "Ah, Wilderness!" "Strange Interlude," and "Mourning Becomes Electra"—became the second American to win the literature prize. Sinclair Lewis, novelist, received it in 1930.

O'Neill will be given the prizes for 1935 and 1936, totaling about $45,000, as no award was made last year in literature.

Prof. Anderson and Prof. Hess will be given about $20,000 each.

The Nobel Foundation's managing board of directors, as is customary, did not cite any specific work by the winner of the literature prize.

Prof. Anderson's award was granted for his discovery in 1933 of positrons—positive electrons—

Marine Board Extends Study To East, Gulf

Miss Perkins Is Hopeful of Early Settlement; Violence Flares.

By Sidney Olson.

The battles of organized labor on strike and political fronts, as well as within its own dissension-divided ranks, yesterday settled into a steady barrage of statements from its leaders, with the results of any of its struggles still unpredictable.

The chief developments:

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said she is "hopeful" an agreement could be reached soon in the maritime strike.

Two employe representatives of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. protested to Secretary Perkins on stipulated conditions attached to a sliding-scale wage increase offered workers by the company.

Assistant Labor Secretary Edward F. McGrady toiled in San Francisco on one remaining obstacle to maritime labor peace—the "hiring hall" situation.

Street fighting in San Pedro, Calif., marked the fifteenth day of the longshoremen's walk-out.

The Maritime Commission withdrew from strike negotiation efforts in order to extend its investigations to Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

Berry Issues Call.

Maj. George L. Berry, Co-ordinator for Industrial Co-operation, issued a call for business and labor to meet here to draft a program for "long-time stabilization of recovery."

In New York, the executive board of the United Textile Workers voted to support John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, and to boycott the convention of the American Federation of Labor in Tampa, Fla.

The federation's executive council was reported split, nine votes to eight, in favor of ousting the C. I. O. unions from the A. F. of L.

Arthur Besse, president of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, announced 21 wool textile companies had increased their employes' wages.

In the profusion of labor news, chief concern attached to the confused maritime strike. Associated Press dispatches from San Francisco revealed both ship owners and strike leaders maintained silence yesterday as McGrady labored to

Pope Pius XI Is Seriously Ill, Friends Admit

Pontiff Is Suffering From Bright's Disease; Now Carried to Audiences.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Vatican City, Nov. 12.—Members of the papal household informed the United Press tonight His Holiness Pope Pius XI is suffering from Bright's disease (dropsy).

The pontiff, they added, also is afflicted with kidney trouble and his face, as well as his legs, is puffed and swollen.

Intimates of the pontiff no longer conceal their anxiety about his health. However, the 79-year-old spiritual ruler of the Catholic Church refuses to spare his strength and is continuing his daily routine of audiences, even though he is carried to most of them.

Vatican officials have instructed the Vatican police to be prepared to close all gates to the papal palace on a given signal and to refuse either entry or exit to everyone until further orders.

Refuses Examination.

No explanation of this unusual move has been given, but it presumably is connected with the possible sudden death of his holiness.

It is reported the Pope's medical staff finds it difficult to do their utmost for him because he refuses a thorough physical examination.

Significantly, the church authorities have ordered all newspapermen accredited to the Vatican to cease reporting how the Pope arrives at his various daily audiences. Usually now he is carried to the papal throne.

To Receive Horthy.

The Pope's indomitable energy and his own belief that he will be active for some time to come was illustrated last night by the announcement that he expects to receive the Hungarian regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, and his staff, at an audience November 27.

For some months rumors have been current around Vatican City that the pontiff was in failing health. The consistency with which he kept up his daily routine, however, receiving hundreds of visitors, seemed to deny these reports. It was only yesterday that officials reluctantly admitted that the successor of St. Peter was scarcely able to walk.

Relief Load Is Past Peak, Hopkins Says

Rolls Already Reduced by 1,000,000 Cases, WPA Head Says.

Expects Gain in Private Jobs Will Offset Winter Drains.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Federal relief load has definitely passed its peak and the works program will enter the new year with 1,000,000 fewer cases than a year ago, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins claimed yesterday.

Pointing to a 16 per cent decline in Federal, State and local relief cases in the two years ended last August, Hopkins predicted gains in private employment will offset the usual winter relief drain, hold the load static, or possibly permit further relief roll retrenchment.

Figures made public by the Works Progress Administration nevertheless showed a steady increase in works program relief cases since the July 15 low point of 3,301,442. On October 15, relief numbers had climbed to 3,498,012, a gain of 196,570 in three months, and an increase of 60,013 over a month ago.

Fluctuation Not Shown.

No totals were offered showing the fluctuation in Federal, State and local relief totals since the August aggregate of 3,833,000 on all types of relief. The August all-relief must be scaled down by 77,000 to reach Hopkins' announced goal of a "million less" on relief in January than in January 1936, when 4,756,000 were on the rolls.

Hopkins evaded all questions on WPA's future status in the Federal administrative set-up, declined to estimate how much would be asked for in next year's separate relief budget, or to intimate whether his organization will seek a deficiency appropriation to tide it through the present fiscal year.

He admitted there has been some trimming of WPA's administrative staff—that 1,000 employes were released in the month preceding the elections and that further curtailments are taking place.

"We are reviewing our relief load all over the country," Hopkins said. "The number of families on relief have been declining steadily, and will continue to decline. The increase in private employment may counteract the usual seasonal gain in winter relief rolls. It may do better than that. At all events, the load will be far less than last winter. I attribute the improvement in the relief load to the improvement in economic conditions."

Cites Figures on Decline.

Hopkins pointed out that the August total of 3,833,000 on Federal, State and local relief, compared with the January, 1935, relief peak for the country of 5,316,000, and marked a decline of about 900,000, from the January, 1936, peak.

"The cost of relief will decrease in corresponding fashion," he said. "So far as concerns the number of persons on relief and the load of

Firmer Measures To Curb Religion Adopted by Soviet

Moscow, Nov. 12 (AP).—Firmer measures against religion were approved today at a Communist Party conference at Yaroslavl, north of Moscow.

The conferees heard allegations that peasants, under the influence of priests, caused a loss of 35 per cent of Russia's crops for 1936 because of their attendance at church.

The conference decided to increase antireligious propaganda, to organize councils of militant "godless" persons in all districts and to open attnireligious schools immediately to educate youths.

Speakers declared that on many collective farms in the Buisk and Galitch districts, church leaders had praised collective farm women who violated "labor discipline."

One speaker asserted evangelists circulated a statement saying:

"Be as simple as doves and sly as snakes. Jesus was of proletarian origin, the son of Joseph, the carpenter, and of a toiling woman. It is necessary to explain that Jesus Christ was the great Socialist and Communist predecessor of the Communist Party."

Moses, Miracle-Baby, Hers, Woman Admits; Says Story 'Invented to Deceive Her Husband'

By the United Press.

Pearl River, La., Nov. 12.—A backwoods farm wife, who presented the world tonight with a "modern Moses delivered from the piney woods by a big black dog," admitted tonight that the baby was her own offspring.

Mrs. Effie Crawford, 24-year-old backwoods mother, said the dog which she had claimed delivered a blue-eyed baby boy to her cabin clearing in St. Tammany Parish woods was a figment of her imagination. It was invented, she said, to conceal the birth from her husband.

Late tonight, Mrs. Crawford confessed to her husband, Louis, in the presence of reporters, that the baby was hers by another man and was born at 11 p. m. Sunday. The husband said:

"That's all right, honey. I'll stick to you through hell and high water."

The first suggestion of a hoax in the story came tonight from Sheriff Walter Galadas, of Covington.

"Clarence Crawford, a deputy sheriff at Pearl River, telephoned me this evening and said Mrs. Crawford had admitted it was her own baby," the sheriff said.

The sheriff implied that he was "not surprised." He had questioned Mrs. Crawford several hours today when she went to Covington to see about adopting the baby.

"She pleaded with me tearfully for hours that she must have the baby," the sheriff said. "I asked her why, and she said the baby was meant for her; that the dog had brought it to her.

"I asked her if she thought it was an act of Divine Providence. She replied 'that may be it, but that baby came to me for a reason.'"

The husband, a WPA worker, had given every indication of believing his wife's story of a dog carrying the baby up to the cabin.

A God-fearing man, it was Crawford who suggested the name "Moses," which later was inscribed on the baby's incubator at Charity Hospital.

"It was like a miracle," the husband told neighbors who crowded his front porch Tuesday night.

Brandeis, 80 Today, Still a Paradox; Close to Masses Despite Own Wealth

Virtual Recluse, Justice Surpasses Colleagues in His Economics.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Firm of step, bright of eye and retaining all the enthusiasm of his youth for the law and the solution of America's economic problems, Louis Dembitz Brandeis, third ranking associate justice of the Supreme Court, today observes his eightieth birthday.

Passing the four score milestone of his life, Justice Brandeis remains today as great a paradox as he was a generation ago to Boston's Brahmins, who could not understand why an able lawyer, well on his way to wealth, should be so concerned about the condition of workingmen or spend his talent fighting corporations in the interest of the public welfare—without fees.

Has Faith in Democracy.

Justice Brandeis lives the life of an ascetic. But he is closer to the heartbeat of the man in America's streets than any other member of the high tribunal. His tastes are simple, his life almost frugal, despite the fact he is reputed to be a millionaire. In spite of the solitary and contemplative life he leads, he is far more skilled in economics and in the realities and practices of the everyday business world than any of his colleagues.

As in his earlier days, when he figured someway in virtually every crusade against special privilege and bad government, Justice Brandeis continues to defy classification under the usual labels of "liberal," "conservative" or "radical." Each of these terms has been applied to him. But he spurns doctrine and adheres to none, preferring instead to seek the truth, grounded in facts, around which litigation or political controversy revolves.

He has a deep faith in democracy as a form of society, but has pointed out that "democracy is more difficult to maintain than to achieve." He has warned against the excesses of labor as well as those of capital, asserting that "we gain nothing by exchanging the tyranny of capital for the tyranny of labor" and even though he always has contended the workers should get as much as possible of the fruits of industry, he has declared that "arbitrary demands must be met by determined refusals."

Greatest Factors.

He has asserted that "the greatest factors making for communism, socialism or anarchy among a free people are the excesses of capital," adding that "it is certain among a free people every excess of capital must in time be repaid by the excessive demands of those who have not the capital."

His ideal of democracy is that expressed by the Italian patriot, Guiseppe Mazzini when he asserted: "No war of classes, no hostility to existing wealth, no wanton or un-

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

Justice to Celebrate at Desk, Messenger for 20 Years Says

Edward Poindexter, who has served him 20 years, yesterday reckoned as how Justice Louis Dembitz Brandeis' eightieth birthday anniversary today won't keep him from his regular duties on the Supreme Court bench.

Ever since Brandeis took his seat in the Nation's highest tribunal, Poindexter has been his messenger.

"Confidential messenger," explained the 66-year-old colored employe, who lives at 1836 Thirteenth street northwest.

And his "boss" did not confide to him any plans for a birthday celebration today. So Edward will be on the job as usual, toting documents between the court and the Brandeis apartment at 2205 California street northwest, running errands and perhaps bringing the justice his lunch.

Although he has waited upon Brandeis since June, 1916, Poindexter knows him scarcely any better now than he did two decades ago.

"The justice doesn't talk much," said the messenger soberly. "He just pays attention to business. It's a pleasure to work for him."

While the dean of Supreme Court liberals may choose to pay no particular attention to the occasion, outstanding Americans in public and private life congratulate him on his eightieth birthday in the current "Brandeis" issue of the American Hebrew Magazine.

More than 100 appraisals, tributes and felicitations, coming from all 48 States and the District, are included in the special issue.

General Held After Murder Of Ky. Widow

Officer Is Arrested When He Refuses Testimony at the Inquest.

By the Associated Press.

New Castle, Ky., Nov. 12.—Sheriff Evan Harrod arrested Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, 60, of the Kentucky National Guard today on a warrant charging him with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, 40, comely La Grange widow. The warrant was sworn to by Mrs. Taylor's brother, E. S. Carr, of La Grange.

Gen. Denhardt, who was arrested after he declined on advice of counsel to testify at an inquest this afternoon into the death of Mrs. Taylor, was released under $25,000 bond for an examining trial November 20 before Judge A. S. Morgan.

Official Goes Bond.

Dr. Arthur T. McCormack, head of the Kentucky board of health, provided the bond.

Commonwealth's Attorney H. B. Kinsolving moved that the inquest be postponed indefinitely after Denhardt said, "I won't testify, by advice of counsel." When Denhardt's counsel demanded that the inquest proceed, the sheriff stepped forward and arrested Denhardt while he was still in the witness chair.

He was taken to the county judge's office for arraignment.

Special deputies and State police directed the orderly dispersal of a crowd of 1,100 which packed the courthouse.

Denhardt's arrival at the inquest marked his first public appearance since the body of the socially prominent La Grange woman was found in a roadside ditch Friday night about 200 yards from his automobile.

The arrest of Denhardt adjourned the inquest.

Simon Charges Fascists, Reds Get Outside Aid

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—Home Secretary Sir John Simon charged in the House of Commons today that British Communists and Fascists received money from foreign countries. His allegations were categorically denied by both groups.

Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Fascists, in a statement demanded Simon produce evidence to support his assertion.

Chest Pledged $492,359 Gifts On First Day

Off to a flying start with encouraging reports from various units—totaling $492,359—the ninth annual Community Chest campaign opened officially yesterday with an army of volunteer fighters determined to rid the city of "four public enemies"—hunger, disease, crime and despair.

As wild cheering and shouts of approval echoed through the Willard Hotel ballroom at the opening luncheon yesterday, Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, introduced four unit heads who announced latest returns. Thunderous applause, carried to Washington citizens over a hookup of the National Broadcasting Co., greeted each report.

Chairman Jennings announced the campaign would end November 24 "no matter what happens." There will be no extension beyond the deadline, he warned.

Largest of the opening day contributions was reported by the Special Assignment Unit through Joseph P. Tumulty, chairman. This unit, assigned to contact citizens of prominence and wealth, announced

In response to a complaint by District police officials forwarded to him by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Gov. Nice said:

President Owes Only His Name To Roosevelts, This Delano Says

"If the President received anything from the Roosevelt family other than his name, I haven't been able to discover it."

So spoke a fourth Presidential cousin yesterday who is mighty proud of the Delanos and quite willing to have his branch of the family accept credit for Franklin Delano Roosevelt's aggregate gifts.

He is Daniel Webster Delano, a researcher in the Library of Congress, who makes a hobby of family trees.

Resembling the President slightly himself, he declared that all Delanos look alike, "that I could pick one out in a crowd," and that they have many identical characteristics, such as their devotion to their wives.

"So far as I can find, there's never been a divorce in the Delano family," he said.

Asked about the President's own children's divorces, he laughed and said: "They're Roosevelts."

Fourth Cousin Delano plucked one tidbit out of his long genealogical perusals and that was the fact the President's uncle, Franklin Delano, for whom F. D. R. was named, once owned an estate in Monaco called "The Sunflower."

Delanos Called Aristocrats.

"The Delanos come from aristocratic forebears," said Daniel Webster Delano. "They are leaders because of that. The Roosevelts are of peasant stock. Claes Roosevelt, the first to come to this country, and the President's direct ancestor, was a Holland peasant.

"President Roosevelt never felt the influence of that branch. He is a Delano through and through. He looks just like his mother, thinks like her, and has many of the characteristics of the whole tribe.

"His love of travel is a Delano trait. Our people have always been wanderers. One branch of the family is settled in Chile and half of us seem to have been born in China. The President has said he should have been a traveling salesman. He's off soon to Buenos Aires. He's going all the time.

"No generation has been without its sea captain. That's where the President gets his love of the sea. Since early days our men have Neutrality Session Clears Moscow on Three of Four Charges.

The Situation Abroad.

Possibility of a diplomatic rupture between Italy and Russia was seen after a bitter denunciation of Russia before the International Non-Intervention Committee in London by Italian Ambassador Dino Grandi.

The neutrality committee acquitted Russia of three of four Italian charges of aiding the Madrid government.

In Spain, insurgent artillery resumed bombardment of Madrid after the government announced its troops recaptured Getafe, 8 miles south of the capital, in a surprise attack.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, (Friday), Nov. 13.—Informed Italian sources today stated they saw the possibility of a diplomatic rupture between Italy and Russia on the heels of a bitter denunciation of Russia by Signor Dino Grandi last night before the International Non-Intervention Committee in London.

These sources declared Grandi's attack on Russia served only to accentuate the growing bitterness between Rome and Moscow.

They pointed out that an Italian ambassador for the first time had accused the Moscow government and Josef Stalin directly, rather than communism or bolshevism, of intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Grandi's attack followed a denial by Russian representatives of Italian charges made to the neutrality group that Russia had aided the Madrid government.

The committee later acquitted Russia of three of the four Italian charges of intervention, deciding to await receipt of further information from Russia regarding the fourth Italian allegation.

Taking the floor immediately after the Russian representatives, Signor Grandi launched into a general denunciation of Russia.

The Italian Ambassador to London declared Italy "accepted the challenge" of a communistic threat in Europe.

Unleashes Attack.

"Russia even here assumes its recent disguise as a innocent lamb * * * and endeavors to whitewash the red flag of the Communist revolution," Grandi asserted.

Referring to the Spanish government's flight from Madrid, the Italian diplomat said:

"Thus ends, amidst fire and blood, the greatest attempt ever made by Bolshevik Russia to impose their creed, through force and famine, beyond their frontiers.

"The Soviet representative has defined it as a creed of peace, but the facts deny him. It is a creed based on class hatred and civil strife. It is the creed of war."

Grandi continued:

"Stalin (Josef Stalin), chief of the Bolshevist revolution, said it was the duty of the U. S. S. R. to render every assistance within their power to the Spanish Communist revolution which means the liberation of Spain from Fascist oppression was not a private affair of the Spaniards but the common cause of Communism.

"We accept the challenge * * * Italy, in fact, is convinced that not only is the future of Spain, but the future of all civilized Europe that is at stake today."

Held Tool of Nazis.

The Italian's denunciation drew a quick retort from the Russian representative, Moiseyevitch Kagan.

"He (Grandi) throws himself into the fray with a whoop reminiscent of the Redskins' battle cry in those tales which no doubt all of us read when we were young," Kagan said.

"If today we have to listen to the Italian representative piping a tune which Berlin has composed," Kagan continued, "then, though we may congratulate Berlin on 'victory,' we must condole with Rome on yielding her independence of opinion in international matters, on surrendering her independence for some substitute to the U. S. S. R. at the clamor of Berlin."

Meanwhile, the committee approved the draft of a plan to establish neutral control agencies to see that neither rebels nor loyalists in Spain received military supplies from abroad.

President Is All Delano, Claims Fourth Cousin

Roosevelts Just Peasant Dutch Stock, Asserts 'Official' of Family.

hungered for the sea, and just last week my young nephew here in Washington, Willard Alfred Delano popped out that his life's ambition was to go to Annapolis and become a sailor.

Started in New Bedford.

They started back in colonial New Bedford in the China tea trade. Frederick A. Delano, of this city, was born in Hong Kong. Daniel H. Delano, of Orting, Wash., who is 100 years old, wrote me once that 'The family has scattered all over the world. I only got to the Pacific Coast, as far as I could go.' He was from New York State. Old Amasa Delano by 1817 had been around the world three times and written a book about it.

"The charm for which the President is famous stems from his Delano ancesters, the charm of the aristocrat. His mother's bigrapher called her biography 'Gracious Lady.' The difference between Franklin and Theodore Roosevelt's type is obvious.

"A story, by the way, not told in his mother's bigraphy is the way in which she accepted Franklin's father, James Roosevelt, who was old enough to be her father, and lived on an estate across the Hudson from Sarah's. They used to row back and forth to visit. Then they rigged up a semaphore system with flags. One day he wig-wagged 'Will you marry me?' and she wig-wagged back 'Yes.'

"Franklin's father died when he was still a boy. In Franklin's youth his father was an old man to him, almost like the average boy's grandfather. James Roosevelt had been out of college seven years before his bride was born.

Brought Up by Mother.

"So Franklin was brought up entirely in the Delano tradition. His mother dominated him and inculcated the Delano ideals in his mind. That's where he got his sense of social justice. For although the Delanos were rich, they felt a genuine obligation to society.

"Peter de Lanoy, for instance, was the first elected mayor of New York. Previously mayors had been appointed. The people rose up and elected him in 1689, and put him into office protected by guns.

"The archives of the town of Duxbury, Mass., where they settled, show three solid pages of Delanos who volunteered to fight in the Revolutionary War. Some of them fought in South American wars of freedom.

"Jane Delano, who is mentioned in Red Cross circles in the same breath with Clara Barton and Florence Nightingale, developed and perfected the Red Cross nursing service during the World War. She devoted her life to mankind. It is interesting to note that she is the only woman to be honored with a statue at Red Cross headquarters here. She is buried at Arlington, in the exact center of a wide plot given to nurses.

"Uncle Frederick was the first head of the Community Chest here in Washington. My grandfather, David R. Delano, established a hospital in Syracuse, N. Y. My own father wrote a speech in 1925 while campaigning for Bob LaFollette which Franklin could have used in the last compaign. The oldest Delano, out West, told me, 'I'll vote for Frank, even if I am a Republican, as long as he stands true to our ideas.'

Mayflower Was Full.

"I myself got into social service once, and took to it like a duck to water. So it's the natural thing with us. I suppose it all comes from the original Delano—Phillippe de la Noy—who came over on the ship Fortune, the first one after the Mayflower. By the way, he tried to get on the Mayflower and there wasn't room, and they left him standing on the dock. He was a Huguenot who hated injustice.

"The President will live to a ripe old age if he's like the others. They all usually go to 80 or 85 years, and often more. They're extremely strong and healthy. None of them ever get sick. When they die, they die from shot or shock. Quite a few have blown their brains out, some rather lately. The others die suddenly, in 20 minutes or so, while seeming in perfect health.

"All have the same chin, with a dimple. We all have crowded teeth, frequently quite irregular. The President's are that way. Our eyes are the other infallible facial mark, always grayish green. The high forehead is always present, too.

"The President is listed in the family genealogy merely as 'Franklin Delano, b. 1882.' The compiler didn't even bother to give the day or month of his birth.

"Like a Good Time."

"The Delanos all seem to like a good time. But they all stuck to their wives. They never had any domestic trouble.

"That might have been different if Priscilla Mullins had accepted Peter de la Noy instead of John Alden. He courted her, but she was too hard to get along with. Poor old John Alden even had to ask Myles Standish to help him out. The Delano, Standish and Alden houses all stand side by side to this day in Duxbury, out on Cape Cod. The Delano house had a lot of modern improvements in it, but they're taking them all out so as to make it like it was in the old days.

"The head of our house is still a Frenchman—'His Princely Grace, Edgar Honore Marie de Lannoy, comte de Lannoy de Clerxaux.' I, it might be added, am an officer of the family—the Poursoivant d'Armes, which means sergeant at arms, or something equally important."

The Poursoivant d'Armes, after granting the above interview, excused himself for lunch. He had to rush over to a corner cafeteria.

Smashing Re-election of Roosevelt Is Viewed as Hull Trade Pacts Endorsement.

—By Franklyn Waltman.—

WALTMAN.

CONTENTIONS that in re-electing President Roosevelt the electorate approved this or that New Deal measure undoubtedly will be the basis of dispute and controversy for many months to come. But it seems there can be no dispute that the country unequivocally placed its seal of approval on the Hull reciprocal trade program.

Gov. Alf M. Landon made a frontal attack on the reciprocal trade program. Although approving the idea of reciprocity, he denounced the methods being pursued by the Secretary of State. He singled out for especial disapproval the heart of the Hull trade agreements—the principle of the most favored nation treatment. The Republican platform and the Kansan specifically promised that if successful at the polls, repeal of the reciprocal trade act and the agreements made under it would be sought.

Although the President resorted to generalities and a reiteration of his objectives in defending many other New Deal measures against Gov. Landon's attacks, he specifically indorsed the Hull trade program, as enacted and as administered. This he did on several occasions during the campaign, even though he had been silent regarding this program previously.

Apparently many voters regarded the Hull reciprocal trade program as a vital, decisive issue in the campaign. This was evidenced by the reaction to Gov. Landon's Minneapolis speech assailing the Hull program. James P. Warburg, who had written two books denouncing the New Deal, felt so strongly about the Landon speech that he announced he would vote for Mr. Roosevelt on that issue alone. Dean Acheson, who resigned as Undersecretary of the Treasury because of disagreement with New Deal fiscal policies, broke a long silence with a similiar announcement.

The Landon tariff speech was the beginning of the Baltimore Sun's loss of interest in the Kansan. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, another Democratic newspaper which had turned thumbs down on President Roosevelt, condemned that speech. Walter Lippmann, a lifelong Democrat who previously had declared for Gov. Landon's election, bitingly criticized his tariff remarks. The enthusiasm of many others for Gov. Landon were chilled by that speech. All in all, it was perhaps the biggest mistake Gov. Landon made in the campaign.

These events, which have historical significance, are recited to demonstrate that the voters affirmatively passed on the Hull tariff program. If any specific issue was decided in the campaign, that one must have been. Consequently there would seem to be no doubt whatever that this policy will be continued during the next four years.

Yet there are men in the State Department who are fearful over what may happen to this program when Congress is asked in a few months to extend for another period the powers lodged in the President under the reciprocal trade act. The present authority expires next June, although agreements previously made will stand until the period for expiration in them is reached.

They feel sure that the President will ask Congress to continue the effectiveness of the reciprocity act. But they fear that the protective tariff lobbies—certain protected groups, like manganese ore, some dairy interests and some manufacturers who have been or are afraid of being affected by tariff reductions—will bring sufficient pressure to bear on Congress to defeat the President's request.

Organized pressure on the part of those seeking special privilege always is present whenever the tariff is up for discussion; seldom on behalf of consumers. The protective tariff interests yearn for the day when the tariff making power comes back to Capitol Hill, where political pressure can be used; where committees lacking expert and technical knowledge can be impressed by arguments treating only one side of the picture and where logrolling tactics constitute the method of procedure.

And undoubtedly they will fight hard—even now laying down their lines of strategy—to end the President's power to conclude more reciprocity agreements. Thus it is encouraging to those who regard the reciprocity program as a constructive contribution to world peace and sane economic development, both at home and abroad, that the National Foreign Trade Convention which meets next week in Chicago proposes to come to the defense of the Hull policy.

Encouraging to the friends of the Hull program also is the new State Department plan to make public factual analyses of the operation of those trade agreements already in effect. The first of these, just released, deals with the Canadian agreement, focal point of Gov. Landon's attack. Had Gov. Landon's experts prepared such data for him, he would have escaped the humiliation he suffered following his remarks about Cheddar cheese and other tariff reductions in his Minneapolis speech.

Publication by the State Department of analyses of the trade agreements already in operation serves the purpose of getting the controversy over the reciprocity act out into the open where it can be fought on the basis of facts, instead of being subjected to behind-the-door maneuvering and intrigue—the favorite method of operation of high-tariff lobbyists. If the State Department's facts can be challenged, they should be, and the experts of that department should recognize candidly any mistakes that have been made in agreements so far negotiated.

Fearing the possibility that their authority might be ended after June, the State Department negotiators in all probability will try to conclude as many trade agreements in the next seven months as possible. Agreements with the United Kingdom, Italy, Australia and South African authorities are in prospect. At no time since Secretary Cordell Hull launched his program has the world been in a more responsive frame of mind toward proposals for reducing tariffs—another reason for striking while the iron is hot.

The steps taken following the American-French-British monetary accord are in that direction. In recent months European statesmen have become more enthusiastic about the Hull program. Finally, President Roosevelt's re-election has greatly increased his prestige on the world stage. All this was evidenced by the remarks several days ago by British Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin at the Lord Mayor's banquet.

Asserting that his government was "looking forward to a future period of friendly co-operation with the Government of President Roosevelt in all matters of common concern," the prime minister added that "it is particularly gratifying to the British government to note that the main object of their (the United States) economic policies is the same—namely, liberation of the world from the shackles which unduly impede the free development of international trade and particularly those exceptional restrictions of importation and exchange instituted during the period of economic depression."

He went on to assert that the British alone were helpless to do very much about further improving their foreign trade. He said the British lag in foreign trade could be cured partly by bilateral trade agreements with particular countries, while "complete recovery can only be found in measures for the resuscitation of international trade generally."

Jurist in Edith Maxwell Retrial Rarely Has Verdict Reversed

Judge Ezra T. Carter to Hear Change of Venue Plea Monday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gate City, Va., Nov. 12.—Judge Ezra T. Carter, of this city, who was designated by Gov. Peery to sit at the new trial for Edith Maxwell, has rarely had his decisions reversed in the higher courts, according to former Judge S. J. Bonds, who yesterday asserted records of cases handled in his court in Lee and Scott counties corroborate his statement.

The 6-foot, white-haired jurist, a native of Scott County, next Monday will hear Miss Maxwell's plea for a change of venue for her new trial on the charge of killing her father, Trigg Maxwell, with a slipper, at Wise, Va.

Opening date of the retrial, ordered by the Virginia Court of Appeals, is expected to be fixed at this time.

The judge, who will preside when Miss Maxwell's fate is weighed, was born at Rye Cove, near here, 60 years ago, the son of Cowan W. and Emily Gillenwater Carter. He was admitted to the bar in Scott County July 25, 1906. Previously he had practiced in Scott County, and studied law at William and Mary. For a time he practiced in Wise County, before forming a partnership with the late S. W. Coleman, in Gate City.

He was named to the bench of the Twenty-fourth Judicial Circuit on February 1, 1922.

His demeanor in court, according to lawyers who plead before him, is such as to bar frivolity until he considers levity in order. He enjoys reminiscences and heart to heart conversation. Throughout southwest Virginia he is noted for his keen wit and humor and his capacity for forming friendships.

Judge Carter already has agreed to delay criminal cases on the docket of the Circuit Court at Homesville next week in order to hear Miss Maxwell's plea.

He was designated to hear the case after Judge H. A. W. Skeen, of Wise, disqualified himself because of a newly discovered, though distant relationship, between himself and Trigg Maxwell's great-great grandfather.

Doubt Fair Trial in Wise.

JUDGE EZRA T. CARTER.

Judge Carter passed the only death sentence of his 14 years on the Circuit Court bench upon Thomas Cole Hart, State convict, who was electrocuted in Richmond last summer for slaying a Scott County prison guard.

The consensus among Post readers who have sent letters along with their money contributions is that Edith Maxwell, accused of the "slipper murder" of Trig Maxwell, her father, can't hope to get a fair trial in Wise County, Va.

Lula G. Downing, of the Toronto Apartments, one of those who contributed to the Maxwell defense fund yesterday, is a native of Virginia, but not of Wise County.

"It is very evident," she said, in a letter to The Post, "that this poor girl cannot get a fair trial in that county, or perhaps in that part of the State.

"I have been a sympathetic, interested party ever since the unfortunate affair. I think The Post is doing a noble work in helping the girl. I trust the new trial may be in another county, in an entirely different part of the State."

Yesterday's contributions to the defense fund were:

Rehearing Appeal Filed by Hoeppels

Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, yesterday filed a petition in the Supreme Court for a rehearing of their appeal from conviction on charges of conspiracy to sell a West Point appointment.

Meanwhile, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in Baltimore late yesterday refused to prevent the removal of Hoeppel and his son from Richmond to Washington to begin sentence of from four months to a year each.

Jacob L. Morewitz, attorney for the Hoeppels, asked the court to advance a hearing on an appeal. Federal Judge Robert N. Pollard refused a habeas corpus petition, and this decision was appealed to the court here, which asserted it found no ground for advancing the hearing on the appeal.

Women Pairs Feature Start Of Bridge Play

14 Teams Entered in First Session; 26 Boards in Competition.

The Capital's outstanding women players provided the curtain-raising event in the Washington Bridge League's sixth annual tournament, starting yesterday in the Shoreham Hotel. Fourteen pairs entered the initial session of the women's pair contest in the afternoon.

This is the first time the league has conducted a special game for women players. Twenty-six boards were played, in a Howell game, with cumulative match point scoring. Mrs. C. W. Boyce and Mrs. Marian H. Barre, The Washington Post bridge editor, made top score, with 98 match points. The runners-up were Mrs. John M. Evans and Mrs. C. F. Shafer, with 91½ points, and Mrs. D. E. Stephan and Mrs. Dora Schwartz, with 89 points, were third.

Two favorite pairs tied for fourth place, Mrs. J. H. Lemon and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, and Mrs. Eugene Nolan and Mrs. Betty Kelsey, 83½ points each. With a cumulative score, these five pairs have a substntial lead to carry over to the second and final session, to be played this afternoon.

Thirty-eight pairs of "mixed" partnerships participated in the night session, held simultaneously with the intermediate event, for less-experienced players. Mrs. M. R. West and Lewis R. Watson, jr., defending champions, have strong competition for the Capital Cup; Mrs. H. C. White, formerly of Philadelphia, paired with W. M. McIntyre, Mrs. V. A. Clarke and Roy Thurtell, Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and E. Jaffee, Mrs. Pauline Wilson and Dr. Connolly, Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin are some of the outstanding partnerships in this competition.

The boards in the afternoon session were not spectacular. There were innumerable undergame contracts. Two slam hands occurred in this session.

Madrid's Hopes Rise as Troops Repulse Rebels

Numerous Attacks Turned Back; Getafe Is Recaptured.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 12.—Insurgent artillery resumed bombardment of Madrid tonight after the government war ministry announced its troops recaptured Getafe, 8 miles south of the capital, in a surprise attack.

Getafe was occupied by only a handful of rebel troops, the War Ministry said, and easily was captured in a brief skirmish. A quantity of arms and ammunition was seized.

The insurgent shells were aimed at batteries in Madrid, but several ripped into the heart of the city.

An unestimated number of persons was injured when several shells crashed through housetops.

Decimated militia held their lines around Madrid on the seventh day of the bloody battle for possession of the capital.

The optimism of Madrid officials mounted hourly as their fighting men hurled back each successive attack by their foes seeking to enter Madrid by crossing the Manzanares River.

A foreign legion of some 1,000 anti-Fascist volunteers fought side by side with the regulars, and the government expected 1,000 Catalan reinforcements would reach the capital shortly to join the 4,000 of their comrades who marched into Madrid the day before.

The government forces increased pressure on the insurgent forces around strategic Aranjuez, southeast of the capital, in efforts to break the enemy communication lines to the front.

"Madrid will continue to be impregnable although the siege lasts seven more days, or weeks, or months," the defense junta announced.

Further measures were adopted to halt the street sniping at night between rebel sympathizers and the government militia.

All women, children, and aged or disabled persons who wish to leave Madrid will be given evacuation facilities, the Madrid defense council announced.

They would be transported to the Levante region in eastern Spain, the council said.

Confidence Restored.

By the United Press.

A demonstration flight of 56 government airplanes over Madrid yesterday fired the enthusiasm of the populace as they waged a successful defensive fight against rebel forces, the Spanish embassy reported last night.

Officials were in touch by telephone with the government in Valencia, which gave them a report of the demonstration. Valencia officials said the demonstration restored the people's faith in their air service and heightened their enthusiasm.

Christian Is Promoted To Detective Sergeant

Extortionist Admits Guilt.

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Frank Vitolo, acrobatic dancer and former vaudeville headliner, pleaded guilty in Federal court today to an indictment charging him with sending threatening letters to Harry Sinclair, Mrs. George Horace Lorimer and eight other persons in an attempt to extort money. Judge Francis G. Caffey deferred sentence until November 23.

Friday the 13th Just Another Day To Residents at 1313 Thirteenth

Emil Jettman (left) doesn't mind working under a ladder. At the right, Mrs. E. M. Brown, George A. Klum and Mrs. Kaye Johnson don't find their address of 1313 Thirteenth street northwest at all frightening.

Proving that 13 is just another number to some people, occupants of 1313 Thirteenth street northwest were found yesterday to be making no preparations for catastrophe today, which happens to be Friday the 13th.

"That's our favorite number."

Thus did they all compliment the figure which is so despised by most mortals, particularly actors and sailors. The unique address is claimed by Mrs. E. M. Brown, her fireman son, W. L. Brown; Kay Johnson, George A. Klum, Emil Jettmar and Nicholas Carosi.

Mrs. Brown has a rooming house. Jettmar and Carosi are partners in the Washington Ornamental Co., whose official address is "rear, 1313 Thirteenth street."

"It's a fine number," said Carosi, without looking up from the plaster cast novelties to which he was administering finishing touches.

"Best thing about it is that everyone remembers the number. Good advertising, see? Me superstitious? No! I'd like to have the phone number changed to Potomac 1313."

Jettmar was just as disdainful of the 13 superstition.

"A number is a number," he scoffed. "Only difference is some are bigger or smaller than others. We've been here since 1922 and nothing out of the way has happened yet."

Mrs. Brown said it's her lucky number and her son, who is attached to No. 28 Engine Company, "doesn't mind it." Miss Johnson admits she doesn't relish a black cat's crossing her path but poohpoohed the 13 jinx. Klum said he has no superstitions of any kind.

Just the same, many a Washingtonian will be careful today not to tempt fate by breaking a mirror, spilling salt and all that sort of thing.

Dr. E. H. Pruden Named Pastor Of Church Here

Former Petersburg Cleric Will Come to First Baptist Dec. 1.

The Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, D. D., has been chosen as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Washington. This action was taken unanimously at a meeting of the church last night in approving the report of the pastoral committee, presented by John Ruthven, chairman.

Dr. Pruden is expected to enter upon his ministry here December 1. He will fill the vacancy created last May by the resignation of Dr. Rufus V. Weaver to become executive secretary of the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches.

Dr. Pruden, a native of Chase City, Va., was graduated from the University of Richmond in 1925 and from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., continuing his study of theology at the University of Edinburgh.

Returning from Scotland, he performed special research work at Yale.

In 1930 he became pastor of the historic First Baptist Church, Petersburg, Va. In 1934 the University of Richmond conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity, the youngest alumnus ever to receive the degree from the institution.

In August, 1935, Dr. Pruden resigned his pastorate in Petersburg, and with Mrs. Pruden went to teach for a year in the University of Shanghai, China. During this time they served as fraternal messengers from the Baptist women of Virginia to the Chinese Christians, who last year celebrated the centennial of Baptist missions in China.

Dr. Pruden was guest preacher at the Union Church, Shanghai, and also conference preacher for the meeting of Southern Baptist missionaries in Shanghai last May.

When Dr. Pruden resigned his pastorate in Petersburg he was the Virginia representative on the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, a lesson writer for the Sunday School board, chairman of the social service committee of the Virginia State Baptist Association, and a contributor to a number of religious periodicals. His wife, who was Miss Mae Talmage, of Petersburg, is a graduate in piano of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. While in China she taught music at the University of Shanghai.

College Park, Md., Nov. 12 (AP).—Graduate courses in the University of Maryland Summer School will be provided next summer for county agents and home demonstrations agents who want to keep up with developments in their work, Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the extension service, announced today.

Four courses will be offerd the first summer, Dr. Symons said. They are "principles of teaching and adult education"; extension methods"; extension organization, programs, and projects"; and "extension administration and supervision."

Investor Trust Publicity Data Plan Is Favored

McGrath, However, Opposes Regulation on Buying at SEC Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Raymond D. McGrath, secretary of General American Investors Co., Inc., of New York, told the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday any regulation of investment trusts should be confined to forms of accounting and public reports which would insure full publicity.

McGrath, under questioning by James Austin, of the commission staff, was emphatic in opposing any regulation that would extend to such matters as maximum amount to be invested in any one company or industry, or outlining types of securities to be bought.

"Such regulation might lead to a false sense of security on the part of investors which might well prove embarrassing to the Government in troublesome times," he said at a commission hearing in connection with its study of investment trusts.

McGrath said the public reports should show make-up of the portfolio, deposits or losses realized from different sources, all transactions between directors, officers and sponsors of the trust if any, and such other details as would enable an investor to appraise the real value of his securities.

All profits and losses from underwriting should be shown separately, he contended.

The witness said he was opposed to segregation of investment trusts from investment banks at this time.

Prize List Named For Apple Festival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 12.—Prizes for the floats in "Realm of King Apple," mile-long feature parade of the apple fair, staged here the past three days by West Virginia Horticulture Society, and sweepstakes prizes in the apple exhibit entries were announced today by Carroll R. Miller, show director.

Laidy Motor Co., of Martinsburg, received $50 for the best float. The Winchester (Va.) apple blossom festival committee entry and the Rotary Club float of this city were awarded second and third prizes.

James E. McDonald, of Arden, won the sweepstakes prize of $25 for scoring the greatest number of points in exhibits.

McDonald amassed 56 points, while Paul Lingamfelter, of Hedgesville, and John Y. McDonald, of Charles Town, tied for the runner-up position, with 24 points each.

Seat Next Ethiopian Offends Italian Count

Jerusalem, Nov. 12 (AP).—Count Quinto Mazzolini, Italian consul general, stalked from the first session of the Royal British Palestine Commission on Holy Land disorders because he was seated next to an empty chair reserved for the Ethiopian delegate.

The Ethiopian, consul general Wolbe Gabriel, did not attend, but Mazzolini issued a statement that he considered the seating arrangement "a serious breach of respect which is intolerable."

Eastman Urges Federal Bureau To Aid Traffic

Co-ordination of All Types of Carrier Regulation Is Proposed.

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Joseph B. Eastman sai dtonight that many of the Nation's traffic problems could be solved by co-ordinating all types of carrier regulation under a Federal department of transportation.

The Interstate Commerce commissioner spoke before the Academy of Political Science on "Transportation Problems and Suggestions Toward a Constructive Solution."

"A good start in rounding out the system of public regulation was made in the motor carrier act, 1935," he said, "and I hope that the same thing can be done for the water carriers and the air carriers.

"The Government must see to it that competition does not take on unfair and destructive forms, and that the operations of the various types of carriers are combined and co-ordinated where that will serve the public interest best."

Cites British Bureau.

Drawing on the experience of the British ministry of transport, Eastman said:

"The establishment of such a department of transportation here is worthy of consideration. My own inclination is to prefer a nonpolitical, independent agency, associated with the (Interstate Commerce) commission."

Functions of such a commission, he explained, would be to keep in close touch with the transportation situation, watch developments, study the larger problems, foresee dangers which are impending, promote the cause of co-ordination, and advise both the President and the Congress in regard to transportation policies.

Government regulation, he asserted, "should be held to the minimum which the public interest requires."

Without some regulation, however, he said it was not impossible "That the time may come, as it has come in other countries, when the system of private ownership and management will break down for reasons beyond control."

Favors U. S. Operation.

Eastman said that in the light of his three years as Federal co-ordinator of transportation he did not doubt "the practicability of running the railroads as a Government enterprise," but added that because of the "staggering difficulties" in taking over the properties, "I am not now urging it."

Samuel T. Bledsoe, president of the Atchison, Topeko & Santa Fe Railway Co., told the academy unification of some, and perhaps many, terminals offered opportunity for bettering the railroads' condition.

Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central, pointed to developments in speed and passenger comforts which he said had come "out of the depth of the depression."

Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, viewed the railroads' future as gloomy. "Underlying tendencies in economic and political conditions," he said, probably would "materially increase railroad transportation costs and depress the purchasing power and employment of workers in all other industries, or they will cripple the financial position of the railroads during the next five or ten years."

Sees Expropriation.

"In this process," he added, "probably beginning by 1940, private investment in the railroads will be expropriated and they will be absorbed in some form of Government ownership or operation * * *"

William James Cunningham, professor of transportation at Harvard UUnuUiversity, said the Nation was University, said the Nation was facilities."

Robert V. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, said the railroad industry asked "only that the hand of Government be not so heavily laid upon it that it may not utilize the energy, the initiative and the enthusiasm of those who devote their lives to its welfare."

Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., spoke of the "melancholy spectacle of almost one-third of the country's railway mileage in the bankruptcy courts or going through forms of reorganization." He added he had no intention of giving the "impression that the great, strong systems of the American railroad world are in a bad way," but rather that the industry "as a whole is in the slough."

Schiff Trophy for Safe Flying Is Won by Annapolis Squadron

Swanson Awards the Prize to VN Unit 8D-5, Commanded by Lieut. Comdr. A. C. McFall After 4,154 Hours in the Air.

Established as the Navy's safest flying unit, VN Squadron 8D5, stationed at Annapolis, yesterday was awarded the Schiff Memorial Trophy, according to announcement by Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

The squadron, commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Andrew C. McFall, U. S. N., flew 4.154 hours to win the trophy. A total of 83 other naval air squadrons were in competition for the award.

The trophy usually is presented by the President, but no date has been set for the presentation.

Lieut. McFall's squadron is maintained for indoctrination and training of midshipmen studying aeronautics at the Naval Academy and is composed of patrol and seaplane types.

The Herbert Schiff Trophy was presented to the Navy Department in 1925 by William Schiff, jr., brother of Lieut. Herbert Schiff, junior, grade, United States Naval Reserve, who was killed in line of duty at the Naval Air Station, Hampton Roads, Va.

Purpose of the award is to stimulate interest in naval flying and to reduce aviation accidents.

The trophy was won last year by Training Squadron VN2D8, United States Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

Greenbelt Tour Planned Today By President

Inspection Trip Heightens Speculation on Future Activities of RA.

President Roosevelt, flanked by Resettlement Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell and a battery of movie cameramen, will inspect the Greenbelt, Md., suburban community built by the RA, in a personal tour of the project this afternoon.

Continued speculation as to the future of RA and on the possibility that unemployed workers throughout the Nation may be shifted to similar housing projects directed political interest to the visit.

That Federal aid will be given to housing projects in a greatly increased measure has been considerd probable by observers here for some time, but the type of projects to figure largest in the appropriations still is uncertain.

The President, who stressed Federal housing aid in several of his closing campaign speeches, will visit the community for a first-hand impression today which may be of special influence in directing Federal funds to this type of project.

The Greenbelt community, one of three undertaken by Tugwell's organization under the work-relief program, is partially finished. It is to provide homes, schools, community buildings and city facilites for 1,000 families in the income groups of $1,000 to $2,000 yearly. The family heads are employes of the departments here, with most of them working in the Agriculture Department's existing experimental station nearby.

Greenbelt's estimated cost, $9,000,000, includes besides the 1,000 homes a school, a community center, a store center, electric stoves and refrigerators in the houses, basic furniture in half of them and sewers and other utilities built for a town thrice as large.

Italy Indorses Right of Vienna, Hungary to Arm

Tri-Power Note Proclaims Agreement; Otto's Hope of Throne Soars.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Nov. 12.—The right of Austria and Hungary to rearm was proclaimed tonight in an official communique issued by the foreign ministers of Italy, Austria and Hungary.

(Little entente nations—Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—have repeatedly opposed Austro-Hungarian rearmament, basing their protests on the Treaty of Versailles, which forbade the two countries to rearm.)

In hailing the entry of Austria and Hungary into the arms-bristling bivouacs of Europe, the communique declared their right to rearm was the "principal" objective of the new tri-power accord.

Italy to Balk Protests.

Italy's support of the project was envisioned by observers as likely to override any serious protests from little entente powers.

The communique also announced that Austria and Hungary will be given special privileges in the development of Ethiopia, where Italian sovereignty was formally recognized by the two nations last night.

The official statement, signaling the conclusion of the tri-partite talks, did not disclose further details of the negotiations. Informed sources, however, declared the three countries—already bound together by economic and financial pacts—had agreed on a united front regarding Bolshevism, Spanish Socialism and the League of Nations.

A foreign office spokesman said the Italo-Austro-Hungarian accord was linked with a possible bid to Germany to join in a four-power bloc.

Recognition a Factor.

Diplomatic quarters also heard that recognition of the insurgent (Fascist) government in Spain, in the event the Socialist government collapsed, was among the points of agreement reached in the new accord.

Meanwhile, Austrian monarchist sympathizers entertained soaring hopes of the early restoration of Archduke Otto to the long-vacant throne of the Hapsburgs.

They pointed out that last night's dinner at the ancient Schoenbrunn palace of the Hapsburgs, given in honor of the visiting diplomats, had a distinctly monarchist spirit.

Faded red uniforms which had been in storage since 1918 were worn by the palace servants, a number of archdukes attended, and the golden imperial dinner service gleamed on the banquet table in the historic Hall of Mirrors for the first time since the World War.

Scientist Tells How He Solved 'Perfect' Seat Pleasant Murder

Johns Hopkins Professor Details Steps at Engineer Meeting by Which Modern Criminology Brought Bomb Slayer of Brady Family to Justice.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 12.—New methods by which science is tightening the net to make "the perfect crime" impossible were related tonight before the American Institute of Chemical Engineers by Dr. R. W. Wood of Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Wood described how techniques more refined than those used by the Federal Burea of Investigation, applying the science of chemistry, metullurgy and explosives can be used to track down a criminal no matter how perfectly he has worked.

Using as an example a crime in which three members of the Brady family of Seat Pleasant, Md., were blown to bits several years ago upon opening a Christmas package left at the door, the scientist related the steps by which the criminal was apprehended and sentenced to a 10-year term for murder.

The only evidence, he declared, weer a half-dozen small bits of metal recovered after the explosion, some beind ug from what remained of the walls of the room. These fragments "were submitted to me for examination and from these it was possible to reconstruct the mechanism which fired the dynamite when the box was opened," he said, and when a drawing of the original gun mechanism was made a detective identified it as one which a garage mechanic under suspicion had been seen working on several weeks before the explosion.

A fragmetn of the tube of the gun used to fire the dynamite was then mailed to all American manufacturers of such tubes and was identified by a Cleveland company as a sample of tubing made for use in the construction of only one make of automobile, for which the garage employing the suspected mechanic serves as dealer.

Examination of the fragments also revealed that an old-fashioned copper percussion cap had been employed, he added. "The police were requested to search the suspect's home, where they found a gun answering the description obtained from study of the fragments, and a box of copper percussion caps."

A year after the trial and convicition a box of dynamite cartridges was discovered in the cellar of the garage.

Crunelle to Complete Lorado Taft Sculpture

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Leonard Crunelle, winner of a $50,000 prize for sculpture awarded by the Commission of Fine Arts in Washington, was selected today to carry on the last major work of the late Lorado Taft.

The Patriotic Foundation of Chicago announced that Crunelle, a Chicagoan and associate of Taft, had been chosen to complete the noted sculptor's group depicting George Washington standing with Robert Morris and Haymn Salomon, two patriots who helped to finance the Revolutionary War.

Ammunition Is Found On Liner at New York

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Customs officers who have been on the lookout for arms or ammunition which may be destined for Spain found 1,000 rounds of revolver ammunition hidden under boxes of nails aboard the passenger and cargo liner Caracas when it arrived today from Venezuela and Puerto Rico.

The Caracas, which does not go to Europe, starts its return journey in six days. Frank Villanueva, a Spanish ship carpenter in whose work-shop the ammunition was found, denied any knowledge of it but was turned over to Department of Justice agents.

Methodists Draft Temperance Drive

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 12 (AP).—The Methodist Episcopal board of bishops prepared today to carry a temperance education campaign to 7,000,000 men, women and children of the United States.

The campaign to educate against alcohol will be part of a "million unit fellowship" movement launched by the bishops at their meeting.

The bishops announced the campaign was necessary because of the "alarming" increase in liquor consumption.

"The improved conditions brought about by prohibition have almost disappeared," said Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, of Washington, executive secretary of the church board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, and head of the World League Against Alcohol.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, chairman of the board of temperance and senior bishop of the church, suggested a return "to good old-fashioned pledge-signing."

G.O.P. to Expand Headquarters Here

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Republican National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton tonight said he intends to open "the largest permanent headquarters in the party's history" in Washington.

Hamilton came here by plane for a conference with Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

The party's Chicago headquarters will be closed, he said. Hamilton expects to spend two or three weeks in raising money to cover the party's deficit.

"The deficit will be considerable," he said. "It will be met largely by small contributions."

Mead Proposed As FloorLeader InNewCongress

Northern Democrats Seek Larger Share in Guiding Affairs of Session.

By the Associated Press

Banking on an enlarged block of Northern Democrats to demand a hand at the helm of the new House, Representative Beiter yesterday entered his fellow New York Stater, Representative Mead, in the contest for Democratic floor leader.

In announcing this action, Beiter expressed belief that so many committee chairmanships and other strategic positions in the chamber now are held by Southerners that a majority of the members would want a Northern man for leader.

Mead's candidacy for the leadership made the gathering contest over that important post a four-cornered affair.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, one of the trio previously entered, predicted during the day the question would be hard fought.

Rankin Gets Backing.

He said he had received "encouraging response" from a number of liberal Representatives in reply to his pledge to support legislation in the interests of cheap electric power, rural electrification and lower rail rates for Southern and Western States.

The others already in the race are Representatives Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, and O'Conner (Democrat), of New York, acting floor leader in the closing weeks of the last session.

Rayburn, who directed the Democratic speakers' bureau during the Presidential campaign, has opened a mail campaign for pledges from all House members. O'Connor was expected to plunge into the fight Monday, when he returns from a vacation in Georgia.

Two Other Entries Seen.

House attaches predicted at least two other candidates—Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, and Sabath (Democrat), Illinois—would announce for the key office before Congress convenes January 3.

The floor leadership contest was expected by veteran Representatives to be the only important fight in organization of the House, since Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, was regarded as certain of re-election to the Speakership.

Representative Mead, who came to Washington years ago as a Capitol policeman, and since has been elected to ten terms in the House, was an unsuccessful candidate for Speaker two years ago.

Beiter, who managed his Speakership candidacy, said his man should win wide support because he has served two terms longer than O'Connor.

Ellis Will Take West Point Test

Harry V. Ellis, jr., of 1501 Park road northwest, has been appointed by Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding officer of the District National Guard, as the organization's representative to take the entrance examination for the United States Military Academy.

Ellis, a private in Battery C, 260th Coast Artillery, who now is attending the Millard West Point Preparatory School, stood highest, with a grade of 94.28, among the 17 local National Guardsmen who took the competitive examination for the appointment on October 17.

Ellis was graduated from Central High School in 1931, at the age of 15, and thereafter for some years was connected with the Riggs National Bank, continuing his studies at George Washington University night classes. July 1, 1935, Ellis enlisted in the Regular Army and attended the West Point Preparatory School of the Army, at Norfolk, Va. Upon completion of his course there he enlisted in the District National Guard.

Wife-Slaying Suspect Is Trapped, Kills Self

Red Bank, N. J., Nov. 12 (AP). Ralph J. Mills, sought by police for questioning in the slaying of his wife, shot and killed himself last night when police overhauled his stolen car in a highway chase.

Deputy Police Chief Harold Davison said that Mills drove off the road as he headed for Freehold, 8 miles west of Red Bank. The car turned over, Mills jumped out and, drawing a pistol, shot himself through the head, Davison said.

German Clergyman Reported Jailed in Plot Against Soviet

Russian-Born Pastor Was to Have Officiated at U. S. Consul's Wedding; Reich and Austrian Embassies Seek Charges Against Nationals.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 12 (AP).—A Russian-born German Lutheran clergyman was one of a dozen persons jailed Wednesday in an alleged anti-Soviet plot, reliable sources said tonight.

The pastor, the Rev. Mr. Streck, was to have performed a wedding for United States Vice Consul George Minor and Mildred Wright, both of Charleston, W. Va.

The pastor suddenly became "unavailable," and responsible sources said he was in jail.

The German embassy said nothing had been heard from Mr. Streck for several days. The German officials said they were powerless to act since the pastor was a native Russian, although of German parentage.

The embassy, however, redoubled its efforts to learn the charges placed against five German nationals reported to have been held incommunicado since November 5.

The German ambassador, Werner von Schulenberg, was returning from a Tiflis vacation to handle the case personally.

Likewise concerned was the Austrian embassy whose spokesmen said they had been unable to learn the names of three Austrians reported held with the Germans, a Swede and several other persons.

The American embassy tonight sought to communicate with Minor, who journeyed to Finland to meet his fiancee, who was to arrive at Helsingfors from the United States.

Mint Reports Record Peacetime Coinage

By the Associated Press.

Record peace time coinage during the first ten months of this year was reported today by the mint.

During this period, it said, 499,554,280 coins valued at $32,297,238 were issued, compared with 434,141,000 valued at $28,186,143 in the corresponding 1935 period.

Officials said indications were that the total for 1936 would be well over that for 1935, previous peace time high.

Arlington Rites For U. S. Agent Set for Today

Lawrence Delmore Served Army of Occupation as Inspection Chief.

Funeral services with full military honors will be held at 11 a. m. today in Arlington National Cemetery for Lawrence Delmore, special agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and veteran of the World War.

Mr. Delmore died Tuesday while working in his office. He was a native of Auburn, Wash., and came here in 1934 as an agent in the prohibition unit.

During the war Mr. Delmore served with the Second Division, motor transport corps, and saw active service in nearly every major conflict. In 1918 he went to Germany with the Army of Occupation and served as inspection chief. He remained in Germany until 1920.

Following his return to this country, Mr. Delmore was discharged from the Army with the rank of captain. He joined the Department of Justice and was appointed a special agent in New York. Later he was transferred to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Mr. Delmore lived at 1439 Ives place southeast. He is survived by his ward, Victor Hage, also of the Ives place address.

Catholic Daughters Plan Membership Campaign

Plans for an intensive membership campaign by District of Columbia Court, No. 212, Catholic Daughters of America, were announced yesterday in connection with an international movement—"Today's Challenge to Catholic Womanhood"—to be launched Saturday.

Endorsed by leaders of the Catholic hierarchy and clergy, the movement has received approval from Catholic leaders throughout the country.

The campaign will be conducted under the direction of Katherine M. Rosney, national secretary of the order. She will be assisted by leaders in Alaska, Canada, Cuba, Puerto Rico and the Panama Canal Zone.

Literary Digest 'Disappointed,' But May Try Poll Again in 1940

Reasons for Errors in Picking Landon Explained, but Why System Successful in 1932 Failed in 1936 Still Puzzle.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—The Literary Digest, which predicted election of Gov. Alf M. Landon, indicated tonight that it would continue to conduct polls in Presidential years.

"Will the Digest conduct another poll?" the magazine asked * * * should the Democratic Party have quit in 1924 when it reached a modern low ebb in power and confidence? . . . Should the Republican Party have quit in 1912 when it carried only two States?"

Digest Asks Answer.

In discussing the errors in its poll, the Digest said:

"* * * We were far from correct. Why? We ask that question in all sincerity, because we want to gnow * * * we've been flooded with reasons * * * the one most often hear runs something like this: 'This election was different. Party lines were obliterated. For the first time in more than a century all have-nots were on one side * * *'

We did reach this so-called have-not strata. In Chicago, for instance, we polled every third registered voter. In the City of Scranton, Pa., we polled every other registered voter, and in Allentown, Pa., likewise, we polled every registered voter. Is that so? chorus the critics. Well, they come back, you must have got the right answer in those towns, anyway? Well, we didn't. The fact is that we were as badly off there as we were on the national total.

G. O. P. Excess in Sample.

"Now for another 'explanation' dinned into our ears: 'You got too many Hoover voters in your sample.' Well, the fact is we have always got too big a sampling of Republican voters. That was true in 1920, in 1924, in 1928, and even in 1932 when we overestimated the Roosevelt popular vote by three-fourths of 1 per cent. In 1928 in Chicago we underestimated the Democratic vote by a little more than 5 per cent, overestimated the Republican vote by the same margin.

"* * * However, since the basis of the 1936 mailing list was the 1932 mailing list, and since the overwhelming majority of those who responded to our poll in 1932 voted for Mr. Roosevelt, it seems altogether reasonable to assume that the majority of our ballots this year went to people who had voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. There simply was no way by which the Digest could assure itself or the public that the marked ballots would come back in the same proportion.

"* * * So we were wrong, although we did everything we knew to assure ourselves of being right. We conducted our poll as we had always done, reported what we found and have no alibis. We drew no special satisfaction from our figures, and we drew no conclusions from them. The result was disappointing only in the sense that it threw our figures out the window and left us without even the satisfaction of knowing why."

Carmody Hills Halfpaps No Relation to Suspects

Two brothers—Arthur and Warren Halfpap—arrested by Department of Justice agents in connection with the alleged election-night kidnaping of a Capitol Heights lumber company bookkeeper, are in no way connected with the family of Henry H. and Margaret A. Halfpap, of Carmody Hills, Md.

Embarrassed by publicity given to the arrests, Mrs. Henry Halfpap has asked The Post to correct erroneous impressions that the suspected pair are members of her family. The two suspects live in Seat Pleasant, Md., and are members of an entirely different family, Mrs. Halfpap said.

Counsel Clash Over N. Y. Law Insuring Jobs

Supreme Court Decision Affecting 14 States Possible Dec. 7.

By the Associated Press.

Clashing views on the constitutionality of the New York unemployment insurance act were presented to the Supreme Court yesterday as arguments were closed and the case went to conference for decision.

Defending the legislation which taxes employers to aid those out of work, Henry Epstein, New York solicitor general, contended it was a function of the State to prescribe for social ills.

Continuing an assault begun yesterday, Frederick H. Wood, New York attorney, asserted unemployment was not the fault of the employers but grew out of a variety of national and world conditions that affect supply and demand.

Another opposing lawyer, James McCormick Mitchell, of Buffalo, argued the legislation would increase unemployment because employers would tend to reduce their force to keep from paying taxes into the jobless fund.

A decision on validity of the act, which embodies New Deal principles and is supplementary to the Federal social security law, is possible on December 7. The ruling, Epstein said, will affect unemployment insurance acts in 14 other States.

Under the legislation, a tax is assessed on the pay rolls of employers of four or more persons. The rate is 1 per cent for the first year 2 per cent the second, and 3 per cent thereafter. The money is placed in a pool.

Speaking slowly and with emphasis, Epstein defended the law against a challenge by the Associated Industries of New York, Inc., and by two Syracuse firms, E. C. Stearns & Co., and W. H. H. Chamberlin, Inc.

Cure Stressed.

"The science of government is to the ills of society what the science of medicine is to the ills of the body," he said.

"States are the scientific laboratories out of which must come the prescriptions which will cure, prevent or palliate industrial evils.

"Unemployment is one of the evils resulting from a maladjustment of forces at work in our economic system. Unemployment insurance has been devised by New York State to aid in meeting this problem."

Replying to contentions of his opponents that the act would not reduce unemployment, Epstein argued the system would "maintain consistency of purchasing power within a community by building up resources in periods of employment to offset the loss of wages in periods of depression."

"The unemployment benefits," he added, "supplement the worker's income at the time most necessary, when his usual earnings are cut off. Thus the tempo of depression is not quickened as various portions of the population withdraw from the consumer market and thereby lessen the demand for goods produced by others who are still employed."

Disputing this, Mitchell said "the more unemployment an employer has in his own business the less he is required to contribute to the unemployment insurance fund."

"Conversely," he added, "the less unemployment he has in his own business, or the higher the wages he pays, the more he is required to contribute to the unemployment insurance fund."

Liberty League Won't Disband, Shouse States

Activities to Be Resumed at Next Session of Congress, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, said today leaders of the league had no intention of disbanding or restricting their activities.

Shouse said the opening of the next Congress would find the league as active as it was at the last session.

"It is true," he said, "that we have reduced our staff in Washington, but the reduction was made because there was no need for a large staff when Congress was not in session. We started cutting the staff during the summer."

Shouse was here to attend a monthly meeting of the Liberty League board—the first meeting since the election.

The league, as an organization, took no active part in the campaign, but many of its leaders gave their individual support to Gov. Alf M. Landon. Among these were Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, former Democratic candidates for President, and members of the Du Pont family.

It was at a Liberty League dinner in Washington last spring that Smith first indicated he might "take a walk."

One of the first acts planned by the league in its resumption of activity, it is understood, will be the issuance of opinions by the organization's lawyers' committee as to the constitutionality of several New Deal laws.

The committe is said to have ready at this time three opinions similar to the one issued a year ago holding that the Wagner labor relations act was unconstitutional. These opinions have been completed some time, but were held up because of the political campaign. They are expected to be released some time this month by Raoul E. Desvernine, chairman of the committee.

INTRODUCING

The only whiskey of its kind in the world

One of the world's great distillers presents to a discriminating American public a whiskey especially created for modern living—especially recommended for civilized drinking—truly the only whiskey of its kind in the world

WILLIAM JAMESON Irish American Whiskey is a mild, smooth, completely individual and distinctive whiskey with a character and personality all its own, and a flavor that can only be described as "Irish American."

It is the result of the experience and resources of the 184 year old house of William Jameson and is produced in association with America's foremost distilling organization, National Distillers. Into its composition have gone the choicest of William Jameson's rare pot-still whiskey and a fine specially distilled Kentucky whiskey by National Distillers.

What known whiskey does it taste like? It has not the exact taste of any known whiskey. It will appeal to men who like American Rye and Bourbon, and it is our belief that it will be popular with Scotch and Irish whiskey drinkers. It is a true whiskey with the virtues of all whiskey flavors.

Important people in the distilling industry and the retailing field agree with us about William Jameson Irish American Whiskey. Several thousand typical consumers have tried it and confirmed our fondest hopes about it. Of course, we realize that tastes differ and that some may not prefer this whiskey. But we believe that a large number of the American people will confirm the judgment of those who have already tried it and agree that William Jameson Irish American Whiskey is a mild, smooth, wholesome whiskey ideally suited to the tempo of present-day living. We are proud to offer this truly exceptional product, not to be found elsewhere in any class or at any price—truly the only whiskey of its kind in the world—a whiskey for civilized drinking.

Some of America's leading bartenders have tried Irish American in Manhattans and Old-Fashioneds and are as lavish in their praise of the mixing qualities of this whiskey as they are of its merit straight, and with soda.

No Need To Cross This Bridge.

Secretary Wallace has injected a commendable note of common sense into the discussions on reviving Federal control over agricultural production. Before setting up new regulatory mechanisms, he says in effect, the country should wait and see if they are needed. His attitude is far more realistic than that of farm leaders who incline to look back to the first AAA with nostalgic yearnings having little relation to present conditions.

The original plow-under program was adopted at a time when enormous surpluses had been piled up and prices were disastrously low. The present outlook for agriculture is diametrically opposite. For the most part surpluses have been used up. Prices have been greatly increased. Just now the fear of another drought—remote though it may appear under the law of averages—is probably more keen than any apprehension over surpluses.

It is evident, moreover, that the country is experiencing a pronounced upswing in the economic cycle. Larger demands for agricultural as well as industrial products may be anticipated. Foreign trade is also expanding. Certainly if the farmer is interested in regaining his foreign markets this is no time to clamp drastic control measures upon major crops. Considering only its economic implications, resort to the AAA policy of "adjustment" under present conditions would be a potentially disastrous move toward restriction of our agricultural output to domestic needs.

Farmers might profitably consider, also, the relative effectiveness of the drought and the AAA in raising prices and eliminating surpluses. The Administration's program seems to have worked well largely because it coincided with nature's own curtailment measures. AAA officials readily admit that unfavorable growing weather has been the chief factor in the advance of agricultural prices. In normal years we could expect very different consequences from the policy of subsidizing farmers not to produce staple commodities.

It is interesting to note how quickly attention shifted from the much-publicized objective of conserving the soil when hope of direct production control was revived. That tendency confirms the widespread belief that the present act is chiefly an excuse for continuing benefit payments to farmers. Nevertheless pursuit of this expedient policy for another year seems preferable to restoration of direct crop control at such an inopportune time.

Petty Tactics.

The United Mine Workers have attempted to turn the tables on President Green of the A. F. of L. by summoning him to answer charges that he has engaged in activities "injurious and detrimental" to the organization.

Such a frontal attack, instigated by John L. Lewis, head of the mine workers, effectually destroys the last lingering hope that Messrs. Green and Lewis would sink personal enmities and subordinate personal ambitions for the sake of preserving a united labor front. This last-minute gesture of ill will, indeed, is a deliberate affront to the federation head which shows that Mr. Lewis and his associates are bent on widening the breach in the ranks of organized labor instead of making any concessions to avoid expulsion from the A. F. of L.

The tone of the communication addressed to Mr. Green is probably no more provocative than the summons which the executive council of the A. F. of L. sent to the rebel C. I. O. unions. But the mistaken strategy followed by the council in dealing with the large industrial unions does not justify resort to insulting forms of retaliation which block the road to compromise of differences. It is particularly short-sighted to single out President Green for attack when he has shown so clearly that he regrets the defection of the C. I. O. unions and would like to find a way to restore peace between the two factions.

Far-seeing union leaders who place solidarity of the labor movement above selfish considerations will deplore the dominant role played by personal jealousies and antagonisms in deciding the outcome of the present conflict. If these individual rivalries were suppressed or ignored, compromise proposals could undoubtedly be framed which would permit craft and industrial unions to function and expand within the federation much more effectively than under a dual leadership.

Blame for the present impasse rests in varying degrees upon the shoulders of all those officials who have failed to realize that principles are much more important than men.

Mr. Justice Brandeis.

It seems almost impossible that Mr. Justice Brandeis is today celebrating his eightieth birthday. The perennial youth of this great jurist, who has always sought to make law the handmaiden of statesmanship; his present activities on the Supreme Court; the vitality of his ideas and their influence on the course of American history—all deny the four-score years now credited. And not the least of the tributes on this anniversary is owing for his success in keeping a youthful outlook and undiminished intellectual vigor under the weight of advancing years.

"If youth but knew, if age were able," runs an old French saying. The life of Mr. Justice Brandeis refutes the pathos which lurks in the habitual truth of this lament. In youth, far more than most, he knew. As far back as his student days in Dresden it is said he learned that real ideas come through reflection—surely a long step on the road to knowledge. And among those of his age few have been as successful as Brandeis in opening the channels for contemporary thought. He has not merely achieved the distinction of being regarded as a prophet in his own lifetime. He is also a prophet honored in his own country.

When President Wilson named Louis D. Brandeis as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, now nearly 21 years ago, conservative circles were deeply startled. To them this crusading lawyer, with his long record of successful argument in railroad, public utility and labor cases, appeared a dangerous radical.

Today Mr. Brandeis is probably just as "radical" as when President Wilson referred to his "impartial, impersonal, orderly and constructive mind." But the national conception of radicalism has changed for the better, so that now the Justice stands out as one who is in some respects more accurately classified as a conservative. Of course, in any period of rapid evolution, every intelligent radical will reach a point where the importance of conserving what is wise will outweigh the importance of altering what is undesirable.

As explained by Mr. Boeckel in his article on the page opposite, it is the "curse of bigness," and its effect on the natural simplicity of American institutions and the natural self-reliance of the American people, which has of late years most exercised the mind of Mr. Brandeis. But the justice, who is no Socialist, is evidently far from certain that the bigness of bureaucracy is any more desirable than the bigness of modern corporate enterprise. When he joined with the other members of the Court in declaring NRA unconstitutional, and again when he failed to join Justice Cardozo's dissent in the "Hot Oil" case, he seemed to voice misgivings of the leviathan of modern government as keen as those directed earlier against the leviathan of centralized business. Even where his emotions are concerned Mr. Brandeis has always been logical.

Yet much of the Brandeis influence has been due to the strength of his emotions. He has never possessed that supreme intellectual detachment on social issues which characterized Mr. Justice Holmes and is largely shared by Mr. Justice Cardozo. The liberalism of Mr. Justice Brandeis was indeed foreordained by the bent of his personality, and therefore differs somewhat from the liberalism which is based on pure reason.

But the undoubted emotionalism of Mr. Brandeis would be misunderstood unless visualized as an aspect of his profound and abiding faith in democracy. "Democracy," as he has written, "is more difficult to maintain than to achieve." It is "an experiment noble in motive," with exacting conditions for its continued success.

In his efforts to bring home to his countrymen the constant effort necessary to preserve democracy, often endangered from diametrically opposite quarters, Mr. Justice Brandeis has been a great educational force. Standing in no camp, and bound by no dogma, his heroic individualistic efforts have done much to preserve the high ideal of liberty safeguarded by law.

O'Neill's Recognition.

Virtually the entire country will insist on sharing with Eugene O'Neill his pride in receiving the 1936 Nobel prize for letters. The competition for the honor is so all-inclusive that the winner becomes a sort of Olympic victor, carrying his nation's colors with him as he steps up to accept the laurel.

Perhaps the Nobel award will silence those few critics who have persisted in belittling O'Neill for his outspoken realism or for his bland disregard for the traditional unities. Certainly this should be the effect of yesterday's announcement from Stockholm. There is no higher court to pass contemporary judgment on belles lettres than the Nobel Committee. Through its decision, O'Neill's writing, with all its innovations, receives art's hallmark. Thus his craftsmanship is certified; whether his creations will stand the test of time will depend in part on the course of public taste.

Comparison of O'Neill with Sinclair Lewis, the only other American author to win a Nobel prize, reveals a curious disparity. While Lewis is best known by his direct style and fast-moving action, the characteristic of O'Neill is his cautious preparation for a climax of which the significance is often deliberately obscured. So, too, the two prize winners are at odds from standpoint of background, temperament and philosophy. Nevertheless, O'Neill has concentrated on the American scene with much the same profound sociological interest that has been the forte of Lewis.

In this may be found another reason why the whole country will approve O'Neill's success. Not only the artist but the model as well are customarily congratulated on the award of a jury's prize.

The Epic Of Madrid.

Even to those convinced of the importance of a neutral attitude in the Spanish civil war, the struggle going on for possession of Madrid is one to stir all red-blooded emotions. No element of drama—and tragedy—is lacking to make the spectacle complete.

Almost a week ago, the rebel forces under Gen. Franco swept before them what then appeared to be the last crumbling obstacles in the way of their greatest and, potentially, their most decisive triumph. The outlying suburbs of the capital were quickly and easily taken. Soon the Fascists reached the Manzanares River, which skirts Madrid to the south. Before them they could see the gleaming spires and towers of the city which, with reason, has been called the heart of Spain.

The government forces had numbers on their sides and were clearly not lacking in courage. But numbers had proved, in this war, a poor second to superior equipment, organization and discipline. As for courage, the four months of fighting had proved that it was a monopoly of neither side.

There was no reason to expect, therefore, that the loyalists would be able to do more than delay the inevitable. Confidently, the rebels declared that it was only a matter of hours, at most of a few days, before Gen. Franco would be established in that magnificent palace overlooking the river. It was from this building that Alfonso XIII fled into exile one night five and a half years ago. In turn, it had been deserted by President Manuel Azana. His departure, followed by the departure of Premier Caballero and most of his cabinet to Valencia, was in itself a confession of weakness and an anticipation of surrender.

So confident were the rebels of their speedy victory that a skeleton organization to take over the administration of the city was already in existence. Instructions to the civil population of the capital had been drawn up. But then something went awry. What, it is still impossible to determine. But it is a significant fact that what may prove to be the turn in the tide of the rebel fortunes occurred when there hurled themselves into the struggle a new foreign legion—one giving support not to Gen. Franco as had the original Spanish Foreign Legion, but to the loyalists.

This legion of volunteers, consisting of a great variety of nationalities, has put up such stubborn resistance at crucial points that Gen. Franco has been forced to change his strategy. And in that breathing spell the morale of Madrid has clearly revived. The slaughter of women and children by rebel planes and heavy artillery no longer has the demoralizing effect intended. And to add to the renewed hopes there are new contingents of well-armed troops from Catalonia.

It is now the loyalists who are taking the offensive. At the fifty-ninth minute of the eleventh hour Madrid may yet be saved. And if so, there is strong probability that the rebellion will collapse.

Who Isn't Who?

Recently it was Mrs. Simpson whose ancestry was traced back to the purple; now—though for no clearly apparent reason—it is President Roosevelt's descent that is dug out.

Some one with that queer blend of snobbishness and servility that encourages genealogy has uncovered a connection through Mr. Roosevelt's maternal line which is said to relate him to William the Conqueror, Alfred the Great, the King of the Merovingians and what have you. It is even possible that a relationship can be established between the present Chief Executive of the United States and the Actii family which dominated Rome some six centuries before Christ. But perhaps it was merely the obvious analogy which suggested this last tie.

However, even if the President is directly descended from the Actii family, what of it? Or rather, who isn't?

Suppose the most illustrious of the Actii had three children who reached maturity, which is an almost certain underestimate. And suppose that each of those three had three offspring and so on. Counting three generations every 100 years, the total of persons with the blood of the Actii in their veins after 700 years (we refuse to multiply further) was 1,162,261,467. In short, nearly every one of western European descent could then have pointed to a little Actius in his home. And even more so it is now, whether in the White House or in the WPA.

Not proof of royal blood but proof of absence of it would constitute the only possible claim to real distinction today.

You can now fly around the world in two weeks, it is announced by an aviation official. O. K., but a merry-go-round trip is cheaper, safer, quicker and the destination is the same.

Things grow more complex all the time. A Massachusetts court rules that a woman on roller skates is a vehicle, and in Indiana a man is going to law to find out if a trailer is an automotive accessory or a house.

Politicians And Citizens.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Heterogeneous elements rallied to the support of Gov. Landon. Followers of Father Coughlin lined up with those of Herbert Hoover. For two years William Hearst sang the praises of Landon and Knox, while Al Smith and the Liberty Leaguers condemned all of Roosevelt's policies. On the Sunday night preceding the election, former Senator James Reed called for the repudiation of Roosevelt because he had lifted his mask at Madison Square Garden and disclosed that he was a Communist; and two hours later old Dr. Townsend told his radio audience that Roosevelt was the enemy of the aged and needy and the friend of Banker Morgan.

But these were politicians talking. I suppose that "A Republican Protestant" and "American" are plain citizens like myself, who occasionally like to express themselves. Now just why should the one seem to fear our President and the other appear to hate him!

The first has, in the past ten years, increased his annual income threefold; from $1,500 to nearly $5,000. I assume that a good part of this increase occurred during the last four years as incomes in general decreased in the prior four-year period. Why is not this gentleman grateful to the President for pursuing the course he did and saving the country, so that deserving citizens, by thrift and "rugged individualism" can continue to progress? In a Fascist country or in conservative Britain, his individual cost of government would be far more than in democratic America. And in a Communist country he would not be allowed to earn even that much.

"American" thinks it a gross insult to the Republic because The Post and the populace gave a great spontaneous welcome to a great President's return. This reception broke a precedent, but so did the 10,000,000 plurality. We should return to a simpler government, but with 48 States and 125,000,000 souls, government has grown complex.

Without being explicit this countryman wants our liberties back. I don't know either which ones are exactly lost; certainly not free speech. But I suggest that "American" take the liberty to go and look for them. As a tip, search thoroughly the Green Mountain section of Vermont. If not there, the lost liberties must be hovering in the coast of dear old Maine.

The Farmer-Labor Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may be worth while to analyze the Literary Digest's pre-election Presidential poll. This poll has been proved to be scientifically accurate in previous years. It was equally accurate this time in recording the choice of the class which it reached, mostly business and professional men; and, but for one factor, the recent election would have resulted in exact accordance with the Digest's poll.

In previous elections the vote not reached by the Digest registered so nearly in the same way that the actual result was accurately predicted. But in this election, for the first time in our history, the vote was no longer homogeneous, but was, unfortunately, marshalled by the Administration into the cleavage of class antagonism. The labor vote and the agricultural vote when combined are sufficient to carry any national election. They were so combined this year by adroit manipulation from Washington.

As Gov. Smith said, "You can't beat Santa Claus." Billions of dollars went to farmers in the shape of unearned subsidies, and the reaction was registered by a Kansas farmer who said: "Roosevelt saved my farm. Who do you suppose I'm going to vote for?" This, multiplied millions of times, was one factor in the election.

The other factor was the extremely favorable attitude of the Administration toward organized labor throughout the past four years combined with an equally antagonistic attitude toward capital and the employers of labor, as indicated by the frequent use of such epithets as "economic royalists," and "predatory wealth;" added to which was the burden upon capital of such economic monstrosities as the NRA, the AAA and the social security act.

The result of the election is thus clearly explained. We have entered into a new era.

The Prospects For A Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of Nov. 11, I was very much interested to read a communication by a party who signs himself "Pennsylvania Reader," pertaining to the intelligence, or rather, lack of intelligence, of the average voter.

It is the type of article that could only be written and thought of by a person who would always be found in the forefront of any movement to fasten the tentacles of fascism, communism, or any other "ism" on this country, or any other democracy.

It is my contention that as long as the American electorate can be depended upon to give such a stinging rebuke to such demagogues, pedagogues and advocates of communism and fascism masquerading in the guise of churchmen and "all-powerful" newspaper publishers, as was evidenced in the negligible vote cast for the Union Party, they can be classed as taking seriously the privilege of the franchise and of thinking maturely as to who shall represent them.

There need be no fear as to the future of this great country while the average person exercises his franchise as wisely and thoughtfully as he did in the late Presidential election—Americans will make America greater and more glorious than ever—no matter if Roosevelt is in the White House or Caspar Milquetoast.

ATHAN J. ROSENBERG.
Washington, Nov. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "It is not enough to have ideals, we must translate them into action." What words could better describe the temperament and character of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

In Europe we have seen during the past few years the rise of political oligarchies, the establishment of dictatorships and above all the confiscation of democratic ideals. In the German republic we have seen the Weimar constitution turned into nothing but a "scrap of paper." We have also seen the rights of free speech, press and peaceful assemblage dissolved by autocratic cliques in an effort to curb the expression of the people.

These things have not taken place in this country, and in my estimation never will, regardless of the unconstitutionality of certain legislation. The doctrine of judicial review is just as much a force in our Government today as during any time in history. If Mr. Roosevelt had ever wanted to assume authoritative rule it would have been in the dark days of 1933 when any wish or desire was at his command. For these reasons and many more I believe in his cause.

We are acquainted with him and we know his work. We have seen him make mistakes and we have seen him correct his errors. We have witnessed the results of his policies and we know the purpose behind his proposed legislation. We know that his principles, his ideals and above all else his heart are not shallow, and we know that he is doing all in his power to make this country a better place for Americans, a better place for foreigners, for all races, creeds, and colors, and a better place for humanity.

Armistice Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The eighteenth anniversary of the Armistice ending the World War finds America at peace and enjoying a measure of prosperity now denied to many nations. Europe, on the one hand, Asia on the other, are veering perilously close to the abyss of another war. Spain is rent by civil strife that may ignite the rest of Europe. The struggle between the forces of democracy and repression is bound to have world-wide repercussions, and sooner or later we shall become embroiled again in a titanic catastrophe unless we shape our destiny as a Nation along the path of peace.

It is well, therefore, that we pause for a few moments to give thanks for the blessings with which divine providence has generously vouchsafed us. It is also fitting that we who remember the years of anguish and bitterness from 1914 to 1918 consecrate this day to peace and good will. It is altogether proper that America and all nations of the western world take part in a conference to promote international peace and prosperity.

In Arlington National Cemetery there sleeps a nameless soldier amid the illustrious dead. We pay homage to this American soldier; he is a perpetual symbol of devotion to a grand and attainable ideal!

Let us, the living, never lose sight of that ideal. GUY d'AULBY.

The Spanish Line-Up.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of November 7, "Modern Hessians," you regret the presence of Moorish troops and foreign legionaries in the ranks of the insurgent army in Spain.

Both the press and the radio try to give the impression that there are very few real Spaniards in the "rebel" army. In 10,000 newspaper columns the Spanish struggle is represented as one between fascism and democracy. In spite of its being a "major tragedy," as you call it, that Moors are taking part in a strife you say is not theirs, there are those of us who believe that under the leadership of Gen. Franco are fighting all those who love Spain, monarchists and republicans, Carlists, socialists and liberals, Catholics and Agnostics—all true Spaniards who want Spain to remain Spain and not a province of Asiatic and atheistic Russia.

There is very much in common between a Spaniard and a Moor. Both have enriched Spain with a great culture. But there is nothing between men of chivalry and scum. Spanish communism has contributed nothing but bestial destruction to the glories of Spain. The Spaniard and the Moor believe in God, and between such there is a natural alliance against the degenerate atheists of Moscow and Madrid.

"A Spiritual Light."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of November 11 "Another American" complains that The Post's reference to President Roosevelt as "not so much a person as a spiritual light" is a "maudlin" use of the word spiritual. That the word should not be used in connection with government, economic security, etc.

I think this American has missed the point. In a material world material things are the pawns with which we play, with which we show our development, or the lack of it. President Roosevelt, in defying the wholesale selfishness connected with the depression, said "I enlist for the duration of the war." He is crusading against fear. His fortitude in the face of personal difficulties is an object lesson. His courage is contagious. Unlike so many devout Christians, he is so sure that "God's in His Heaven" that he dares to laugh, and laugh freely. Because of his tremendous example The Post's term "a spiritual light" was so well chosen that I clipped and saved it. CLARA LOUISE JOHN.

Letter To Horace

BECAUSE, Quintus Horatius, you have for many years heightened my energies and charmed my leisure hours, may I add one letter more to those which are greeting you upon your 2,000th birthday? This letter comes to you from a land which lies far beyond your Happy Islands in the unimagined West, from a land which was undiscovered until 1,500 years after the mortal part of you had left the earth.

In spite of intervening millennia and seas, my country has the same wants as the Italy you loved. We Americans, too, have fought in a great war which has crumbled our ideals and shattered our fortunes. We need you to redefine for us the good and to inspire us to steadfastness in its pursuit. In order to vivify our energies and enrich our leisure, we should learn from you how to combine the earnestness of the Stoics with an Epicurean faculty for enjoyment.

Above all, we Americans need your counsel of moderation. Whether because of our abrupt climate and its effect on our temperaments, or because of the wealth which nature has lavished on our continent and for which, not heeding your sensible "gold undiscovered and so better lodged," we have stretched out greedy hands; we tend, as a people, to excesses. It would be well for us to write upon our hearts your phrase, "the golden mean."

Worthy of being cherished, too, are "Remember still to keep mind calm in hardship," and "If luckless now, your lot will change tomorrow". These utterances of yours might well be the reaction of a gallant soul to the depression from which the world is suffering now. They have heartened me in more than one black hour.

In the Great War, Quintus Horatius, many a man on either side of the struggle went to his death with these words of yours on his lips: "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

Though you honor the hero, you hate war, or at any rate the kind of war in which you yourself fought, civil war. You did well to throw away your shield after Philippi. But we have not yet learned the lesson, implicit in the history of Greece and Rome, that war, or at least fratricidal war, such as that between Athens and Sparta, or such as the terrible struggle in which you took part and which you later so earnestly deplored, destroys not only life but also that which gives life value.

We are building battleships more powerful and swift than any which your Roman engineers could in their most fantastic dreams have imagined. With diabolical efficiency we are using the achievements of science for destructive ends. More pertinent now than when you launched it is your attack on human enterprise:

Bold to endure whatever comes, mankind
Rushes in disobedience; through ways of sin.
Daedalus tried
The unsubstantial air on wings not given man.
The toil of Hercules broke through the gates of hell.
No path is steep
For Mortals. Heaven itself is folly we assail,
Our guilt forbidding Jupiter to lay aside

Since you enjoy laughing at yourself, you'll not mind my confessing that I can never read without a smile any of your allusions to your escape from the falling tree. It is because you are a bachelor and have few cares that this event seems so important. You'll not mind my smiling, for you chuckled when you wrote the detailed account of that lower world which you barely escaped entering. All the same, I am glad you were careful not to tell what tree it was that nearly murdered you. I love trees, as you do, but I should have grown to hate that tree and all its family.

Though you have not paid my sex the compliment of taking to yourself a wife, you withhold from women neither your admiration nor your sympathy. To the heroic qualities of Cleopatra you give ardent praise, even while you are celebrating her defeat at the hands of Octavian. But your unqualified approval is reserved for the wholesome women of rural Italy, such as the sunburnt Apulian who milks the cows on her husband's farm, or the stern Sabine matron at whose bidding her manly sons gather up faggots when sunset ushers in the welcome hour of rest. It was to cheer a country lass that you wrote these verses:

Touching the altar if the hand
Is pure,
No costly victim is more bland
To charm away the hearth-gods' ire
Than holy meal
And salt that crackles in the fire.

• • • •

I wish, Quintus Horatius, that throughout the year the whole world might celebrate your anniversary in the way which you yourself would choose. Even more than as a lord of language, I wish we might honor you as a sagacious and inspired poet-priest; honor you by following from day to day your example and counsel. If we were to pay you this tribute, we should grow in sincerity and poise. We should learn to smile at the rebuffs of fortune. We should never bow down before wealth or position; nor should we court the favor of the fickle mob. In personal and political life, sturdy independence would be ours, free from arrogance; high loyalty, free from self-righteousness. And we should win your crowning grace of humor.

The Nine Old Men.

Nobody ever can call me a lawyer-lover, but even though "the nine old men" of the Supreme Court are nth-power lawyers, something about the tone of the criticism which they are receiving arouses the uncle in me. In the first place, it seems that the critics of the court are bearing down unduly on the fact that the nine old men are old, considering that a man must be pretty well along in years to have achieved the necessary distinction in the law business.

The justices are supposed to be champion lawyers, and it takes time to reach that eminence. They must also be men of great experience, and that means that they must have put in years in the courts and over their books learning the tricks which other lawyers will spring on them when they reach the Supreme bench.

It is even desirable that the Justice shall have had some work on behalf of soulless corporations such as the utilities and the railroads, because that way he may learn their methods from the inside. In fact, if a subway company or the Morgan house has hired a lawyer and the man has been successful it must be admitted that he is very good in his work because these clients have no time for inferior lawyers

Nor does it follow that his association with such interests contaminates his thoughts or sentiments and thus renders him undesirable, for attorneys take pride in what might be called the insincerity of their zeal for their clients.

• • • •

They may be prosecuting one year and, by a reversal of local politics, defending pickpockets the next, and nobody around a courthouse ever takes seriously their scorn for the defendant in one role or their pity for him in the other. That is part of the act, and no lawyer ever is going to qualify for the Supreme Court unless he has been through the mill.

It seems to be agreed, then, that eminence, experience, knowledge and a ripe maturity of mind and character are essential, and most of us will further agree that all these requirements are rarely discovered in young men. True, the ripe maturity sometimes amounts to mental mildew, but it is very hard to know when a cheese is just exactly prime, and, anyway, the juveniles bring to important public office faults just as risky.

There is some derisive criticism of the august majesty of the court in its stately palace of justice in Washington, and I appreciate the ludicrous as well as the next one.

But the Supreme Court Building is no more expensive than some other architectural fripperies of the Capital, among which I might name the Commerce Building, with its private elevator for the Secretary and the enormous bronze gates and lamps. Then there is the Senate, with its free barber service and free mineral water for the elder statesmen, and their restaurant, which runs a deficit every year because none of them pays enough for his meals and some never pay at all.

• • • •

I doubt that the Constitution would be any safer for the fact that a young Chief Justice, wearing a sweater, opened court with a cheery "H'arya, Toots?" to the bailiff. Yet the Court is criticized for a little solemn ritual, as though the nine old men might better enter from the wings, dancing.

No man who wears a great flowing black robe can ever look natural to Americans, but that is merely a sartorial point and something for the fashion writers rather than serious critics of the Supreme Court. Probably the costumes never show in the decisions.

Hearing so much derision for the nine old men and their working quarters, it just occurs to me that these men all had to stand very close inspection before they were hired and that, after all, they are the United States Supreme Court and not just nine old bums in the back room of a saloon.

Justice Brandeis

Distinguished Supreme Court Jurist, 80 Today, Long A Fighter For Greater Economic Democracy; Hates "Curse Of Bigness."

By Richard M. Boeckel.

For half of the 160 years since the American colonies declared their independence in 1776, the United States has had Louis D. Brandeis as a citizen. Born at Louisville, Ky., November 13, 1856, Mr. Justice Brandeis is 80 years old today.

In the month of his birth John C. Fremont, first candidate for President of the Republican Party, was defeated by James Buchanan. Since Buchanan only three Democrats have occupied the Presidential office. At Washington in November, 1856, the Supreme Court heard arguments in the celebrated case of the Negro slave Dred Scott. The country was to wait two years to read the Lincoln-Douglas debates, but armed conflict over the slavery issue was already under way in the Territory of Kansas, and an epoch in the history of the American Republic was drawing swiftly to a close.

Contrasting conditions that prevailed during his boyhood with those of a later day, Brandeis wrote in 1912:

"Half a century ago nearly every American boy could look forward to becoming independent as a farmer or mechanic, in business or professional life; and nearly every American girl might expect to become the wife of such a man. Today most American boys have reason to believe that throughout life they will work in some capacity as employes of others, either in private of public business; and a large percentage of the women occupy like positions."

During Brandeis' lifetime the United States has grown from a nation of 28,000,000 to a nation of 128,000,000 people. And it has been converted from a nation in which most men were, or might look forward to being, their own masters to a nation largely of wage workers and salaried employes.

To obtain for employed men and women some present-day approximation of the opportunities enjoyed by the average American of an earlier day—opportunities intended by the founders of the Republic to be guaranteed in perpetuity to the common man in America—Brandeis has worked for many years, in many ways. Thus he has sought to serve what he has conceived to be the American ideals.

Has Passion For Freedom.

"WHAT ARE the American ideals?" Brandeis asked himself in a famous Fourth of July oration at Faneuil Hall, Boston, in 1915. He answered:

"They are the development of the individual for his own and the common good; the development of the individual through liberty, and the attainment of the common good through democracy and social justice.

"Our form of Government, as well as humanity, compels us to strive for the development of the individual man. Under universal suffrage . . . every voter is a part ruler of the state. Unless the rulers have, in the main, education and character, and are free men, our great experiment in democracy must fail."

Freedom! Liberty! Democracy! These are words that come frequently from his lips. He is said to have "a passion for freedom." But freedom and democracy are only means to an end; they are not ends in themselves. The end he seeks is full development of the capacities of individual men and women. Freedom and democracy supply the conditions most favorable to that development. It is as important that we have them in the industrial field as in the political field.

An "American standard of living" means to Brandeis not merely adequate food, shelter and clothing. These are a part of it; but only a part. An American standard of living means:

"In substance the exercise of those rights which our Constitution guarantees—the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Life, in this connection, means living, not existing; liberty, freedom in things industrial as well as political; happiness includes, among other things, that satisfaction which can come only through the full development and utilization of one's faculties."

After a reasonable income, earned through regular employment at fair rates of wages, the thing Brandeis most desired for the employed American is adequate leisure. Not leisure for mere idleness or entertainment but leisure and freshness of mind for self-education and for work at the things that most interest the worker.

"Equality of opportunity for self-development" Brandeis believes to be the first essential of successful democracy, and this the framers of our Constitution intended to provide. But such equality is impossible without one long-neglected limitation: That each man may develop himself and his interests so far, but only so far, as his doing so will not interfere with the exercise of the same right by all others. Thus "liberty" means to Brandeis "the right to enjoy life, to acquire property, to pursue happiness in such manner and to such extent only as the exercise of the right in each is consistent with the exercise of a like right by every other of our fellow citizens."

Would Redress Economic Balance.

THE RISE of the modern corporation and of huge combinations in industry has operated to restrict the right to freedom of development for millions of employes, and to hold out the opportunity for full utilization of individual talents only to the exceptional few. From these few, Brandeis believes, we have expected too much. We have permitted them to enjoy powers which it is beyond the capacity of the human mind always to know how to exercise for the common good. "And from the many we have expected too little."

Brandeis would use a multitude of devices to redress the balance. First of all he would employ the powers of government to rid the country of "the curse of bigness," principally by cancelling exceptional privileges heretofore granted to great aggregation of corporate wealth. Deprived of these privileges, he believes industrial enterprises would tend to fit themselves to the size best adapted in each case to efficient operation. A more even basis of competition would be established. Some big businesses would transform themselves into many little businesses, and the opportunity would be open to many little businesses to become bigger businesses.

Trade unions would be strengthened automatically by a return to smaller industrial units. Brandeis would strengthen them further. Particularly he would strengthen their leadership. It should be improved to the point where working men and women could claim for their representatives the right to participate in all industrial decisions, for all industrial decisions in some way affect the lives and the welfare of the workers. In no other way can democracy be established in industry. And without democracy in industry, the United States is only half democracy.

Some progress toward some of the things Brandeis has long desired for his countrymen has recently been made. The progress during the decade of the twenties seemed all to be in the opposite direction. But then, as in the years of his boyhood, the country was moving toward a catastrophe. That catastrophe and its aftermath may have closed another epoch in the history of the country's development. As Brandeis begins his eighty-first year, his country may already have taken its first uncertain steps toward new order—a new order of things more in keeping with his desires, and more in keeping with the purposes for which the American Republic was established.

Governor Strives To End Rail Strike

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 12 (AP).—Gov. Richard W. Leche, readed arbitration efforts today in a strike of Louisiana and Arkansas railroad transportation workers as two tarin derailments were added to a long list of mishaps on the line since the walkout started September 19.

Behind closed doors, the Governor sat at an all-day conference with railroad officials and representatives of the four brotherhoods which called the strike. No word came from them as to whether they made any progress.

The conference started a short time after two L. & A. freight trains were derailed in north Louisiana. Railroad officials said the wrecks resulted from pulled spikes and a tampered switch.

Three trainmen were injured in this latest of a series of wrecks, derailments and ambuscades, which have claimed seven lives and injuries to more than a score.

Minimum Wage Legislation.

Following is a section of an article appearing in the November issue of Harper's Magazine.

IN GOING OVER the decisions of the Supreme Court in the three leading cases involving minimum-wage laws, I have made an astonishing discovery: that while the Supreme Court killed minimum-wage statutes in 1936 and 1923 and divided evenly on the issue in 1917, actually a majority of the Justices participating in these three cases declared that such legislation was constitutional!

Let us review the three cases briefly as a preliminary to finding out how majority rule on the Supreme Court could have so unexpected a result.

The New York case—that which precipitated the current national discussion—arose from a law passed by the New York Legislature in 1933 and challenged by a Brooklyn laundryman, when State authorities charged him with falsifying his records to make it appear that he was paying the minimum wage, whereas in truth his girl employes were receiving much less. The Supreme Court heard the New York case last April and decided it June 1, the day of adjournment for the summer. No action of the term brought upon the high bench so much criticism. For the law, supported by a large and slowly developed public opinion, fell by a one-Judge majority. Justice Butler spoke for the five. Chief Justice Hughes wrote the dissent for the four. There was also a strong separate dissenting opinion by Justice Stone, in which Justices Brandeis and Cardozo concurred.

The District of Columbia case, by which the majority of the Supreme Court and the New York Court of Appeals Judges set such store in the New York case, grew out of a law passed by Congress in 1918, providing for minimum wages for women and minors in the National Capital. Challenged by a corporation maintaining, ironically, a hospital for children, and by a woman hotel-elevator operator, the statute was rejected in a 5-to-3 decision commonly styled Adkins vs. Children's Hospital. Justice Sutherland, who had been a member of the Court only six months, spoke for the majority. Chief Justice Taft wrote one dissenting opinion and Justice Holmes another. Justice Brandeis did not participate, for his daughter, Elizabeth, was an official of the District of Columbia Wage Board.

The third decision figuring in our calculations is the automatic affirmation of the Oregon law of 1913 by a 4-to-4 division of the Court in 1917. The Oregon law, one of the trail-blazing enactments in this field, had been upheld unanimously by the Oregon Supreme Court, following an attack upon it by a Portland box manufacturer and a woman in his employ. The cases, Stettler vs. O'Hara and Simpson vs. O'Hara, were first argued in the Supreme Court in 1914 with Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard Law School, supporting the statute. Again Justice Brandeis did not participate. This time it was because of connection with the case as counsel before his appointment to the bench. Had Justice Brandeis joined in consideration of its constitutionality, the Oregon law would have been upheld by a Supreme Court majority and a precedent directly contrary to the rule in the New York case would have been positively written into our constitutional law nearly 20 years ago!

WE ARE NOW ready to merge the line-ups of the Court in the three cases. The majority in the New York case consisted of Justices Butler, appointed from Minnesota in 1922 by Harding; Van Devanter, appointed from Wyoming in 1910 by Taft; McReynolds, appointed from Tennessee in 1914 by Wilson; Sutherland, appointed from Utah in 1922 bv Harding, and Roberts, appointed from Pennsylvania in 1930 by Hoover. The minority members were Chief Justice Hughes, first appointed an Associate Justice from New York in 1910 by Taft and reappointed as head of the Court in 1930 by Hoover, and Justices Brandeis, appointed from Massachusetts in 1916 by Wilson; Stone, appointed from New York in 1925 by Coolidge, and Cardozo, appointed from New York in 1932 by Hoover. Five Judges against four.

When we join the majority in the New York case with the majority in the District of Columbia case, we find that Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler were in both. The only Judge in the majority 13 years ago who was not in the majority this year was Justice McKenna, appointed from California in 1898 by McKinley. Thus, of the individual Judges participating in these two cases, a total of six looked on minimum-wage legislation as unconstitutional.

On the other hand, the minority in the District of Columbia case—Chief Justice Taft, appointed from Ohio in 1921 by Harding, and Justices Holmes, appointed from Massachusetts in 1902 by Theodore Roosevelt, and Sanford, appointed from Tennessee in 1923 by Harding—was a wholly different minority from that which upheld the New York law this year. Joining the two minorities of four in 1936 and three in 1923, we have seven individual Judges in favor of minimum-wage legislation. While the decision in each case knocked out the law, seven of the thirteen Judges participating—a minority—supported the enactments as constitutional.

When the Supreme Court divided evenly in the Oregon case, Chief Justice Taft and Justices Sutherland, Butler and Sanford had not been appointed. In the places to which these Judges were to be named were Chief Justice White, appointed Associate Justice from Louisiana in 1894 by Cleveland and elevated to the Chief Justiceship in 1910 by Taft; and Justices Day, appointed from Ohio in 1903 by Theodore Roosevelt; Pitney, appointed from New Jersey in 1912 by Taft, and Clarke, appointed from Ohio in 1916 by Wilson.

• • • •

THE PRINTED RECORD in the Oregon case (243 U S. 620) does not tell how the Judges lined up. We do know, however, that Justice Brandeis did not participate. I reason that the Judges upholding the law were Justices Holmes, Clarke, Pitney and Day, and that those rejecting it were Chief Justice White and Justices McKenna, Van Devanter and McReynolds. Justices Van Devanter and McReynolds, as we have seen, stood against minimum-wage legislation in the New York and District of Columbia cases. Justice McKenna was with them in the latter case. Chief Justice White opposed the Oregon maximum hours law with a wage provision, upheld the Bunting vs. Oregon, decided the same year as the Oregon minimum-wage case. He becomes, as I reason, the only anti-minimum-wage Judge on the Court in 1917 who was not there in 1923 to invalidate the law passed by Congress for the District of Columbia. This side then would get only one addition to its ranks, its grand total of individual Judges in the three cases rising to seven.

But if my inference is correct—and I have the assurance of several eminent constitutional authorities that it is—the minimum-wage cause receives three new (or rather, in point of time, earlier) supporters on the Supreme Bench. For Justice Holmes would become the only Judge to appear twice among the upholders. Our totals then would be ten individual Judges for minimum-wage legislation to seven against!

"We are under a Constitution, but the Constitution is what the Judges say it is . . ." Gov. Hughes of New York did not mean, when he spoke these words in the course of an address 29 years ago, what present-day critics of the Supreme Court imply as they quote him. A reading of the full text makes it plain that the fragment has been misapplied. But suppose Mr. Hughes had meant it that way. Is the Constitution what the Judges say it is? Manifestly, not always. If someone is bold enough to suggest that, with respect to minimum-wage legislation, the Constitution is, rather, what the Judges who stay on the bench longest say it is, who can contradict him?

just violation of the rights of property, but a constant disposition to ameliorate the material condition of the classes least favored by fortune."

Throughout his life he has sought to bring about a general realization of that ideal, not because it is only good doctrine, but because in his quest for facts he became convinced it points the way to the best life for all the Nation. He envisioned the depression just ending many years ago, knew it was an inevitable result of the excesses of capitalism and the course being pursued by the money trust.

Opposed Restricted Output.

Justice Brandeis throughout his life has fought monopoly and "bigness" in business. He regarded them as inefficient and therefore less able to serve the people. But he also thought of the need for keeping open the door of opportunity for the little man. Early in life he opposed proposals of labor unions to restrict the output of workers. He held that an increase in the earnings of the business would best increase the earnings of the workers.

As far back as 1904 as second vice president of the New England branch of the Industrial League, Justice Brandeis in a speech contended, according to Alfred Lief, his biographer, that wasted effort increased costs, and that higher prices without larger incomes would reduce consumption and that thus restriction of output meant not more work but less goods to the people for their money.

It is small wonder, therefore, that Justice Brandeis joined with a unanimous court in invalidating NRA, although he did so on the ground that the act constituted an illegal delegation of authority by Congress and not because he objected to it on economic grounds. He is said likewise to have found the AAA objectionable, but he dissented from the ruling invalidating that act because he believed it within the framework of the Constitution.

Thus the justice reaches his eighty-first year in a period of transition in American history—recovery from the country's greatest depression—just as he grew to manhood in another transitional period—reconstruction after the devastation of the Civil War.

Born in Louisville.

This Supreme Court justice whose inexhaustible energy and healthy appearance belie his age and whose sensitive face under bushy hair in which streaks of darkness still mingle with the gray, looks down daily from the Supreme Court bench, was born in Louisville, Ky., November 13, 1856.

Several years previously his parents, Adolph Brandeis and Fredericka Dembitz, fled to this country from Bohemia to escape religious and political persecution. The elder Brandeis entered the grain business and prospered sufficiently to raise his family comfortably and with attention to the cultural aspects of life. Justice Brandeis was named Louis David Brandeis, but as a token of admiration to his mother and her brother, Lewis Dembitz, a lawyer in Louisville, he adopted his mother's maiden name.

He attended the public schools in Louisville and in 1873 with his parents he went to Germany and continued his education at Annen Realschule in Dresden, where he remained two years, subsequently going to Harvard University. The finances of the family had been drained by business reverses and young Louis borrowed the money to enter Harvard from an older brother.

By tutoring others, he managed to pay back this loan, pay his expenses through the Harvard law school and have $1,500 in his pocket when he received his law degree in 1877. Regarding St. Louis, Mo., as a coming town, the young lawyer and there, was admitted to the bar nad hung out his shingle but did not stay long. A year later a classmate, Sam Warren, proposed they form a partnership and open law offices in Boston. This he did gladly.

Prosper Rapidly.

The two young men prospered rapidly, numbering among their clients paper mills, shoe manufacturers and Boston merchants. The years rolled on and the law firm of Warren & Brandeis became well known for its ability and integrity. It subsequently was succeeded in 1897 by the firm of Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter, after health forced Sam Warren to retire. In 1891, however, approaching his thirty-fifth year, Mr. Brandeis married Miss Alice Goldmark, of New York. She became a sympathetic companion to the rising lawyer.

Early in the nineties Brandeis developed an interest in economic problems growing out of labor controversies. He likewise became interested in Boston traction problems and soon was found opposing plans of the traction companies on the ground that they were unfair to the people of the city.

By the turn of the century he became known in Boston as a "crusader" for reform in government and in seeking to get more equitable rates and treatment from the public utilities—and he developed the habit of refusing fees for services he rendered to public-spirited bodies and committees.

He did not want to be known as "a corporation lawyer," but rather as "a people's lawyer,"—and frequently declined large fees from clients whose causes he did not believe to be in the public interest. Nevertheless, his firm continued to prosper and he with it—until in 1907 he is said by his biographer to have accumulated $1,000,000, with earnings from his law practice exceeding $50,000 a year.

Fought Morgan.

Independently wealthy, he turned his attention more and more to his avocation of seeking adjustments of problems in the interest of the greatest number. He fought the schemes of J. P. Morgan to give the New Haven Railroad a transportation monopoly in New England. He was one of those who inspired the Armstrong committee investigation of insurance companies. It was this inquiry which brought about a reform of insurance practices and catapulted to the forefront of the national scene Charles Evans Hughes, now Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, who served as counsel for the investigating committee.

Brandeis was counsel for Louis Glavis in the sensational Ballinger-Pinchot affair which rocked the Taft Administration to its foundations. He appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission on behalf of shippers in a freight rate case and so impressed the commission with his objectivity and fairness that it subsequently named him its special counsel in a second freight rate inquiry.

He was Government counsel in a case affecting the Riggs National Bank here. He successfully argued constitutionality of the Oregon law limiting maximum working hours for women—and subsequently argued successfully the constitutionality of the Oregon minimum-wage law, although the court last June, with Brandeis dissenting, held such laws unconstitutional. After the World War he became an ardent pleader on behalf of his Jewish coreligionists and served as chairman of the Provisional Commission for General Zionist Affairs.

His life was a busy one, but he managed to do much by shunning social affairs and living the life of an ascetic. He arose around 5 o'clock in the morning and worked throughout the day. Despite the many cases in which he appeared, he found time to write condemning the "curse of bigness" and to excoriate the money trust in the volume, "Other People's Money," which recently has become a best seller in a cheap edition.

When Supreme Court Justice Joseph R. Lamar died, President Woodrow Wilson selected Brandeis as his successor. Immediately a roar of protest went up from Wall Street and conservative circles. Brandeis was assailed as a "Socialist," a "Jew radical" and as "unfit" for a place on the Supreme Court. Less bitter opponents contended he had spent so much of his life as a crusader that he lacked the judicial temperament and could not be objective.

Defended by Baker, Walsh.

The Senate Judiciary Committee held extensive hearings. Brandeis' opponents went through his career with a fine tooth comb. An issue was made of every incident, which on its face did not appear entirely orthodox and correct. Newton D. Baker sprang to his defense, presenting a brief containing the signatures of a long list of outstanding liberals—gathered by Frances Perkins, now Secretary of Labor. David I. Walsh, now Senator from Massachusetts, contended that the only "crime of which this man is guilty is that he has exposed the iniquites of men in high places in our financial system."

But his opponents were not finished. They laid before the Senate committee a memorial signed by six former presidents of the American Bar Association, including former President William Howard Taft, Joseph H. Choate and Elihu Root, declaring that "taking into view the reputation, character and professional career of Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, he is not a fit person to be a member of the Supreme Court of the United States."

Brandeis' face reddened the day he read that news on a bulletin outside of Boston Transcript office, according to the Lief biography, but he said nothing. Finally after five months of fighting over the nomination, the Judiciary Committee favorably reported it to the Senate and he was confirmed, 47 to 22, with only one adverse Democratic vote.

On June 5, 1916, he took the oath of office as a Supreme Court justice, being welcomed by his old friends, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and Justice Charles Evans Hughes. Five days later the latter was nominated for the Presidency of the United States and left the court. Thus was started a judicial career which will be memorable in American jurisprudence.

Followed Holmes' Advice.

The key, perhaps, to Justice Brandeis is his quest for facts in whatever he is doing and his thoroughness as a workman. In 1897, it is said Oliver Wendell Holmes, whose name in later years was so often to be linked with that of Justice Brandeis in the phrase "Holmes and Brandeis dissent," advised the latter that "the man of the future is the man of statistics and the master of economics." Even though Justice Holmes did not follow his own advice, Brandeis did. He mastered both statistics and economics.

Even to this day he searches for the minutest facts bearing on a case before him. He has believed that "behind every argument is someone's ignorance" and that once the foundation of truth in litigation can be discovered the cause and purpose of dispute immediately disappear. So thorough and precise a workman is he that it is said on on occasion he made 42 drafts of a dissenting opinion he was to deliver.

The full influence of Justice Brandeis on American life cannot be appraised at this time. It has been undoubtedly great, even though since his elevation to the Supreme Court it has been chiefly as a dissenter. His words, however, have moved others to act, and part of the New Deal resulted from his contentions. Younger hands carry on his work, and not the least important are the brilliant young men, such as Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Chairman James M. Landis, of the Security and Exchange Commission, who sat at his feet as his secretaries.

Hailed in Palestine.

Jerusalem, Nov. 12 (Palcor Agency).—Louis D. Brandeis, justice of the United States Supreme Court, was hailed here tonight on the eve of his eightieth birthday as "perhaps the only Jew who belongs to the histories of two peoples the Americans and the Jews."

Leaders of Palestine Jewry met in the Jewish Agency Building to pay tribute to the justice, a number of them Americans.

David Ben Gurion, chairman of the executive of the Jewish Agency, declared:

"When a religious Jew arrives in Palestine, he first visits the Wailing Wall. When I arrive in America, my first visit is to Justice Brandeis. During the most difficult times, we in Palestine derive great encouragement from the knowledge that in freedom's great land lives that great man who continually lives our Zionist life."

The ceremony closed with the passage of a resolution to cable birthday greetings to the justice.

continue peace discussions in the hiring hall matter.

Both owners and unions are determined to control these hiring agencies, traditional employment centers for seamen and longshoremen. The unions seek to have all non-union workers barred from the agencies' rolls; the owners demand that union qualifications be not applied as the standard in the agencies.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper, disclosing that the strike had again been discussed at the Cabinet meeting with the President yesterday afternoon, expressed himself as "more hopeful."

Secretary Perkins, after a long-distance phone conversation with McGrady, also expressed hope the hiring-hall question could be ironed out shortly.

Meanwhile, Joseph Curran, New York chief of the "rank-and-file" seamen's strike that has blocked shipping along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, said three more unions, the licensed officers, the marine firemen and the radio telegraphers, will join his group.

Johns Hopkins Student Victim Of Poison Dose

Petersburg Graduate Worker Drew Chemical From School Store.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 12.—Robert McK. Cuthbert, jr., graduate student in chemistry and president of a chemical fraternity at Johns Hopkins University, died today of poisoning a few minutes after he was found unconscious in his laboratory.

Cuthbert, who was 26, lived in Petersburg, Va., entered the university in 1934 to take his doctorate. School officials said he signed an order for 10 grams of cyanide, a poison, which he took from the chemical storeroom. Dr. Donald H. Andrews, head of the chemistry department at the school, said there was no evidence to show that Cuthbert needed the cyanide in his experiments.

Police Sergt. William Clayton, who investigated the case, said he found in the laboratory a slip of paper bearing the formulas for five poisons. Some of the poison he drew from the storeroom was found on a piece of paper in the laboratory. Beside it were a glass and a spoon. Miss Sallie Streeter, a student at the university, said she had emptied the poison down a drain and had washed out the drinking glass.

Cuthbert was president of Phi Lambda Upsilon, honorary chemical fraternity.

Latham Breunig, another student, passed the open door of Cuthbert's laboratory and found him lying on the floor. He called for aid and Cuthbert, unconsicious, was taken to a hospital where he died.

Mrs. Simpson Host To King and Party

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—King Edward and a small party of friends were the guests of Mrs. Wallis Simpson at No. 16 Cumberland Terrace last evening, it was learned today while the King was at Portland inspecting units of the home fleet.

While a typical November-in-London rain beat down on the deserted street and its lone bobby on guard, the American divorcee entertained the monarch and his intimates until it was time to depart for Portland, after midnight.

The King went to "No. 16" after Armistice Day services in Albert Hall.

Maj. Franco on Secret Mission for Brother

Naples, Italy, Nov. 12 (AP).—Maj. Ramon Franco, brother of the Spanish Fascist Gen. Francisco Franco, arrived today on a mission he declared was "secret."

"We are at war," he said, "and we cannot disclose our objectives."

He did acknowledge, however, he was going to Rome after spending two days in Naples.

Maj. Franco, formerly was air attache of the Spanish Embassy at Washington.

Union Plans to Rebroadcast Programs of Various Nations

Writers' Club Told of Project to Carry Music of One Country Around World Each Month; Addresses Also Proposed.

If the plan of the International Broadcasting Union goes through, it won't be long until the Chinese are swaying to American swing music, the Finns are listening to the dolorous notes of "A Lone Cowhand," and the Eskimos are rubbing noses to the tune of Aloha.

Arthur Burrows, secretary general of the union, outlined the plan yesterday at a luncheon of the Overseas Writers Club.

Each month, Burrows explained, a country will have a chance to broadcast its representative music and this will be relayed by the International Broadcasting Union to all parts of the world.

The idea behind the plan, he said, is that music will bring about a better understanding between peoples and promote the peace of the world.

In addition to music, Burrows said, there will be broadcast talks by the eminent men of the various countries. These men will discuss things of universal interest in their nations.

Burrows, an Englishman, was one of several foreign broadcasting officials who were the guests yesterday of the writers. Maurice Rambert, president of the union, recalled that 21 years ago a wireless message was flashed from Arlington Towers here to Eiffel Tower in Paris for the first time.

Oswald Schuette, former war correspondent, was master of ceremonies.

Johns Hopkins D. C. Alumni Again Active

Dr. Bowman to Address Supper Meeting of Group on Wednesday.

Dormant during the depression, the Johns Hopkins Alumni Association of Washington will resume its activities with a meeting and buffet supper at the Washington Hotel Wednesday at 8:30 p. m.

Principal speaker and honor guest will be Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of the university. There are about 700 Johns Hopkins men and women in the District. Henry F. Glassie is president of the organization and James Lee Bost, secretary.

Dr. Bowman will discuss affairs of the university, his administrative policies and his plans for the future.

Alumni throughout the city were urged to communicate with Bost and attend the meeting, the purpose of which will be to bring the men and women who attended Johns Hopkins University together.

President Suggests New Neutrality Law

By the Associated Press.

Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said yesterday he was digging into wartime State Department records at the request of President Roosevelt, with a view to introducing fresh neutrality legislation in the opening weeks of Congress.

He predicted that a revised neutrality bill, to replace the present act which expires May 1, would not take final form until Congress had studied results of the Pan American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires:

"At the President's suggestion, I am looking into the multitude of neutrality problems that came up during the World War," McReynolds said. "I expect to give special attention to a report prepared by Charles D. Warren, assistant attorney general in Wilson's Administration."

Country Needs G.O.P. Activity, Landon Says

Stresses Use of Militant Minority; Says Backers Won't Be Abandoned.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Nov. 12.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, defeated Republican Presidential nominee, pledged his party tonight to a program of active work in the between-campaigns period.

Asserting "the country needs an active, intelligent and militant minority," the Kansas Governor promised all who joined in the campaign he headed "will not be abandoned."

After a conference with John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, on the subject of the party's future, he made the following statement:

"Under the American system of government the country needs an intelligent, constructive and militant minority. Our discussions today have been directed to that end.

"This means the continuation of an active national headquarters that will be able to furnish the people of this country with a fair statement of facts. It means intelligent assistance to the Republican members of the United States Congress and of more importance, the stimulation of the details of party organization.

"No man or woman who has assumed a position of leadership in the campaign just ended can fail to realize the deep obligation due to the more than 16,000,000 Americans who voted their convictions.

"I have expressed to Mr. Hamilton my deep appreciation not only to the members of the Republican organization, but to all of those who joined in the common cause. They will not be abandoned."

Before the conference, Hamilton discussed plans to retain a working organization in party headquarters in Washington.

Said Landon:

"This last campaign has demonstrated that you can't build an effective organization in just four months."

Asking $2,500, Worker Offers Self to Science

Vermonter Would Become Human 'Guinea Pig' to Save Family.

(So he can pay his debts and see his family of four through the winter, a man from the valley hamlet of Jacksonville, Vt., Thursday anonymously offered, through a Boston newspaper, to sell himself to science as a "human guinea pig" for $2,500. The United Press investigated and found the man to be William Edward Bird, jr., 32, unemployed stationary fireman. Bird, described by his neighbors as a "clean-cut, upright man," herewith tells his unusual story.—Editor's note.)

By William Edward Bird, Jr.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Jacksonville, Vt., Nov. 12.—I'm sick and tired of being in debt and without a job.

Everything seems to have failed. There's no work to speak of. I'm in debt $400. Food is running low. The fire in our kitchen stove is going out. My wife and three children need clothes to keep them warm during the winter.

I've got to keep them together. There seems to be only one hope.

I'd like to sell myself for $2,500.

By trade, I'm a stationary fireman, but I haven't had a steady job since a year ago last October. There have been odd jobs. I worked on a WPA project in Wilmington, 7 miles from here, but it only lasted six or seven weeks.

We moved here about a year ago. We live downstairs in a seven-room house. We have three rooms—a kitchen, bedroom and front room. My father-in-law and mother-in-law live upstairs. But they're just as poor as we are.

My oldest girl, Priscilla Blanche, 9, has to sleep upstairs with them. My 8-year-old boy, Reginald Edward, has to sleep in our front room on a couch and our baby, Patricia Ann, who's 17 months old, sleeps with us. The baby's been sick with intestinal grippe. The other two children have had colds.

Dora, my wife, has been worrying herself sick over our circumstances. She's 28. We've been married 11 years.

It's been pretty hard going for us for the past 10 years.

We owe $400 in debts counting store bills, rent, doctor's bills, fuel and—well we owe about everything there is in keeping a family together. The stores used to give us credit.

If there is some doctor or group of doctors or scientists who'll advance me $2,500, I'll agree to pay it back in two years. I have to sort of sell or mortgage myself because that's the only security I can put up.

Now, if I failed to pay back the money when the time was up, I'd let them do anything they want with me. I'd let them try any kind of experiment on me.

Herbert Shaw, 78, Dies at Home Here

Herbert R. C. Shaw, 78, former chief of the Certificate Division of the Bureau of Pensions, died early yesterday at his home, 1419 R street northwest, after a long illness.

A native of Portland, Me., Mr. Shaw came to Washington nearly 60 years ago to enter the Government service. He had been employed at the Interior Department about 55 years when he was retired in 1930.

At one time Mr. Shaw was captain and regimental adjutant of the old Washington Light Infantry, forerunner of the District National Guard. He had been active in helping to organize the regiment.

Surviving him is a son, Randolph Shaw, a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Kiwanis Club Luncheon Host To 3 of 'Wards'

Children Express Thanks for Work on Behalf of Underprivileged.

Three "Kiwanis Children" were honor guests at the fourteenth annual Underprivileged Child Day luncheon of the Washington Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower yesterday.

Braces, crutches and wheel chairs were forgotten as Charles A. Bright, jr., and Francis Lansdale, of the Weightman School, and James Anderson, pupil at McKinley Technical High School, ate with the men whose money and moral support have provided medical treatment, arranged entertainments and helped to establish the Weightman School for their benefit.

The Kiwanis Club began its activities in the interest of crippled children in 1923. Since that time hundreds of underprivileged children have received aid. James Anderson, in his brief speech of appreciation, mentioned this as he summed up the work of the club in his behalf.

"First let me say that had it not been for the establishment of Weightman School I would not be here today. Mr. Radford Moses was chairman of the underprivileged child committee at that time and saw the need for such a school; so when he became president in 1928, the club, with the approval of the D. C. School Board, petitioned Congress to pass the bills authorizing a school for crippled white children and one for crippled colored children. Weightman and Magruder were opened on November 4, 1929, as a result."

Charles A. Bright, jr., also paid tribute to Dr. Hall and other members of the Kiwanis Club, in his talk. "Aside from the orthopedic care that has been given me by Dr. Hall, I have spent many happy hours because of the generosity and kindness of the Kiwanis Club," he continued. "I think I can speak not only for myself, but for all the children who have been fortunate enough to attend Weightman School when I say that I am deeply grateful for all that has been done for us by members of the Kiwanis Club."

Mrs. Galloway Funeral Service Will Be Today

Wife of Agriculture Bureau Official Was Active in Club Work.

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes S. Galloway, 70, wife of Dr. B. T. Galloway, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture during the first Wilson Administration, will be held at Takoma Park Presbyterian Church today at 2:30 p. m., followed by burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Galloway, a native of Paisley, Scotland, died Wednesday in Sibley Hospital after a short illness. She had been a resident of Washington since her marriage to Dr. Galloway in 1888.

She was active in the Twentieth Century Club, the Fornightly Club and the Mothers' Club of Takoma Park. During the World War she was a leader in Red Cross work, and was placed in charge of an auxiliary unit for Northwest Washington. The Galloway residence is at 7106 Piney Branch road.

Besides his record as Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Dr. Galloway was a botanist in the Department of Agriculture for many years, until his retirement.

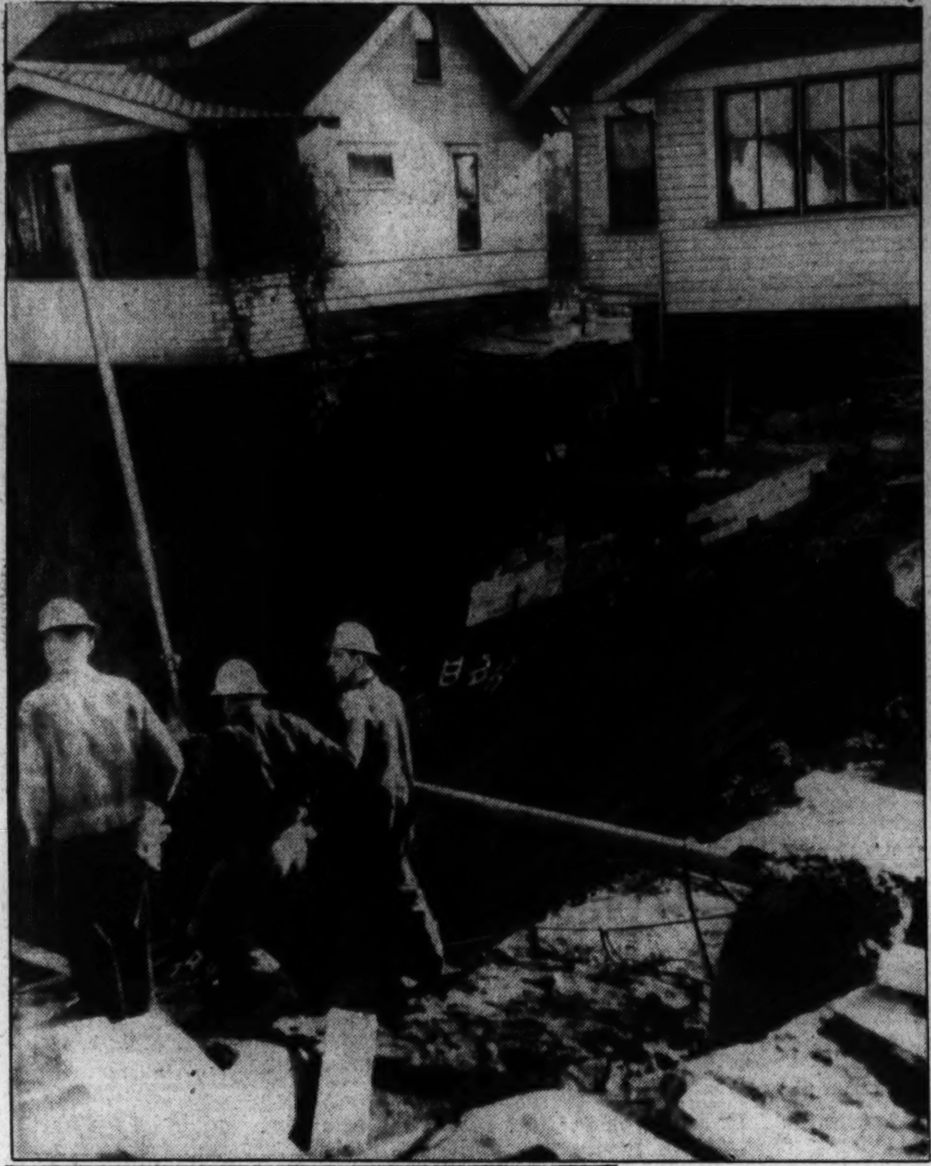
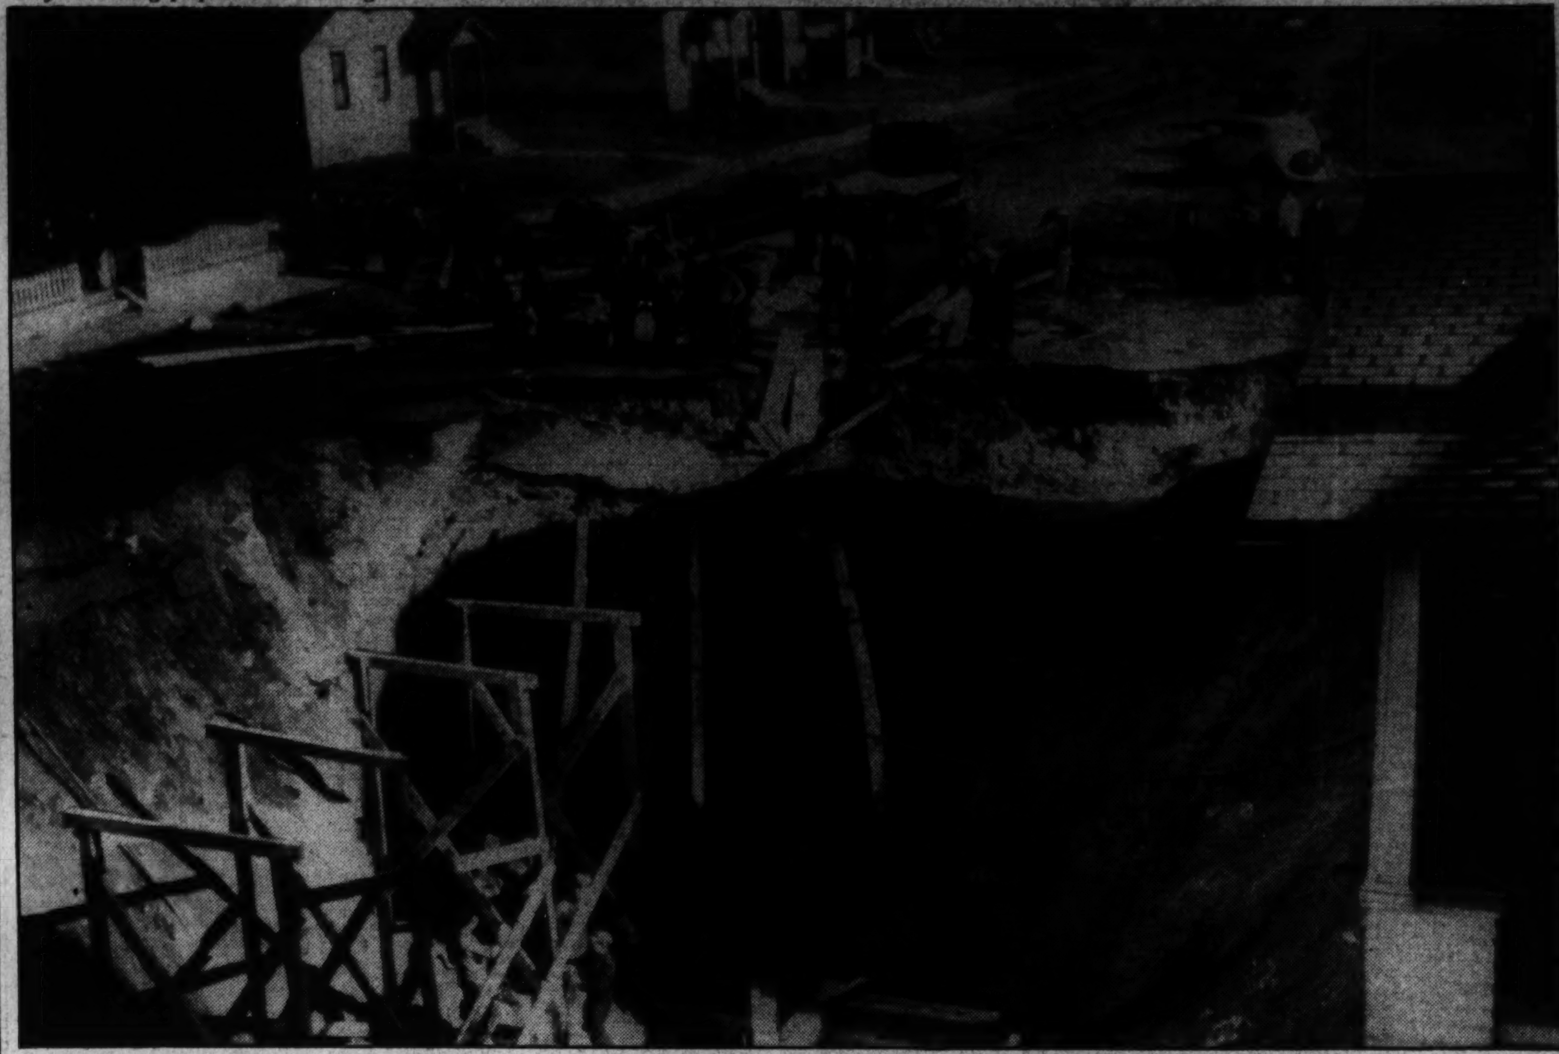
15 Miners Escape Death When Tunnel Collapses at St. Paul

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A.P. WIREPHOTO Service.





CAVE-IN. 5,000 tons of rock and sand went roaring into an excavation, forcing 15 miners to run for their lives. Workmen were cutting through for a new sewer tunnel when the underpinning gave way. The cave-in left a huge sink-hole in the street, 150 feet above the tunnel, with two houses tottering on the brink as shown in photo at left.

and consumer, we need the fullest possible representation of every viewpoint."

"I have repeatedly stated," he added, "that the highest purpose of industry in any civilization is to serve the people. Industry, and government as well, must yield to and reflect the people's will. Our program will go forward and will affect all those who operate the business affairs of this democracy.

"I believe that practical considerations and sound business judgment will influence industry ownership and management to welcome this opportunity to assist in directing the course of a movement in which they are so much concerned."

General Sessions First.

The first day of the meeting will be devoted to general sessions over which Berry will preside, the second to executive sessions to consider progress reports from committees which submitted findings at the last conference in March.

Out of that session emerged a recommendation to President Roosevelt that the Nation adopt a permanent industria lpolicy including minimum wage and maximum hour standards and elmination of "unfair" trade practices.

Wage and hour legislation and action on fair trade practices and national industrial policy will be considered. Of special interest to business was Berry's announcement that a council committee was being organized to study "taxation in all its phases."

Senator O'Mahoney, insisting his bill "is not in any sense a modification of the NRA," pointed out it provides for a national industrial conference in which employers, employes, investors and the public generally may be represented, to devise a general program "for the co-ordination, stabilization and development of the basic industries." The conference would report to Congress, recommending legislation to stop unfair trade and labor policies and "safeguard the interests of the investing and consuming public."

The Senator's statement said:

"Under the NRA industries were permitted to draw their own voluntary codes which, when approved, had the full force and effect of law. This was the delegation of legislative power which the Supreme Court condemned, and I think rightly, as unconstitutional. It is not proposed in this bill to allow anyone except the people's elected representatives to draft the law."

It asserted also that "when a corporate charter is properly drawn * * * there will be little or no need for the interference of Government bureaus. We shall, in other words, have given industry a charter of freedom."

He held that the Federal licensing system "will render unnecessary too much government on the one hand, and on the other it will make it impossible for a small group to control the financial resources of the great corporations to manipulate the commercial and economic life of the Nation for their own purposes."

Secretary Roper's report on the accomplishments and shortcomings of NRA was said to include analyses of all phases of worker-employer relationships, wages and hours and competitive practices before, under and after the codes.

King Edward Inspects Fleet; Chats With Tars

Portland, England, Nov. 12 (AP).—King Edward, with his own memories of midshipman life in the navy, opened his two-day inspection tour of Britain's home fleet today by asking rapid-fire questions about the food and general comfort of lower-deck jack-tars.

Clad in undress uniform of an admiral of the fleet, with a heavy gray coat to withstand the buffeting of wind-lashed rain, the bachelor monarch visited five battleships, chatting informally on the quarterdeck with each commanding officer.

Federal Relief Past Its Peak, Hopkins Avers

expenditures, there is no question but that we are over the peak. From here on there should be a drop in relief cases by the Federal Government, corresponding to that in the cities and States."

Looking into the future, Hopkins said the proportion of white collar workers and women on relief projects already is increasing, and is likely to rise proportionately as recovery advances, and total relief figures decrease.

Skilled Demand Rises.

He attributed this development to technological demands of industry for skilled workers, in which class white collar labor and women do not predominate. He said work projects are being adjusted to fit this trend.

Hopkins declined to say at what rate relief funds are now being spent, but said that until recently they moved at the rate of $160,000,000 a month. He likewise declined to comment on reports that WPA would be dovetailed into the regular departmental structure.

Asked whether his "term of service would terminate," he grinned and said that would be at the President's pleasure.

Reporters were confused by two sets of uncomparable relief figures released by the WPA yesterday. One dealt with the number of relief cases employed under the works program, or receiving aid from State and local relief agencies, through August only. The other dealt with employment under the works program, with a breakdown of Federal agencies administering relief, through October 15.

One WPA statement said that "because some persons who were on relief rolls during part of August were later employed on the works program and because in some areas earnings on the works program were supplemented with direct relief by local agencies, a certain amount of duplication existed between the number on relief rolls and employment on the works program."

August Is Omitted.

As of October 15, the total number of persons employed under the works program was 3,498,012, compared with 3,458,992 on September 30; 3,437,990 on September 15, and 3,301,442 on July 15. The August figure was not given.

Of the 3,498,012 on Federal projects October 15, 2,515,728 were carried by WPA; 384,135 in emergency conservation work and 598,149 in other Federal agencies. Included in this number were 12,599 employed in the District; 28,392 in Maryland, and 47,388 in Virginia.

In the half month from September 30 to October 15, WPA employment increased 41,425, including a 32,831 increase in emergency drought employment. Other Federal agencies showed a decline of 2,404 in employment.

"The employment peak for the works program as a whole was reached during the half month ending March 31, 1936," Hopkins said in one statement. "As employment conditions have improved, the trend of regular works program employment since that date has been downward. This downward trend is, to a certain extent, obscured and partly offset by reason of the increase in emergency drought employment."

Presbyterian Church Elects Dr. Buswell

Philadelphia, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Second General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America elected the Rev. Dr. J. Oliver Buswell, jr., president of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., as its moderator today, to succeed Dr. J. Gresham Machen, of Philadelphia.

The general assembly of the church, founded here June 11, opened its four-day session today with the election of the moderator and the Rev. Leslie W. Sloat, of Washington, D. C., as clerk of the present assembly.

Nobel Award For Literature Won by O'Neill

by the bombardment of atoms with a high voltage current.

Prof. Hess' prize was for his research in cosmic radiation.

King Gustav will present the awards December 10 at a ceremony in connection with the anniversary of the death of Alfred B. Nobel, Swedish discoverer of dynamite, who left the $9,000,000 fund from which the prizes are given.

O'Neill is considered by the Scandinavian public the world's leading playwright. "Mourning Becomes Electra," a trilogy, will be staged in connection with the Nobel festival.

The 48-year-old O'Neill has won the Pulitzer Prize for the drama three times, something no other has done. The Pulitzer awards in various fields were established in the will of Joseph Pulitzer, American publisher, who died in 1911.

O'Neill's latest play presented in New York was "Days Without End," which ran early in 1935. The previous season "Ah, Wilderness!" had a lengthy run.

Besides "Strange Interlude" and "Mourning Becomes Electra," the American playwright's other dramas—more than 35 in all—include "The Emperor Jones," which was also made into a motion picture and an opera; "The Hairy Ape," "Desire Under the Elm," "Marco Millions," "Lazarus "Laughed," and "Beyond the Horizon."

Nice Promises Action in Arrest Of D. C. Officer by a Prince Georges County policeman.

Arrested In Brentwood.

According to Husky, a plain clothesman attached to the District vice squad, he pursued a petty offender into Brentwood, Md., without realizing he had crossed the District line. When Husky attempted to arrest the man a struggle ensued, the officer said, during which he used his blackjack to subdue his prisoner.

Notified by a resident who saw the fight, a Prince Georges County policeman arrested both the District officer and his prisoner and Judge Moffat ordered the Washington policeman held under $1,000 bond on a charge of assault.

The complaint to Gov. Nice was based on the attitude taken by the justice of the peace, even after Husky had identified himself as a member of the Washington Police Department.

Automobile Club attorneys had no intimation Gov. Nice had entered into the investigation of the activities of the Prince Georges County Police Department until late yesterday.

Records Photostated.

Meanwhile, Attorney Lebowitz, a chief investigator, went to Baltimore with State's Attorney Alan Bowie to have the police records photostated.

As soon as these records are obtained and a check made of certain affidavits Keystone Club officials will present their evidence against Moffat to the Governor with the request that the justice of the peace be removed from office.

Keystone Club attorneys also plan to ask the Governor to detail State auditors to check the books of those magistrates allegedly involved in the "bargain fine" system. Several thousands of dollars of State money has apparently never reached the State treasury, the investigators intimated.

Trial Listed Today.

Determined to pursue every angle of the reports of "corrupt" practices originating in the Hyattsville sub-station, automobile club attorneys were prepared to go to trial today on a suit filed by them for a Washington motorist against Mrs. Eleanor F. Johnson, Hyattsville garage owner.

In a sworn statement submitted to the automobile club, the motorist says he was arrested last June and charged with driving under the influence of liquor and reckless driving.

While in the police station, he avers, his car was driven to the garage without his permission. He is seeking to recvoer $3.50, which he claims was paid to Mrs. Johnson for "towing and service."

The trial will be conducted before Justice of the Peace Robert E. Ennis in Capitol Heights, at 5:30 p. m. Caesar Aiello, of Hyattsville, will defend the garage owner.

Church Benefit Planned.

The annual benefit card party for Immaculate Conception Church will be held at the Mayflower Hotel next Thursday. A meeting to make final arrangements for the affair, of which the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, assistant pastor of the church, is in charge, will be held at the Mayflower tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

TRIUMPH: The flyers of Britain's Royal Air Force were quite elated recently when they received word that their deeds were to become movie history. A new film, "Splinters in the Air," concerns the heroism of that flying unit . . . Four extras, daredevils of the air, were hired by the studio, after an exhaustive search for their type. To them was related the honors that would be theirs for flying in the R. A. F. uniform . . . Production of the film had to be postponed last week. The four daredevils had quit —to join the R. A. F!

Gertrude Lawrence Emerges as Brilliant Artiste In Noel Coward's Series of Playlets at National

Her Versatility, Ability to Cope Either With Lines or Songs and Fine Flair for Comedy Make Her Unique; Mr. Melcher Is a Durable Playboy; Variety Club Banquet Will Be a Sellout.

BELL.

THE most conspicuous benefit that has accrued to the Capital's theatergoers from Noel Coward's engagement at the National in nine one-act plays of his own authorship—six of which already have been presented to high acclaim and the third group of which will be revealed tonight—it seems to me, has been the emergence of Gertrude Lawrence as such an amazingly fine actress.

My first recollection of Miss Lawrence is as she appeared with Beatrice Lillie and others of comic distinction in one of the remote Charlot Revues, presented on this side, I should say, back in the early 1920s, or maybe before. It was the production in which that syncopated hit known as "The Limehouse Blues" was introduced to American audiences. I would not be sure which of the two sang it, Miss Lawrence or Miss Lillie. All I know is that it has been going on, more or less, ever since.

But my major thought in this connection is that at that time Miss Lawrence left no definite imprint on my consciousness—or at least semi-consciousness—as an artiste within whose capabilities lay the power to plumb any emotion, sound any depth of feeling or soar to any height of hilarious comedy. All of these things she has proved herself able to do in the playlets that Mr. Coward so far has presented on the stage of the National.

I do not at all mean to derogate Mr. Coward in any of the fine things he has done in this engagement. After all, Noel Coward you more or less—principally more—take for granted. He is one of the present-day miracles of the theater, a practitioner whose abilities acknowledge no frontiers and whose achievements seem without boundaries or limitations. His performances have been consistently on the side of distinguished attainment in these one-act plays of his own contriving. I still like best the Caspar Milquetoast bit he does in "Fumed Oak," the saga of the worm that turned.

However, reverting to Miss Lawrence, I discover in her work an ever increasing source of wonder. She plays anything with ease and conviction; she sings, she dances, she sparkles and she emotes; she purveys a complete sense of gayety or she droops beneath the depressing shadows of the sable plumes of grief. Truly, here is an artiste of the first water, whose talents never before quite have been appreciated on this side.

More and more, it is borne in upon me that Mr. Coward, Miss Lawrence, Joyce Carey and the other members of their supporting ensemble are doing for a neglected branch of the living theater of dramatic art what the D'Oyly Carte Company has done in the way of classicizing the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. They are converting skits into classics.

• • • •

The inspiration provided by Mr. Coward and his one-act plays has served to put afoot a tentative movement to inaugurate a series of one-act play productions in this country to serve as a sort of stopgap between road-show attractions in the hinterlands. Resident companies would be established in the key cities of the country to step in when bookings lapse and put on much the same sort of programs as those being offered by Mr. Coward and his associates in the National Theater this week and next. The suggestion comes to me from Clarence Jacobson, formerly treasurer of the National Theater, who is in town for a brief confab with old friends.

Among the two-dozen-odd soirees being tossed off in honor of Mr. Edward de Selding Melcher, my esteemed contemporary of the Evening Star, who leaves almost before you can say whatever it is you say in such circumstances for a writing stint in Hollywood, is the one Saturday night in the Heigh-Ho, at which Divisional Manager Carter Barron and Mrs. "Chic" Barron, of Loew's, Inc., will be hosts.

Mr. Melcher is proving himself a young man of Bessemer tissue and almost unbelievable durability these last few days of his Washington residence and should be held up to the rising generation as a model of sturdy fiber.

One of the tragedies of unrequited love is that aching void that follows a protracted silence on the part of those one cherishes. Here it is two days now and Tarzana hasn't even so much as phoned me!

So there comes to hand the annual invitation to be guest of the Variety Club, Washington Tent, No. 11, at its third annual banquet and jamboree in the Willard the night of Saturday, November 21. This is an honor that is deeply appreciated by one who has a great deal of Variety's basic showmanship at heart. It is hard to draw a rigid line of demarcation between the drama desk and the practitioner of the playhouse—especially when one has served in both capacities. "Show business" is a great game. It gets in the blood.

So do these annual routs of the Variety Club. There is nothing else quite like them in Washington's social and theatrical year. They possess a flavor that is decidedly and distinctly their own.

This year one of the most elaborate programs in the brief history of the local tent is being planned and it is slight wonder, that word having got around, that Carter Barron, general chairman, and the others in charge are beginning to dust off the S. R. O. sign. The thing will be a sellout and a memorable evening in the minds of all who attend.

There might be 50 tickets left, but I doubt it. So hurry, if you want to have yourself a time.

• • • •

At last there is a musical attraction on its way to the living theater in Washington—but it will be a revival. Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta,' recently done on the screen by Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, will be the first chromatic charade of the season. It will be welcomed with open arms by a tune-hungry populace, despite the fact that it was first sung here by Emma Trentini and the late Orville Harold a couple of decades ago. Melodies like Herbert's do not die.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra and Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo in Constitution Hall Thursday night with Hans Kindler and Antal Dorati as conductors. Program: "Les Sylphides," based on piano compositions of Chopin; "Choreartium," based on the fourth symphony of Brahms; "Aurora's Wedding," based on Chaikovski's "Sprashchaya Krasavitsa."

Even the most persistent followers of the ballet have seldom had the opportunity to witness the combination of an eloquent reading of Brahms' fourth symphony accompanied by choreographic commentary. Hans Kindler and his musicians gave to the work as much care as though the occasion had been a concert, and the dancers were apparently motivated by an emulating spirit. Leonid Miassin, having watched the morning rehearsal, was so quickened by it that he decided to participate in the performance, replacing David Lichin.

"Choreartium" is a much more satisfactory creation than "Les Presages," which the company presented here last season to the music of Chaikovski's fifth symphony. The patterns are more closely linked to the rhythmic figures, and the living tableaux, to revive an old-fashioned term, are more in keeping with the moods of the music.

Abstract music conforms to Paul's advice by being all things to all men. Miassin's apperception of the meaning of the symphony differs from yours and mine, and to the extent of that difference interferes with enjoyment of the music.

"Les Sylphides" and "Aurora's Wedding," formal ballets that serve the technical side of the dancer's art, preceded and followed the main event of the evening. They were excellently presented with Antal Dorati in command of the orchestra.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Eli Culbertson says.

A Pseudo Finesse.

Some of the best exhibitions of play follow the worst examples of bidding. This is by no means paradoxical. It is only logical that a declarer should make extraordinary efforts to get out of a "jam" in which a bad bid, either of his own or of his partner, has placed him. Today's hand is a case in point.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
East-West 30 part-score.

West	North / South	East
	♠K 4 ♡8 7 ◇A Q 10 6 5 3 ♣K 7 4
♠Q 6 5 ♡J 6 5 3 ◇9 8 ♣J 9 5 3	North West East South	♠10 3 2 ♡A Q 10 9 2 ◇J 4 ♣A Q 10
	♠A J 9 8 7 ♡K 4 ◇K 7 2 ♣8 6 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇
2 ♡	3 ◇	3 ♡	3 ♠
Pass

North's raise of spades should have had a bad result for his partnership. It gave South the impression that North had some length in the suit and, therefore, influenced him in his decision to go on toward game rather than double the opponents. Obviously the double would have been a much safer course, and, on reasonably good defense, would have rewarded North and South to the extent of 800 points.

West opened his fourth-best heart; East won with the Ace and, with the prayer that his partner had the King of hearts and after making it would lead through dummy's club King, East returned a low heart. It was the declarer, however, who won this trick, and who now saw that he was in a very dangerous position. The comparative shortness of his trump suit and the fact that both the Queen and ten were missing dictated a finesse for the Queen and obviously the normal manner of taking this finesse would be to lead to dummy's King, and on the return, finesse the Jack. But this plan was very unattractive for one single reason, namely, that if the spade finesse lost to West, he would be sure to shift to clubs, and on the bidding it was fairly certain that dummy's King was in a vulnerable position.

To avoid the danger inherent in the club situation, declarer determined to make a slight detour. Accordingly he led a low spade from his own hand and, when West followed with a low card, ducked the trick in dummy. East won with the ten, but was now helpless to defeat the contract. For want of something better to do, he returned a spade, which was won by dummy's King. Declarer then entered his hand with the diamond King and, with a silent prayer, played the Ace of trumps. To his joy, both opponents followed suit, the Queen dropping from West. After that it was a simple matter to discard all of his losing clubs on dummy's diamonds. Thus, one over contract was made.

East could have defeated the hand at the second trick, but it would have required clairvoyance to have made the killing play. Had he known that declarer's trumps were not solid and that West did not hold the King of hearts, East could have led any one of his clubs, thereby establishing two tricks in that suit, which could have been cashed when either defender got on lead with a trump. In the absence of positive knowledge, however, as to who held the heart King, East's play could hardly be criticized, and the declarer deserved full credit for his clever handling of a ticklish situation.

Idle Chatter.

HOLLYWOOD, NOV. 12.

Walter Huston had never read Shakespeare until he agreed to play "Othello" on Broadway. Margaret Lindsay's name is misspelled on her own dressing-room door, painters lettering it Lindsey. Peas from the same pod: Gladys George and Betty Compson. Heather Angel grooms her own horse; sure sign of a true horse-lover. Cutest figure in the world: Shirley Temple's. When Mary Brian is worried over a dialogue as she awaits the camera, she stands stork-fashion and kicks the toe of one shoe against the heel of the other.

MERLE OBERON.

Wouldn't lanky Gary Cooper make an elegant Abe Lincoln? Merle Oberon usually sits in front with the chauffeur when nobody else is riding along. Candidate for prettiest legs: Simone Simon. Bing Crosby's chuckly crack about indolent Andy Devine: "He could sleep riding a bicycle."

One of the rarest friendships in the colony is that of Janet Gaynor and Margaret Lindsay, but it had a strange beginning. A few years ago, when Miss Lindsay was cast in a picture with Miss Gaynor, she was told that Janet had a habit of high-hatting members of her cast. Spunky Margaret decided that she could beat her rival to the punch; so when they were introduced she acknowledged the meeting with an icy how-do-you-do, then coldly proceeded to do her own high-hatting. But when Janet proved to be a regular person Margaret was so ashamed that she apologized in front of the entire cast. From that moment the two have been inseparable.

When word spreads that Cecil B. De Mille is casting a new picture the gates of his studio are crowded with old-timers who stand for hours. Some unkempt, many ragged, a majority bewhiskered, they are men who have worked with De Mille for years. They linger outside the gates until C. B. himself leaves the studio. They know that he will stop and talk to them; that he will recognize old friends, and that he will give many jobs that will run for days and even weeks; jobs they could never hope to get through casting offices.

De Mille never forgets a face, and a man who has worked for him once is good for other jobs if he conducts himself well. By reputation, C. B. is a tyrant, but to those bearded men who look to him for work he is an idol.

"THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1936." Paramount picturization of a story by Arwin Gelsey, Arthur Kober and Barry Trivers, adapted to the screen by Walter De Leon and Francis Martin; featuring Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, Ray Milland, Frank Forrest, Bennie Fields, Sam Hearn, Stan Kavanaugh, Virginia Weidler, Leopold Stokowski, Benny Goodman's Swing Band, David Holt and Irving Bacon. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With a roster of players for the most active minds to ponder and to know there must be entertainment in that thar dramatic personae, "The Big Broadcast of 1936" returns to F street to regale the populace with perhaps the finest of this particular "annual" series.

Although opening somewhat slowly, the action—and everything else, too—picks up and the picture proceeds at a merry pace, indeed, leaving little imaginable that does not happen. Just look at those players listed in the italicized paragraph above and then think for a moment whether you can recall more diversified possibilities in one of these cinematized revues.

Expectations are realized, and then some. And if by any chance you missed "The Big Broadcast of 1936" during the fortnight starting October 23, rectify that error at once and give yourself a real treat.

Awarded Medal for Good Stage Diction

a native of Washington, D. C., was awarded the annual gold medal by the American Academy of Arts and Letters, for good diction on the stage. Miss Claire, who has been with the theater since 1912, is playing in Chicago in "End of Summer," in which she appeared on Broadway last season. Announcement of the award was made at New York yesterday by Prof. William Lyon Phelps, chairman of the committee.

Rialto

"San Francisco." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Robert Hopkins, with screen play by Anita Loos and John Emerson, starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, supported by Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt, Ted Healy and Jessie Ralph. Music and lyrics by Gus Kahn, Bronislau Kaper, Walter Jurmann, Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Dances staged by Val Raset. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

Not all the big ones to be brought back by the Rialto Theater are of the vintage of the early "thirties," for back to the "house of comfort" this week comes "San Francisco," as fine and well-remembered a dramatic value as the 1935-36 season furnished the cinema fan.

Starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, supported by a highly acceptable cast headed by Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt, Ted Healy and Jessie Ralph, this story of the "Gay Nineties" along the Barbary Coast needs no recapitulation at this time. Nor would it be necessary to review the work of the splendid cast and the equaly fine work of the technical staff, especially in reproducing San Francisco's terrestrial paroxysm of the period of 1906.

Little

"THE YELLOW CRUISE." The French Motion Picture Corporation release of the cinematographic record of the Citroen-Haardt Central-Asia Expedition led by Georges Marie Haardt, L. Andouin Dubreuil and Victor Point. Directed by Leon Poirier and Andre Sauvage. Symphonic score played by the Orchestre du Theatre National de l'Opera. Previewed Tuesday midnight by W. A. Whitney.

Over the roof of the world, following by motor caravan the route Marco Polo blazed some 700 years ago across the Himalayas, and across Asia was the task which the Citroen-Haardt expedition set for itself back in 1931, and what was experienced in that and the following year vividly comes to life in "The Yellow Cruise," the Little Theater's first venture in "first run" pictures more or less of current vintage.

While this 85-minute travelogue possesses all the necessary attributes for compelling entertainment, the length of the picture has somewhat attenuated the power of such scenes as the actual mountain crossing, the trouble with the Chinese revolutionists and others.

As a detailed chronicle of a truly remarkable venture, "The Yellow Cruise" contributes an important document to science, but as general, mass entertainment it is slow and episodic. The carrying of both portions of the expedition—central Asia being "attacked" from both the East and the West, the two parties to meet at a pre-arranged point—does not particularly hinder the thread of narrative.

Presented in an introduction and three parts—"Eastward Ho," "The Roof of the World," "China in Turmoil"—the actual mountain crossing is perhaps the most continually thrilling portion of the picture, with the expeditionary force encountering almost insurmountable difficulties in putting wheeled vehicles where none had ever been before.

Description is read by one whose name we did not catch and where on-the-spot French recording is used, English titles have been appended.

Photographically the record is excellent, discounting, of course, the obviously adverse conditions under which many of the scenes had to be shot. The musical accompaniment is good.

In short, "The Yellow Cruise" is a picture which particular followers of geography and exploration can ill afford to miss but a picture which will have sparse appeal to those whose tastes run along the lines of more orthodox cinematographic entertainement.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra presents Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo in Constitution Hall Wednesday night with Efrem Kurtz as conductor. Program: "Swan Lake," an abridged version of "Lebedinoie Ozero." Op. 20 (Chaikovski), "Symphonie Fantastique" (Berlioz), Polovetzkian dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin).

Since there are always a number of balletomanes in every community, one wonders how many in the large assemblage had come to enjoy appreciatively the mere technique of dancing, and how many were attracted by the spectacle. For the ballet has a fascination for two separate kinds of audience. The one finds satisfaction in the music and color, the beauty and choreographic invention; the other derives its pleasure from the difficult feats performed with grace, the excitement of movement both swift and controlled, the kaleidoscopic pictures on the stage.

There is still another small class who view the ballet almost as an esoteric cult to which they have been initiated. Their high priest is Diaghilev, whose present deputy is Col. W. de Basil. They extract a peculiar delight which outsiders cannot share for want of the specialist's knowledge. And all these varieties of viewpoint exist in every ballet audience, which does not demand intellectual stimulation or spiritual exaltation, but the excitation of the senses.

Somewhat cramped on the stage and discommoded by the absence of theatrical adjuncts, the Monte Carlo Company nevertheless succeeded in giving spirited and satisfactory performances. The adaptability which they showed toward the improvised conditions deserves praise, for their routine, in such a familiar number as the Polovetzkian dances for example, seemed little disturbed.

The two ballets new to Washington were "Swan Lake" and the Berlioz symphony. The former is in its choreography and its music 60 years old, and a perfect sample of the type of entertainment devised by Marius Petipa for the Imperial Russian court. The formal arrangement, the alternation of pas seuls and pas de deux with ensembles numbers, and the strictly technical limitations of the dancing form is known as the classical tradition.

With the "Symphonie Fantastique" is involved an entirely different method, that of interpretative choreography. This is the third symphony which Leonid Miassin has attempted to present in visual terms, and it is without question his most effective accomplishment. He was aided by the fact that the composer outlined a definite story for the music, but even then he had the onerous task of making the program more detailed and realistic.

The least successful movement of the symphonic picturization is the first wherein such musically vivid emotions as depression, joyous elation, despair and delirium have to be translated into bodily motions. Miassin has resorted to personification and peopled the stage with groups of dancers symbolizing Gaiety, Reverie, Melancholy and Passion. The resulting choreography lacks clarity, and the suggested emotions are not evoked by the movements of the groups. Neither is the passionate eloquence of the music carried out in what the eye sees.

The second movement, in which the dreaming hero catches glimpses of his elusive beloved one in a ballroom, is largely routine, and saved from conventionality by the humor injected. In the difficult third movement, "Scene in the Fields," Miassin has succeeded remarkably in creating a dream-like atmosphere and a pastoral quality. Here the union of the fantastic and the actual which prevails in dreams has been caught; the utterly improbable and the coldly factual are set in juxtaposition.

In the fourth movement, the march to the scaffold, Miassin has rested confidently upon the dramatic strength of the music and allowed his imagination to embroider a running commentary. Perhaps the theatricality of some of the episodes is too obvious, but they are excellently worked out and effective.

The best movement, considered as choreographic invention, is the witches' sabbath, where the grotesque and the comic, the eerie and the repellent elements of a phantasmagoria are nicely blended. There is nothing terrifyingly diabolic about it, but the grimness of the suggested horror in a deranged mind has a forceful effect upon the nerves.

The principal criticism one would make of Miassin's conception of the symphony is that he has made it more like the surrealism of Andre Breton than like the grandiose romanticism of Hector Berlioz. The choreography does not stay in the Byronic epoch, but slips occasionally into the twentieth century.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold

That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Did you ever feel as though some one had handed you the world on a platter? You'll have one of those moments when a modern Estate gas range comes into your kitchen! For Estate ranges introduce Modern Gas Cookery . . . as different from old-fashioned cooking as day is from night.

You'll find yourself with a new kind of broiler that seals in more flavor in all grilled foods . . . and broils in double quick time.

You'll find oven tending a thing of the past. For the ovens on these new ranges are self-regulating. A turn of a dial gives you the degree of temperature you want . . . maintains it steadily. Baking or roasting failures are almost impossible!

You'll find these modern Estate ranges have special new simmer burners, too . . . an added economy in all top-cooking at low temperatures.

The manufacturers of Estate ranges are anxious that you learn all about these modern features and have cooperated to make this sale one of the biggest saving events of the year.

The range exactly suited to your requirements is on display at our showrooms. Stop in and inspect it today!

There's nothing like GAS for..

FRYING

Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat under the skillet—numberless heat variations. Gas gives them all!

ROASTING

Gas gives you the oven ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, important to accomplish this result.

BAKING

Successful baking results require an unlimited range of oven temperatures evenly distributed. That's why Gas assures light, evenly browned cakes, pies and breads.

BROILING

Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

BOILING

Faster! Gas brings foods to a boil in 2/3 or less the time of other fuels. Because it is more flexible, it gives you the exact degrees of heat you need.

Louis Caldwells Hosts To Foreign Radio Group

Home Provides Colorful Background for Function Attended by Hundreds From Capital's Social, Diplomatic, Professional World.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A setting artistic and gracious in every detail was provided yesterday by the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell for the reception at which they entertained several hundred guests in honor of the representatives of European broadcasting companies who have been in Washington this week.

The guests entered a hallway which was like a low balcony, overlooking the long, colorful drawing room on one side and with the entrance to the dining room on the same level, at the other side. Gold and rose brocade thrown over the wrought-iron railing gave the dominant color note in the rooms. There was warmth in the heavy rose-red hangings at the windows, light in the gold reflection of the lamps and a blending of many tones in the rug, pictures and furnishings.

On the piano at the far end of the room were candelabra with white candles, standing out against a colorful painting—one of several done by Mrs. Marion Raulston, noted California artist, who is a friend of the Caldwells.

Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell received at the foot of the little stairway leading from the entrance balcony to the drawing room. Mrs. Caldwell wore a gown of black satin, simply made with a round neckline and long, flowing sleeves and a corsage of orchids, bringing out the white of her hair.

Some of the guests went from the drawing room to the dining room and others to the library beyond. There book shelves reaching the ceiling, with its broad beams, were lined with volumes whose bindings gave their own color to the room. Also, bordering the walls at the top, were the crests of all of the allied nations in the World War. Roses, chrysanthemums in shades of rose, white and gold, were used throughout the house and there was also an occasional bouquet of bittersweet.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the latter in a costume of brown, with a brown velvet hat, were among the early arrivals, with the French Minister of Communications and Mme. Jardillier. The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, and the Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boettisher also arrived early.

Mme. de Laboulaye was among the ladies of the Diplomatic Corps who assisted at the tea table. Others included Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, who wore a gown of gray crepe with a small black velvet hat and veil; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, who was dressed in a black costume brightened by a jeweled choker; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, in a black suit with gay green and white taffeta bow at the neck; Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway; Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland; Signora Copola, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy; Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy; Mrs. Thomas Burke, who wore a gown of black with gold threads; Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, whose friends were all expressing their delight at seeing her able to be out again and who wore a black dress with a pearl trimming at the neck and black hat with a small pearl ornament; Mrs. Luther Johnson, in a frock of powder blue lace; Mrs. Merle Thorpe in black, and Mrs. Thad Brown in a red velvet gown trimmed in gold; Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Warren Wheaton, and Mrs. Martin Codell in a gown of black velvet trimmed in gold.

The Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted, was in conversation with Chamberlain C. Lerche, president of the Danish Broadcasting Co., a little man with keen dark eyes and many years of distinguished accomplishment to his credit, who says he enjoys dancing more than any other recreation. In the group with them were Mr. Arthur R. Burrows, secretary general of the International Broadcasting Union, and M. Maurice Rambert, president of the International Broadcasting Union as well as head of the Swiss Broadcasting Co. Mr. Arthur Gvozdanovia, vice president of the Yugoslavian Broadcasting Co., was also among the noted foreign visitors there.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, with Mrs. Grosvenor, was greeting friends in the library during the early part of the function, as were the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitre. The Ambassador of Turkey, the Minister of Switzerland, the Minister of Finland and the Minister of Norway were in the drawing room and the library while Mme. Ertegun, Mme. Peter, Mme. Jarnefelt and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne took their turns at the tea table.

One of the amazing things about the tea table, incidentally, was that the great plates of sandwiches and cakes never seemed to diminish. Like the widow's cruse of oil, the more taken away, the more there seemed to be—and every cake and every sandwich had been made in the house, the hostess confided to a friend who remarked not only that they were delicious, but also on their great abundance.

In addition to members of the Diplomatic Corps, there were many members of the newspaper fraternity and of the legal profession among the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gates were there, Mrs. Gates in a gown of black with gold lace yoke and sleeves, and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Wren, Mrs. Wren wearing a frock with dubonnet yoke and front panel (their daughter, Mrs. Trustin Brown Boyd, who has been visiting them, has just returned to her home in St. Louis), Mr. and Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mr. and Mrs. William McCracken, she in a gray suit with rust-colored blouse and rust and green hat; Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Haley, the U. S. Minister to Costa Rica and Mrs. Leo Sack, Mrs. Harold LaFount and Mr. and Mrs. George Romney.

Miss Mary Cootes Entertains Friday At Costume Dance

Washington society hasn't been invited to a large costume party since last winter, when Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Morgan entertained at one in their home on Massachusetts avenue, so members of society will welcome the news that Miss Mary Cootes, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, of Alexandria, is planning to give one on Friday, December 4.

She is giving the dance in honor of her brother, Mr. Merritt Cootes, who will arrive November 18 from Shanghai, where he has been vice consul for several years. After a vacation of two months, he will go to Havana for his next diplomatic post. Miss Cootes left Washington yesterday to spend the weekend with Miss Anne Warren, of Boston.

Miss Lillian Drake Wed to Mr. Slaby

Only relatives and close friends were present at the marriage of Miss Lillian Drake, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Harley D. Drake, of Gallaudet College, to Mr. Rudolph Thomas Slaby, which took place yesterday in the rectory of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, the Rev. John K Cartwright officiating.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a gown of sapphire blue with black accessories and a shoulder corsage of roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Leigh C. Kenyon, who wore a gown of magenta. Mr. William L. Thorburn was best man.

Immediately after the wedding the couple left on a short trip to New York. They will return to Washington to make their home.

Flournoys to Entertain Miss McGehee, Finance

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Flournoy are entertaining tomorrow at a cocktail party in compliment to Miss Lucile McGehee and Dabney Waters, Lieut. (J. C.) U. S. N., whose marriage will take place Monday, November 23, in St. Alban's Church.

Assisting Mrs. Flournoy, who is the former Miss Margaret Ann Bastable, will be Mrs. James Lemon, sister of the bride-to-be, Miss Vivian Reed, Miss Clair Atkins and Miss Nancy Waters, a sister of Lieut. Waters.

Sigma Tau Plans Dance In Broadmoor Tonight

Sigma Tau Gamma Sorority will have its fall dance this evening at the Broadmoor, in Connecticut avenue, from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

The committee on arrangements includes Miss Carl Louise Johnson, chairman; Miss Justina Di Francesco, Miss Clara Haneke and Mrs. A. Gwinner Miller.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

The German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, entertained German broadcasting officials now in Washington at a tea yesterday afternoon at the embassy.

The Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios and their daughter, Senorita de los Rios, were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by Mrs. Howell Moorhead. Later she took her guests to the performance of the Ballet Russe in Constitution Hall.

Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams, who spent the summer at their home in Pueblo, Colo., have returned to their apartment in the Wardman Park.

Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and their daughters, the Misses Virginia and Martha Bacon, will sail November 21 for a cruise to Central American ports. They will return December 14.

Lord Duveen, art connoisseur of New York and London, has leased the apartment of Mrs. George Marye at 1785 Massachusetts avenue for the winter. He will be joined later in the season by Lady Duveen.

Mrs. Marye will spend the next few months at the Georgetown home of her daughter and son-in-law, Commander and Mrs. William Thomas, who are in China until Christmas.

Donna Del Balzo Home for Visit.

Donna Francesca Del Balzo, of Milan, the former Miss Frances Miller, arrived in New York yesterday on the Rex to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Miller. Before her marriage last spring in Italy, she visited frequently in Washington.

M. Andre Geraud-(Pertinax) who will speak at the opening meeting of the Town Hall Sunday evening, and Mme. Geraud will be guests of honor at a small and informal party to be given after the lecture by Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary at their home in Cleveland Park. M. Geraud is a French journalist of note.

Miss Audrey Campbell entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at her residence in Kalorama road, former home of Senator and Mrs. Warren J. Barbour of New Jersey, which she has leased for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Armistead A. Peter 3d, of Washington, are at the Commodore Hotel in New York City.

Miss Pauline de Brodes entertained recently at an informal soiree at Wardman Park Hotel, at which Miss Mary Newell, well-known lecturer on art, spoke on the sculpture of the new Government buildings.

Gertrude Pearson to Make Bow Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pearson have issued invitations to the debut of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Pearson, who will be presented to society at a tea from 4:30 until 7 o'clock on Thanksgiving Day at the Pearson home on Wyoming avenue.

Miss Aileen Havlin Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harris, entertained at luncheon and a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Betty Cocke, yesterday in her home on Woodland Drive. Miss Cocke's marriage to Mr. Peyton Brown Winfree, of Lynchburg, Va., will take place on Thanksgiving Eve. Miss Harris will be maid of honor for Miss Cocke.

Grand Duchess Marie, of Russia, is president of the committee for the military ball to be given Tuesday evening in the Gold Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel by the Washington post of the Russian Veterans' Society of the World War.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mayfield, of Washington, are spending several weeks at the Pinecrest Inn, in Pinehurst, N. C.

Son Born Armistice Day To John F. Sweeneys

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sweeney are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Thomas Bell Sweeney 4th., on Armistice Day at Garfield Hospital.

Mrs. Sweeney is the former Miss Alicia Rodgers, daughter of Mrs. Philip Coffin. The baby is the first grandchild, both of the Sweeneys and of Mrs. Coffin.

Mr., Mrs. R. G. Park, Jr., Return for Winter

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray Park, jr., and their daughter, Miss Ann Wentworth Park, have returned to their home, 1913 S street, for the winter, after spending the summer at Cloverly, West Chester, Pa.

Miss Park's engagement to Mr. Percy Smedley Darlington was announced on July 4 but no date has yet been set for the wedding.

THE MERRY WHIRL

by MARYLYN

How many women and girls—if you asked them—would say that they had ever, for even the shortest moment, harbored the idea of changing the color of their hair? Probably quite a few, and we dare say that the only reason some of them do not experiment a bit is that there is always the horror of changing back again should the new shade prove unbecoming or too garish.

However, Gertie Pearson, whose own soft brown bangs and curls are completely satisfactory, let us hasten to add—had an unusual and amusing opportunity the other day. Being one of the buds of this year, she has been preparing for the forthcoming Black and White Ball at the Mayflower, as have all the little girls. One of the requirements for this gay annual affair is white locks. The desired effect has been produced by wigs, powder and silver shellac.

The latter two are very nice, but demand a visit to the beauty parlor early the next day, so many a young lady with important dates for the day following the B. & W. had taken up the wig idea and among them Gertie. So—to get on with the story—she was trying on some and just as one is more than likely to try on hats of styles and color very different from the one in mind, she found herself all fitted into a gorgeous auburn affair.

The young lady, whose laughter is tinkling and most infectious, took one look at herself then had everyone else in the shop laughing with her, not at her, because the effect was really very pretty. Too bad we haven't any redheaded debs this year.

However, don't be alarmed, she is not going to turn up in any but the proper white top-piece at the ball.

* * * *

Nina Patridge, very lovely in gray, her small telescope hat fashioned of the same material as her coat frock, and her dark hair arranged in soft wings on her cheeks, was having luncheon with Philip Broad, of the British Embassy, and Jim Park when we saw her the other day.

* * * *

The world is a small place and it is just this that makes the world perk up and become interesting just when all else is turning into the hum-drumity life. Having just met the attractive Mrs. Paul Buckley yesterday and exchanged the usual polite phrases, we continued on our way until told that she was the daughter of the Federico Mejia, the former Minister from El Salvador, and was returning to her homeland very soon. Not having heard anything of the war-time minister from that country, Salvador Sol, and his lovely wife, Eva, we rushed back to inquire for them and discovered that she was the niece of the Sols. Miguel, who went about with the then Trixie Henderson and her little group, is now married and living in Mexico City, where he is deeply interested in aviation. A page from the past, we call it, and what a happy one to turn to.

Diplomat to Entertain.

The Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Smith have issued invitations for a tea on Friday, November 20, in honor of Capt. Francisco Lajour, A. R. A., in their apartment at the Wardman Park.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

College Youth Makes Love to Girl In Person But Never in Letters; She Asks What to Think.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am very much in love with a boy, but I don't know whether or not he really loves me. Whenever he is with me he tells me so, but now he is away at school and he never mentions it in his letters. He comes home every few weeks and always asks me for dates, and then everything is all right. But when he is away he seems a little indifferent.

* * * *

When I first started having dates with him he told me that he thought I was too young, and sometimes I think the difference in our ages is what causes him to try to be indifferent. He is six years older than I am, which causes us to belong to different groups.

I have his ring and I haven't taken it off since he placed it on my finger a long time ago. Wearing it makes me think of him a lot. Do you think I should stop wearing it? I have started to take it off several times but I hate to do that, because I've worn it so long; and even without it I would find it hard to forget him.

* * * *

Once he told me that he was gradually losing his self-control. By that he meant that he was wavering from his original decision that he shouldn't go with me; and now I sometimes think that it is his endeavors to re-establish his self-control that causes him to seem indifferent. He really has an awful lot of self-control.

I know that you will tell me what is best to do, so I am leaving everything in your hands. But forgetting would be awfully difficult. I go with other boys, but none of them can compare with this one.

UNDECIDED.

Possible Explanations.

DEAR UNDECIDED: The smart thing to do here is to stop wearing your heart on your sleeve, so far as the young man is concerned. If you have been writing him effusive or ardent love letters, change the nature of your communications immediately to match his own. He may have enough practical common sense and self-restraint to realize the unwisdom of committing his sentiments to writing, and be suiting his correspondence to the dictates of his intellect, rather than his heart. That might explain why he makes love to you in person, but never in writing.

* * * *

On the other hand, it is possible the bond between you is more physical infatuation than spiritual compatibility. And for that reason, he might when in your company find himself moved to a greater ardor than he feels for your personality in your absence.

* * * *

If you have the strength of character and courage to gamble on the possible happy outcome of this not-very-clearly-defined courtship, and by that I mean the ability to play the game with the understanding that you are prepared to face and accept defeat and unhappiness if he finally announces that the courtship has been a mistake, then keep his ring and continue to see him and write to him. If, however, you half suspect that your heart would be completely broken if called upon to give him up later on, then it might be best to put an end to the uncertain relationship right now. But whatever else you do, develop a protective veneer of self-containment to match the boy's provocative indifference. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

ORANGE NUT BREAD

Squeeze juice from one large orange into a measuring cup, add boling water to fill the cup, and turn into mixing bowl. Put orange rind through food chopper and add enough raisins or dates to the ground orange to fill the cup. Add to the orange juice and water and stir in half cup sugar, 2 tablespoons shortening and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Add 1 egg, beaten until light, then add 2 cups flour, sifted with 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder and half teaspoon salt. Beat thoroughly and add half cup walnuts broken in pieces. Bake in greased pan for 50 minutes at 350 F.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By

Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

We may recall from the physiology of our school days that the lungs lie in what is called the pleural sack. It is a double walled affair and may be likened to two rubber balloons, the smaller inside the larger. The space between the outer wall of the smaller and the inner wall of the larger represents the pleural cavity. In man this contains no air hence when the chest expands (in breathing) air rushes in with no resistance. In other words the pressure of the atmosphere fills the lungs.

If we are in normal health there is but a small amount of thin secretion between these two layers. This keeps the membranes moist and glistening and prevents adhesions. Whenever a segment becomes inflamed, however, it will give off a large amount of fluid and occasionally the folds will adhere to one another. The rubbing together of the irritated surfaces, which will take place at every breath, is attended usually with severe pain (pleurisy). This is the "stitch" in the side that is so often complained of.

May Occur Suddenly.

Now and then we force air into the pleural space for the purpose of artificially collapsing the lung in order to compel it to rest. This plan, called pneumothorax, is used in combating tuberculosis and was suggested and put into operation by an Italian, Forlanini, and by John B. Murphy, of Chicago. A needle is passed through the outer layer of the pleura thus permitting air to enter the chest.

Sometimes such a condition comes on spontaneously in apparently healthy individuals; or again it may be the result of long standing tuberculosis in which an ulcerated area ruptures through the pleura. The onset is sudden and may follow a fall, or a blow. It has occurred also in association with asthma. There may be a distended bit of lung tissue with greatly ballooned-out air cells close to the pleura, and increased pressure may tear the latter.

How does the patient behave in such circumstances? If the rent is slight there will be some pain and shortness of breath, probably accompanied by coughing. If air persists in entering the space the pain and the collapse of the lung may continue frequently with alarming symptoms. The patient may become cyanotic (bluish about the face), restless, and anxious. A bit of blood tinged sputum may be expectorated.

As a rule little difficulty will be encountered in recovery if the patient's apprehension can be allayed and absolute rest enforced. The air will absorb, the rupture heal, and within a few weeks the lung again will be able to expand fully.

Ordinarily little treatment is needed save rest in bed for a few days. If the opening closes the lungs will re-expand rapidly. If there is intense pain or breathlessness a narcotic may be required. In most cases the physician will strap the affected side promptly with fairly wide strips of adhesive to immobilize the chest wall. The patient is instructed to take light breaths and, if possible, to avoid coughing.

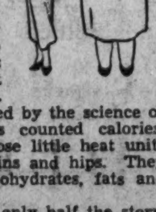
Easy Ways of Reducing

A LOVELY brunette of the screen is reported to have said that beauty standards call for athletic waistlines, which doesn't mean that you have anything to brag about if yours is pudgy with fat. Even if the exaggerated, slim waistlines is passe, slenderness and litheness are still essential for figure loveliness.



It's the new 1936 fashion to count the excess pounds of fat you add on. Weight controlled by the science of nutrition means counted calories. Calories are those little heat units that add up chins and hips. They really are carbohydrates, fats and proteins.

But they are only half the story. For the diet must meet all nutritional requirements; that is, no reduction in protein, minerals and vitamins. These protective elements are the mainstay of a reducing diet.

It is so easy to control the calories. Consider the meal shown in the illustration. With all of the trimmings it counts up to 1,131 calories. Why, that's enough for a whole day, for a woman requires only between 1,000 and 1,200 calories daily for safe reducing. By just cutting down the trimmings, you eat the same nice meal but you take only 597 calories. Now, isn't that a pleasant, easy way to reduce?

This and many other meals are fully described in our new 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake." It counts calories for you.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Sleeves Shorter, Boleros Evident In Winter Styles

Heavy black cloque silk fashions this short-sleeved bolero dinner suit. Blouse and collar are red, green and yellow

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

BARE YOUR ELBOWS if you would be smart at the cocktail hour or dinner! Arms above the cocktail bar or dinner table are now exposed, except perhaps for the decoration of numerous bracelets. This doesn't mean that long sleeves are entirely relegated to the background, but it does indicate that short sleeves are newer—and, for the moment at least, considered very chic.

For dinner and cocktails, the Spanish influence is evident in smart little bolero jackets topping long skirts of the same color. Blouses in this instance are fashioned of bright-patterned or gayly striped chiffon, lame or novelty silks. A modern note here, is the short sleeve with broad-shoulder treatment. Belts or sashes either repeat the color of the skirt and blouse, or introduce a third bright tone for dramatic contrast.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 12.

THIS IS, obviously, the day to walk under a ladder, open your parasol in the house, invite your spouse to toss his iron hat onto the bed and invite 12 pals in for bridge, you being the 13th member to pass the cozy little sandwiches and break your best chinaware.

ALICE HUGHES.

You are thus assured of a safe and pleasant issue to all the day's activities.

If, on the other hand, you stay quietly at home, perhaps engaging in uplifting conversation with your clergyman, there will be an earthquake, or at the very least the chimney will catch on fire.

This is not the snap opinion of a hurried, dithering newspaperwoman. It is the teaching of history throughout the ages.

* * * *

There is at least one annual story here that must be written (Did I say one?) and that is the tale of faithful, helpful Kathleen Harding, who since 1920 has played the piano while the young hopefuls of the Metropolitan Opera School point their toes—one, two, up!

* * * *

The amiable Kathleen has seen 'em all come and go. She has watched the school change from a classical institution based on the teaching and precept of the great Mme. Cavalazzi to a place that even caters to "employed people" who want a spot of grace and poise in their business and to shed a few pounds weekly by means of the terpsichorean art. Too, many a famous trouper pointed the toe daintily there—Mae Murray, Clifton Webb, Reginald Owen, to name but three.

* * * *

The thing that murders Kathleen today is the loose notions in the matter of rehearsal clothes. "Mme. Cavalazzi insisted on tights and corsets and pink satin bodices," she says. "I am glad she's not here to see the rags the girls wear today—these 'Grecian' things and rompers!" So, for Kathleen Harding's sake, am I. Yet once a year I never fail to make the perilous, rickety elevator trip to what they still call "the roof stage," just to see the youngsters doing their elementals, while Kathleen taps out the tunes in perfect tempo. It's a quick dive into the days when ballet was ballet!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The ineffable Beatrice Lillie, that Canadian-born clown who now seems peculiarly our property, is going to play little Eva—which should be something, in any language — in the forthcoming show which is to star herself and the outrageous Bert Lahr. It is to be called "The Show Is On." And who is tutoring Auntie Bea in the dear little part but Producer Vincente Minnelli himself—a brilliant clothes designer and stage director whose parents were troupers and who was practically born in a wardrobe trunk himself.

* * * *

I never lunch at a fancy hotel but I think how droll even the prettiest women look in these quaint little peaked hats so prevalent this year. For instance, at the Ritz the other day, Mrs. Orson Munn, of the Munns, was stowing away the elegant grub, and from her Schiaparelli hat the face of a silver fox was staring right at me! I'm afraid I spilled crumbs all over the nice napery—which shows what a hat can do these days! And, on the other hand, at a nearby table I saw Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt lunching alone, under a big hat with a brim. It may not have been stylish in the eyes of Paris, but at least it didn't frighten a girl out of her scallops and tartare sauce with a fox's face peering at her . . .

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1936

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Jobless Census

The Civil Service Commission will be requested to hold a special examination for about 4,000 clerks of various sorts to work in this city on the proposed unemployment census, according to plans of the Bureau of Census.

The examination, which will be similar to exams held before all major censuses, will qualify persons only for the special census job and will not make them eligible for other civil service appointments. The average number of workers to be taken on in this city is estimated around 2,000 with about 4,000 or so at the peak.

No civil service standards of any sort are to be set up for the 21,000 field workers. This was explained as due to the fact that these field enumerators will work for only 15, 30 or, at the most, 60-day periods. The entire country is to be divided up into enumerating areas. Efforts are to be made to secure the services of supervisors and enumerators who did good work in previous censuses.

The figure of 25,000 employes for the entire census project is apt to be reduced, depending on how detailed a census schedule is adopted. If the suggestion of some officials for a simplified census form is followed the number probably will drop below the 20,000 mark. Officials hope to start the enumerating by spring and have the first results made public three months after.

The results of the Gallup poll on whether married women with husbands capable of supporting them should have jobs, to be published in Sunday's Post, will prove a surprise—and shock—to Section 213 opponents.

'Labor Woman'

One of the more ardent Social Security Board unionists is still telling the story of her strange experiences as a "big labor woman" in New York. It was the night that President Roosevelt was speaking at Madison Square Garden and our unionist, unable to gain admittance, took refuge in one of the nearby cafes.

Standing alongside her at the bar, was a maritime striker and our unionist was soon expressing sympathy. As the evening wore on other unionists joined in, the discussion spread to other fields of labor troubles.

Finally our New Deal unionist decided to call it a night and went for her hat and coat. She found the hat-check girl weeping and asked what the trouble was. The girl was reluctant to say but opened up when several of the patrons assured her that our New Deal unionist was a "big labor woman from Washington." Other hat-check girls gathered to tell their troubles and soon our "big labor woman" found herself the target of a multitude of grievances.

"Why not go to the manager and protest?" suggested someone to our unionist who enjoying herself hugely, agreed. When she got to the manager's office door she found one girl, bubbling with excitement.

"You're the big labor woman from Washington, aren't you?" she exclaimed. "The manager heard you were coming and just beat it."

Dime Novels

That description in last Sunday's Post of "Decollete Washington," the yellow-backed satire on life in the Capital in the 1890's fascinated us so that we dropped in on V. Valta Parma, head of the Library of Congress' rare book division to see what else he had in that line. We were pleasantly surprised to find one of the finest collection of dime novels.

Browsing through the collection was like meeting a host of childhood friends. There were Nick Carter, Horatio Alger, Jesse James, the Merriwell family, Buffalo Bill, Deadwood Dick, the Liberty Boys of 76, Old King Brady and Young Wild West, all of whom had a great deal to do with molding our character. Young Wild West, whose long blonde locks were a challenge to scalp-minded Indians, in particular, was a great influence and we used to emulate his nonchalant way of walking about with his arms folded across his breast. (Now that we've outgrown him we slouch about with our hands in our pockets).

The dime-novel craze was started back in 1860 by Frank Beadle, a shrewd fellow who knew his public about as well as Barnum. At the first signs of competition, Beadle got one of his employes, a Frank Starr, to start a new series of dime novels and capture the more fickle Beadle readers. Beadle, however, wasn't infallible. One afternoon, showing a friend through his plant, he pointed to his shipping clerk, a George Munro, and exulted:

"That's the kind of clerk you want, an Englishman who is always satisfied with his position."

The following year Munro was Beadle's most formidable competitor, having originated the Old Sleuth series. Competition in the dime novel was conducted along cut-throat lines with each publisher imitating the other fellow's heroes. Old Sleuth was followed by a host of detectives, including Old Cap Collier, Old King Brady and Nick Carter; Young Wild West was always trying to kill more Indians than Buffalo Bill (whose stories incidentally were ghost written), in virtue and bravery Frank Merriwell was hard put to match Fred Fearnot, while Jack Wright and Franke Reade outcrazed one another in weird inventions.

They chased one another around the world in weird, fish-looking submarines in much the fashion of the recent three-reporter airplane race, and when one invented a steam-engine man (the steam would belch forth out of a stove pipe hat) that played havoc with Montana rustlers, the other had a "revenue hawk" with a machine gun under each wing that ruined the future of hundreds of hill billies.

Like modern movie producers the dime novelists had a way of giving a successful hero a family and some of the more successful heroes had more sequels than Tarzan. The novelists also went in for euphonious titles like Derringer Dick, the Man With the Drop, or Col. Coldsteel and His Lucky Seven; Barney the Bold, or Only an Irish Lad, and Dashing Delany, or Foremost in the Fray.

Unfortunately all the exhibits are lodged in the rare book room and aren't easily accessible to the public. However, we've tried to induce Parma to put a lot of the novels on exhibit and if enough persons call him, he probably will.

Suit Is Likely On Abattoirs' Enlargement

Even if It Is Withheld Commissioners Due to Reject Plea.

Roosevelt Assists Foes of Expansion Plan at Ickes' Request.

Formal rejection of the application of Adolf Gobel, Inc., for a building permit to enlarge its abattoir in the Northeast or the filing of a suit to enjoin the District Commissioners from granting the permit appeared likely last night at the end of a day of conferences.

President Roosevelt's entry into the municipal controversy on the side of opponents of the slaughterhouse marked the high light of the day's parleys in one of which the Commissioners decided to let the courts settle the problem.

Secretary Ickes, who made the first move to block the Gobel plant because of a PWA housing development in the vicinity, enlisted the President's aid during a call at the White House.

Meanwhile Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal was assured the aid of an attorney for the PWA, and Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, in pending or new litigation to bar issuance of the permit.

One of the likely moves is that the PWA will file suit to restrain the Commissioners from granting the permit, thus relieving the District of the responsibility of deciding the issue at once. The pending litigation in District Supreme Court, instituted by the Gobel Co., then probably would be combined with the new suit.

Rejection Expected.

Should this suit not be filed, the Commissioners probably will be compelled to act on the report of its special committee at its regular meeting today.

It is expected they will reject the application in such an event.

Argument on the Gobel petition for a writ of mandamus is scheduled for next Tuesday.

As the District in its answer pointed out that the matter had been referred to a special committee for investigation and so contended the action was premature, it will now be necessary for the Commissioners to act unless they are prevented by another suit.

The special committee advised the Commissioners that they have no alternative but to grant the permit providing specified conditions are met, but two members of the group dissented and one filed a minority report.

The committee yesterday filed a supplemental memorandum recommending changes in the District zoning regulations which would enable the zoning commission in the future to bar abattoirs and numerous other industries which might affend adjacent residents.

One of the proposed regulations, which will be considered by the commission at a formal hearing on November 24, lists 76 industries which would be barred from second commercial districts, and 31 industries that would require approval of the zoning commission before they could be started or expanded.

New Cemetery Bond Proposal Under Scrutiny

Inquiring into the chances of success in the cemetery business in Washington yesterday, the Securities and Exchange Commission, through its lawyer, attempted to show that the Washington National Cemetery Corporation has little hope of paying back to investors $225,000 it proposes to borrow through a bond issue.

The commission has charged the company with 14 untrue statements of fact in its prospectus. Charles William Banker, vice president of the company, on the stand three hours at SEC headquarters, explained that the misstatements were due to lack of knowledge of registration requirements. He was sure the cemetery would make money.

Joseph Marshall, director of the Washington Better Business Bureau, testifying for the Government, said that Washington now has five highly promotional burial places, but added that so far as he knew the Washington National Cemetery was in business to sell lots for burial and not as real estate speculations.

J. B. Irvine, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Health Department, was summoned to refute Banker's declaration that there were more than 10,000 burials a year in the District. Irvine said there were only about 8,500 deaths here a year, of which 3,200 were colored and ineligible for burial in white cemeteries. He added 27 per cent of the whites were buried at distant points, while 370 of the remainder were cremated and 564 bodies a year were given to medical schools.

John Small is sitting as trial examiner. Washington National Cemetery is located in Suitland road, near Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Farmer, of Gainesville, Is Hit-and-Run Victim

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 12.—Struck by a hit-and-run motorist, Whitney Sutpin, prominent Gainesville farmer, was in critical condition at Fauquier County Hospital here tonight.

Physicians said he had compound fractures of his right leg and his skull, internal injuries and concussion of the brain.

The accident occurred on the Haymarket-Gainesville road.

pledges totaling $400,511. This was the unit's official figure, although Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, vice chairman, later reported an additional $5,000 contribution.

In a brief report of his group's activities, Tumulty lauded his coworkers, explaining: "It is not an easy task—we have battered at some very hard walls."

Pledges thus far have brought the Special Assignment Unit 70.68 per cent of its quota.

Next to report was the Group Solicitation Unit. Vice Chairman John L. Vandergrift announced a total of $33,066.13, or 8.18 of its quota.

The Governmental Unit has raised $37,518, or 5.2 per cent of its quota, according to a report by Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland.

The Metropolitan Unit was reported by Chauncey G. Parker, jr., to have raised $18,764.50, or 10.19 per cent of its quota.

There were no reports from the Capital or Unassigned units.

On the official Chest bulletin board stretching across the ballroom wall, the grand total to date was listed as $487,359.63. To this was added the informal $5,000 announcement from Mrs. Goldsmith.

Gifts Reported.

Among the larger gifts reported yesterday were Lansburgh and Bro., $5,000; The Great A. & P. Murals Renew Debate on Site Of Constitution

Archives Building Paintings Raise Point on Transfer of Historic Papers.

Auguring renewal of debate as to the more fitting location of the famous documents they celebrate, two murals depicting life-size portraits of the principals in the drafting of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were unveiled yesterday at the Archives Building.

The paintings, each of which is 14 feet by 34 feet, are the work of Barry Faulkner, of New York. In the one, Thomas Jefferson is submitting the Declaration to John Hancock, presiding officer. The other shows James Madison about to turn the Constitution over to George Washington and the convention.

Placed on the sides of the building's Exhibition Hall, the murals were conceived with the idea that the original Declaration and Constitution would be permanently installed in the same rotunda.

The two priceless documents, however, are still on display in the Library of Congress and an act of Congress probably would be necessary to transfer them to the monumental building built especially to preserve and exhibit old Federal papers, books, records, etc.

Began Under Hoover.

The Archives Building, designed by John Russell Pope, of New York, was begun in the Presidential Administration of Herbert Hoover, who is said to have anticipated the transfer of the Constitution and Declaration and suggested that the exhibition hall be designed and decorated accordingly.

A recessed space in the wall, between the two murals, was put there to accommodate an inscription indicating that the original documents were in the exhibit case below. So far, though, the space is blank and the case is empty.

Dr. Herbert Putman, Librarian of Congress, and Dr. R. O. W. Connor, Archivist of the United States, have persistently resisted all attempts to draw them into discussion of the issue.

The statesmen shown in the paintings were, with few exceptions, members of the most important committees in the Continental Congress and the Constitutional Convention. Those portrayed who were not members of committees were selected by Faulkner because they were men of strong influence.

Several years of painstaking research, as well as many months of labor in his New York studio, were consumed by Faulkner in creating the unique paintings. He consulted many eminent historians before selecting his subjects.

Traffic Victim Dies of Injury; Is 73d Fatality

Two Women Also Seriously Hurt in D. C. Mishaps; Drivers Are Held.

One man died of injuries in a traffic mishap and an elderly woman was injured seriously yesterday when struck by an automobile maneuvering into a parking space.

The latest traffic fatality, which raised the District's total to 73, occurred when Elijah Willbanks, colored, 55, of 939 F street southwest, died in Gallinger Hospital early yesterday.

Willbanks was admitted to the hospital last Saturday after he was knocked down by an automobile on Water street southwest between Eleventh and Twelfth streets. Physicians said the man's condition apparently was not serious and he was treated for lacerations and bruises.

Arthur Thomas Park, 32, of Glen Echo, Md., who police said was the driver of the car, was arrested and released in custody of his attorney to appear at an inquest.

Driver Arrested.

A driver who failed to stop and make his identity known was arrested by police yesterday shortly after he is alleged to have struck Mrs. Clara Wilson, 77, of 3335 Eighteenth street northwest, while moving in a parking space in the 1700 block M street northwest.

Mrs. Wilson was taken to Emergency Hospital by a motorist while police sent a lookout for the vehicle. The woman was treated for a fractured right hip and severe lacerations. Her condition was said to be serious.

Police arrested Harold Ankener, 20, of Clarendon, Va., and charged him with colliding and failing to make his identity known in connection with the accident.

Permit Revoked.

Speeding resulted in the revocation of one out-of-town driver's permit and the suspension of 14 others.

Tony Rich, of Silver Hill, Md., lost his right to operate in the District for driving at 60 miles an hour, while Samuel E. Carpenter, also of Silver Hill, had his license suspended for 45 days for second offense, speed of 48 miles.

Thirty-day suspensions were given to Ellen F. Frankenfield, Riverdale, Md., 48 miles; Arthur E. Harding, Swampscott, Mass., 45 miles; James D. Jackson, Bladensburg, Md., 48 miles; Arthur S. Mackrill, Glen Echo, Md., 44 miles; Robert L. Maguire, Providence, R. I., 50 miles; Thomas E. Morris, Hyattsville, Md., 46 miles; Edward D. Plummer, Manchester, Md., 50 miles; William F. Price, Bethesda, Md., 40 miles, second offense; Albert E. Rich, Baltimore, 45 miles; Elmore H. Sanders, Brooklyn, Md., 42 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to Sidney Gianoly, Lanham, Md., 40 miles; Maurice E. Jenkins, Bethesda, Md., 38 miles; Wilmer T. Ralston, Fairfax, Va., 36 miles.

'Horseless Cars' Parade to Open '36 Auto Show

1898 Vehicle Is the Oldest Entered Yet in Opener of 17th Exhibition.

A cavalcade of the most ancient automobiles left in the Washington area tomorrow will launch the seventeenth automobile show of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, opening in Calvert Exhibit Hall, 2701 Calvert street northwest, opposite the Shoreham Hotel, at 11 a. m. The show will continue through the following Saturday.

The unique pageant of so-called "horseless carriages," will start from Pennsylvania avenue at Fourth street, in front of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, and continue west to Seventeenth street and Connecticut avenue, and north to Calvert street and the auto show. Here, in striking contrast, will be displayed the most comprehensive exhibition of new automobiles yet arranged in the Capital.

Already the American Automobile Association, which is sponsoring the cavalcade in connection with the automobile show, has received a total of 19 entries for the event, in which winners will be awarded gold cups for outstanding performance of the cars and suitability of the occupant's attire. More are expected before the procession begins.

The oldest car entered is an 1898 model. No car can be of later date than 1916. The old-style "gas buggies" are expected to negotiate the trip to the automobile show within an hour. But should trouble arise, towing trucks of the A. A. A. will be on hand to give aid.

9 Bogus Money Suspects Held Here Indicted

U. S. Agents Claim Flow of Spurious Curency Now Is Stopped.

Nine men were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on charges of passing counterfeit Federal Reserve notes in Washington, some of them allegedly having passed spurious notes over a period of more than six months. Secret Service agents believe they have successfully dammed the flow of bogus money into the city through arrest and indictment of the men.

The agents said they had traced much of the counterfeit money found in circulation here to sources in New York, where it was purchased for about $30 (genuine currency) for $100 in bogus bills. The agents conducted a series of raids last summer and on some of the suspects found large amounts of spurious money.

Those indicted were Salvatore Tamorria, James Maimone, Homer Roy Gamble, Leroy Watson, Leroy Ambers, Arrington David Richardson, Erwin H. Udell, Edward Klugman and George L. McCall. Klugman, Udell and McCall are Navy enlisted men stationed at the Bellevue Naval Research Laboratory. A tenth suspect, a 16-year-old boy, is being held in the Receiving Home pending disposition of the charges against the others.

In all 42 indictments were returned to Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court.

Hazen Plans A Contagious Disease Curb

Seeks Law Giving D. C. Right to Hold Patients Till Fully Cured.

Tuberculosis, Other Ills Spread by Sufferers Partly Treated.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of District Commissioners, yesterday directed Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to draft a bill giving District officials power to retain in municipal hospitals patients being treated for contagious diseases.

The bill will be submitted to Congress after it is considered by the Health Department and the District Medical Society.

Aim of the legislation is to prevent patients from quitting municipal hospitals after receiving treatment but before being cured and is directed chiefly at tubercular patients.

Danger Cited.

"Every year many patients at the Tuberculosis Hospital receive two or three months' treatment at the expense of the District and then return home to spread the disease," Hazen said.

"As the law now stands, the District hasn't any authority to compel these patients to remain until cured.

"I think if the District is to pay for treating these persons it should have authority to control them so long as they constitute a threat to the health of others."

The Commissioner also cited syphilitic patients as prone to quit institutions before being cured. He believes the disease could be more quickly brought under control if the proposed legislation becomes a law.

Little Trouble With Others.

The District has comparatively little trouble with patients who are being treated for other communicable diseases because most of them are usually too sick to leave hospitals until past the contagious stage.

The proposed law, however, would restrain them as well as tubercular patients.

The advice of physicians of the Health Department and medical society will be sought before the measure is finally drafted so that the rights of all concerned will be protected, Hazen said.

Gang Shooting Victim Refuses To Give Names

Joseph O'Brien, Brought to Court in Wheel Chair, Faces Contempt.

Refusing to testify before the District grand jury yesterday when he was brought to District Court in a wheel chair, Joseph O'Brien, alleged victim of "revenge" shooting will be haled before Justice Peyton Gordon today to determine whether he shall be held in contempt for refusing to testify or whether he shall be excused.

Amid much excitement O'Brien was taken to the courthouse yesterday where he was to have appeared as a complaining witness against six men who were under police charges of having attempted to put O'Brien "on the spot." He had hardly appeared before the jurors when word went out that he had refused to testify against the men who are charged with "mowing him down" with sawed-off shot guns in the 200 block of Second street southeast, last July.

Ever since then O'Brien has been in the hospital, and physicians have stated he would never again be able to walk without the aid of crutches. Yesterday he had both crutches and a wheel chair to facilitate his entrance and exit from the courthouse.

The men held in connection with the shooting are Charles (Rags) Warring, John W. Sweeney, Clarence L. Ware, Joseph S. Bond, George Frederick Tear and Samuel S. Montgomery.

Officials of the United States attorney's office last night said they would make every effort to compel O'Brien to tell who shot him, and why. They said they had been taken aback by his refusal to tell his story. Harry (Spike) Behrle, who was with O'Brien when he was cut down by a fusillade of shots, also refused to testify and will be arraigned before Justice Gordon, also.

A third man who was with them, William Russell Carpenter, did testify before the grand jury.

Benavente is at present in Barcelona, the Embassy announced.

La Paree Show Presents Revue With 20 in Cast

Lotus Features Gridiron Number; Barnee Offers Dance Novelties.

By Chanticleer.

Fred Astaire wrote a tune last winter called "I'm Building Up to An Awful Letdown." Well, that's what the show at La Paree this week doesn't do. It fairly smashes its way through a fast routine to a grand finale that leaves nothing undone. Its Katherine Behney's Winter Garden Revue—20 persons in the cast, with 12 of them girls of the dancing line.

As you will remember, La Paree is on the search for amateur talent—with the winner already certain of a week's engagement when the contest smoke blows over. First big show with the neophytes comes off next Monday night.

* * * *

Its the "Gridiron Revue" this week at the Lotus. And a timely title it is, too, at this season of the year. Headlining the bill are Vernon and St. Clair in a musical comedy skit and a demonstration of coordination at its best in the art of the ballroom dance; Florence Hodges, in "Stompin' at the Savoy" which means fast moving feet; Maria McGrath, in something new in a toe dance, and Mayo and Sheridan, in soft shoe and rhythm challenge numbers.

First it was just first anniversary week at Casa Grande (Dude Ranch) for Dixie Dyer. But now my spies report wedding bells are in the offing for the little blonde mistress of ceremonies. The floor show this week emphasizes dancing in its varied forms—from the rumba to good old American tap.

* * * *

Barnee is interpreting the No. 1 dance orchestras as they play current hits in the ballroom program at the Shoreham this week. Very neatly done, my lads. Harold Cummings, broadcasting barytone, not only sings to the satisfaction of the patrons but he serves as referee for Anne Sigmon and Stanley Fields in their slam-bang demonstration of table tennis. If you feel you're pretty good at table tennis, Miss Sigmon will be glad to take you on—and the management will give your table a quart of champagne if you win from her. they'll even spot you 10 points.

Johnnie Shaw has been tagging the tunes most frequently in the public eye of approval. He 'lows as how the Cole Porter tunes are the most in demand by the sophisticated: "Easy to Love," "I've Got You Under My Skin" and "Red, Hot and Blue." Spanish music is greatly in demand, too, and Johnnie's Versatile Sextet has mastered an arrangement of Ravel's "Bolero." None other than Tony Nobile, member of the National Symphony, prepared the Shaw arrangement of the famous symphonic number.

Some of the folks around the village seem to feel the second commercial district is not a fittin' place to go for after-dark entertainment. Meaning that the location of Cocoanut Grove has kept some of the night owls away from a very good spot. F'rexample, this week the Grove is spotlighting the famous Rooneys, Pat and Pat 3d, with a revue including two dancing girls. Also a "bevy of beauties" in the traditional manner. It's your own fault if you miss the boat here simply because the address is Fifth and K streets.

Next to Saturday, Sunday is the Maryland Club Gardens' most festive day of the week. Countess Loney started her Sunday afternoon and evening parties about a month ago just as a personal gesture to her friends. They've become so popular now that they're an institution. Each Sunday night the countess serves real Hungarian goulash, as made in her own country. Peggy Day plays and sings—but there's no dancing.

Music note: Jimmy Crandell, singing manager of Brinkley's, broke forth into song one night early this week for the first time since his arrival at Brinkley's. He went there to sing—and found so many managerial duties to attend to that they made him president of the company and he has never sung a note.

Capt. Nick Hope has been added to an already fine cast at Helen Hamilton's Russian Troika. Capt. Hope comes from the Ukraine—and is an accordionist known over the world as the "globe trotter." He comes from Greenwich Village's Village Barn. He's as good an accordionist as he is a globe trotter—and, brothers, he's seen plenty of the world.

Bootlegging Crusade Urged by N.Y. Institute

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Asserting the bootlegging business "is as highly organized since repeal as it was during prohibition," the Institute of Public Administration tonight called for enlargment of law-enforcement agencies.

The institute, announcing the first of a series of conclusions based on a two-year study of the liquor problem, estimated 40,000,000 gallons of untaxed liquor were produced in 1935 as compared with the withdrawal of 82,816,000 gallons of tax-paid spirits.

On the Air Today

WJSV, usually included in all Columbia network major broadcasts, is left out in the cold tonight when Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra open a new series of programs under the auspices of a group of financial institutions of the country.

The principal reason Washington is not on the schedule apparently is the fact no Washington bank is helping defray the costs—which probably are in large figures. The list of stations carrying the series coincides with the list of banks supporting the series.

Stokowski himself will introduce the compositions he has selected for the first program and W. M. Kiplinger, of Washington, and Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, of New York, will make brief talks on financial matters.

If you are one to hear the Philadelphia Orchestra at all odds you might try Columbia stations in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia or St. Louis—all of which are heard in Washington with varying degrees of success. Or just shop around the dial until you locate some station giving satisfactory service.

Fred Allen completely won my affections Wednesday night with his rowdy and effective harpooning of the Maj. Bowes' alleged amateur hour. Allen was cast as Admiral Crow, who forgot that Andiron, N. J., was the honor city despite the fact an ambitious juvenile performer and his equally ambitious mother tried to explain that they were from Andiron and waited to go on as per schedule, without waiting for the admiral to recall the name of the city.

Hasty telephone calls to various possible cities failed at first to gain the name of the honor city. Mobile, for example, told the admiral he already had "honored" that city—and where was the fire chief's helmet that had been loaned him for one day while he was their acting honorary fire chief?

Filled to the last period in the last paragraph with pointed sarcasm and a masterpiece of the gentle art of buffoonery in the Allen manner, the entire piece was a thing of beauty, indeed. I only hope that public officials who have taken shellacked positions on the Bowes bandwagon heard the show that they might hear how the grandstanding sounds to the ordinary listener.

* * * *

Alas, what a life the comedian lives. Fred Astaire this week effectively used a gag which had as its essence the line attributed to Admiral Dewey: "You can take chocolate for yours, but I'll take Manila." A night later Burns and Allen use the same line. Similarly, the situation base of "Girls' Dormitory" is doing noble duty. Last week-end it served as the title basis for two shows by prominent comedians. It will come up again this coming week-end under the title of "Girls' Dormitoreadors."

600 New Golf Courses to Be Built

Program to Mean Jobs for Pro Golfers Over the Country.

P. G. A., Government to Co-operate in New Undertaking.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Between 500 and 600 new jobs for golf professionals are in the making.

Through an arrangement between the Federal Government and the Professional Golfers Association of America, close to 600 new public courses will be built within the next few years, George Jacobus, president of the association, said today. The Government will furnish the funds, with the work to be done with advice from the P. G. A.

Jacobus said the huge project was outlined in several meetings with Government officials and that construction would start within a few months. Under the agreement, the P. G. A. will be consulted as to the locations of the new courses and only members of the P. G. A. will be hired to serve as pros.

To Inspect Sites.

A. W. Tillinghast noted golf architect and P. G. A. consultant, will inspect each of the proposed sites and left today for Hungry Mother Park, Va., for his first assignment under the plan. Tillinghast laid out and supervised the construction of the four 18-hole courses at Beth Page State Park, near Farmingdale, N. Y., the scene of the 1936 national public links championship tournament.

The Beth Page Park layout was built with Government funds and Public Works Administration labor. Tillinghast said the new setup probably would be operated along the same lines, at least in part.

The P. G. A. will be asked for advice on sites to assure that no previously established course or club will suffer in patronage by proximity to the new course.

Local Initiative Counts.

"According to my understanding," Tillinghast said, "any golf course development with Government assistance will depend on initiative by individual communities. The exact percentage of the cost to be borne by the Government is something of which I am not yet certain."

The three-day annual meeting of the association closed today with the election of officers.

Jacobus was reelected president, and Tom Walsh, of Chicago, was named secretary to succeed R. W. (Doc) Treacy, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who resigned. Jack Mackie, of Far Rockaway, N. Y., again was elected treasurer.

The 1937 National P. G. A. tournament will be played at the Pittsburgh, Pa., Field Club May 24-30, inclusive, while the 1937 Ryder Cup matches will be played June 29 and 30 at Southport, England, with the Southport and Ainsdale courses being used

The association named a committee to formulate arrangements to aid disabled and unemployed professionals through the association's benevolent fund.

Virginia Park Head Ignorant of Proposal

Richmond, Va., Nov. 12 (AP).—R. E. Burson, director of Virginia State parks, said tonight he had not been advised of plans of the Federal Government and the Professional Golfers Association to construct any new public courses on State property in Virginia.

An announcement at Chicago said A. W. Tillinghast, golf architect, left today for Hungry Mother State Park, near Marion, to inspect a proposed site for one of approximately 600 new courses proposed under the Government-P. G. A. plan.

Yearling Ace

BILLY RICHARDSON,
Local boy who is making good locally. Richardson, an all-high star at Central High School, will be in the George Washington freshmen's backfield tonight against the Temple freshmen at Griffith Stadium.

Colonial Frosh, Temple's Play Tonight

Temporarily enjoying the spotlight in which their older brothers have basked all season, George Washington University's freshmen tonight will make their only local appearance when they meet Temple University's frosh in Griffith Stadium at 8 o'clock.

Ten former high school captains will see action for the Colonial Cubs with six of them in the starting line-up. They are Quarterback Quinn Collins, from St. George's High, Chicago; Halfback Ralph Zelaska, Monessen, Pa., High; Fullback Jerry "Red" Noonan, Roosevelt High, New York City; Guard Lindsey Gordon, Marceline, Mo., High; Guard Phil Chimento, Monessen, Pa., High, and Center Charlie Quatse, Greensburg, Pa., High. The other four are Guard George Strecker, East St. Louis High; Tackle Bill Hoagland, Erie Kan., High; End Dave Parker, Ozona, Tex., High, and Tackle Allan Hurd, Watseka, Ill., High.

The young G. W.'s attracted considerable notice by running wild against Maryland's freshmen last week, winning 59 to 0. Billy Richardson, former Central High all-high halfback, led the attack. He will start again tonight.

There will be a small admission fee.

Oze Simmons Drills Silently With Iowa

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 12 (AP).—Oze Simmons, storm center of the latest University of Iowa football controversy, worked hard today with an apparently inspired Hawkeye team which ignored the fact that the Negro star had quit for eight hours yesterday.

Neither by word or deed did the players, Coach Ossie Solem or Simmons himself give any indication of an untoward happening.

No word passed between the two on Solem's arrival, although during the course of the bruising defensive scrimmage which followed, the Iowa coach corrected and instructed Simmons several times.

Club Owners Approve Sale Of Browns

Price Is $325,000; Has $175,000 to Build Up Team With.

League Magnates Also Give Assent to Night Games in St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The St. Louis Browns, for years the weak link in the American League, were placed in the care of new owners today.

The transfer, involving the franchise and players, became official when five representatives of the St. Louis purchasing syndicate appeared before club owners of the American League in a special meeting to receive unanimous approval. The syndicate, which purchased the Browns for $325,000 in cash, has been capitalized for $500,000, leaving a balance of $175,000 for development of the team.

The names of 18 syndicate members were revealed. They are headed by Donald Lee Barnes, investment banker, who is slated to become president of the new organization, with William O. De Witt, for 19 years an official of the St. Louis Cardinals organization, to become vice president and general manager of the Browns.

Agree to Night Games.

The American League, after accepting the new St. Louis club backers, agreed to night baseball for the first time. Two years ago when the National League voted approval of night baseball, the American league refused to swerve from its course of playing baseball only during the daytime. But because of pressure from the St. Louis Cardinals, who also use the St. Louis Browns' park, lights will be installed and a few games will be played by the Browns next season after sundown.

New owners of the Browns were to meet with the Cardinal representatives and also with those of the Phil ball estate, which retains possession of the park, and to agree on scheduling a limited number of night games. It is probable that seven games, the same arrangement the National League has in effect since lights were installed at Cincinnati, will be scheduled for the Browns and Cardinals. This schedule, however, will have to be submitted later to the American and National Leagues for approval.

The actual transfer of the St. Louis club to the new syndicate will be effected at St. Louis, prob-

Calumet Dick Scores Like True Favorite in Opening Bowie Feature

Robert Suffers Leg Fracture In Mat Match

Yvon Robert, the handsome French Canadian with the Robert Taylor haircut, suffered a broken left leg last night at Turner's Arena in his unofficial world's championship wrestling match with Cliff Olson, the Terrible Swede, and Olson automatically stepped into possession of a title which two others, Dean Detton and Everett Marshall, also claim.

Robert, risking his championship, and Olson were scheduled to grunt and groan and cut up for two hours or less, but, unfortunately the match lasted only eight minutes—much to the amazement of a howling, pop-eyed mob of 1,500 gathered to see Robert win in a walk.

It was a walk, or what you might call a sidestep, that sent the powerful Robert man down to the canvas and to Emergency Hospital, where attending physicians declared his leg had been badly broken and that he would do no more wrestling for at least two months.

Jump Causes Injury.

Robert and Olson had been feeling out one another meticulously when the climax came with startling and dramatic suddenness. It was even-Stephen during these eight minutes, when suddenly Robert side-jumped to evade a body scissors the Swede attempt to apply, his leg suddenly snaping so audibly even spectators standing at the entrance to the Arena could hear it. With a mighty thump Robert dropped to the mat, but managed to pull his head outside the ring.

The Turner physician was summoned, and Olson, Burns and a handful of concerned spectators carried the "champ" to the dressing room.

Olson Declines Title.

Olson then entered the ring at the request of Referee Burns and declined to accept the decision and the laurels that go with it, requesting a return bout at the Arena.

In the semifinal, scheduled for 30 minutes, Gino Garibaldi forced John Katan to give up in 22½ minutes with a deadly cross-over leg lock. Matros Kirilenko, the Russian Cossack, threw Stan Sokolis in 14 minutes with a body clam. Hy Piers, of Holland, won from Monie Conto, of Philadelphia, with a body scissors in 11 minutes, 15 seconds, and Ed Meske, of Akron, and George McLeod, of Boston, grappled to a draw in a rough 30-minute fracas.

District Umpires Banquet Selves

Marked by its customary live-wire story telling and ribald banter, the annual banquet of the District Umpires Association was held last night at the Schneider Cafe. The arbiters dusted off the plates with alacrity, making roast turkey, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie disappear quicker than they call a third strike. All 17 leagues of The Post Sandlot Association were represented.

President Jimmy Green (in a tuxedo) presided and introduced the toastmaster, Judge Robert E. Mattingly, who, in turn, introduced everybody, from Joe Judge to the bat boy of the Virginia Avenue Athletic Club. The judge was not in a tuxedo.

Among the speakers were Joe Judge, Nick Altrock, Arch McDonald, Dr. G. Harris White, Burt Olmstead, Christian Heurich, jr., Vic Gauzza, president of the National City, Departmental and Federal leagues; James C. Buchanan, president of the Northern Virginia League; Lawrence Langley, president of the Old Dominion League; Jack Tulloch, of the Alexandria Gazette; Cliff Moore, coach of the Western High inter-high baseball champions; Mike Sklar, president of the Sports Center Government League; Charles Miller.

Chanting, with Jack Westrope up, and Mattapony (No. 8) swing into the homestretch ahead of the field in the third race. They finished in that order, Chanting paying a $24.80 mutuel.

Army-Irish Grid Series Tops in Game's Drama

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—It is Army-Notre Dame this Saturday at Yankee Stadium—a football rivalry that started high on the plains at West Point in 1913 when spectators were allowed in free.

In the span of years since that first encounter, more thrills, drama and excitement have been packed into that relation than any other in gridiron history. The series was inaugurated as a "breather" game for Army and in the years following it developed into an annual battle that now draws 76,000 spectators, regardless of past performances.

In 22 games played, Notre Dame has won 15, lost 5 and tied 2, every one of those games packed heart-stopping thrills—moments when one team fought the clocks as well as the other, long touchdown runs and mighty drives through the air. Flashing back to past battles, these high spots come to mind:

1913—Notre Dame comes out of the West an unknown. Early in the game Charley Dorais, now Detroit coach, flips a 40-yard pass into the end zone. It's caught by a fellow named Rockne—the longest pass recorded up to then. Notre Dame wins through the air, 35 to 13.

1915—Eleven "iron men" play the entire game and Notre Dame wins, 7 to 0. Center is Hugh O'Donnell, now vice president at South Bend.

1917—Notre Dame, 7; Army, 2. Player named George Gipp stars—the start of a career that is now part of national tradition.

1919-1920—Gipp runs wild in both games and Notre Dame wins.

1921—Notre Dame, 28; Army, 0. Notre Dame's shift play baffles the Cadets and they take worst beating of series.

1923—Four players named Stuhdreher, Miller. Crowley and Layden starr for Notre Dame. A sports writer names them "the Four Horsemen."

1925—Army wins, 27 to 0, falling one point short of Notre Dame's record score of 1921.

1926—Notre Dame's "one perfect play" comes to life. Christy Flanagan slices off tackle and races 75 yards for a 7-to-0 victory.

1927—Chris Cagle riddles Notre Dame defense and Army wins, 18 to 0.

1928—Johnny (One-Play) O'Brien comes in for Notre Dame with the score tied at 6 to 6, fourth down and ball on Army's 28. He catches pass in end zone, wins game and retires after that play. Game ends with Army on Notre Dame 6-inch line.

1929—Rockne, now coach, ill in South Bend. Talks to players on phone before game. Yankee Stadium turf hard as ice from intense cold. Jack Elder intercepts Cagle's pass in second period and runs 98 yards for only touchdown.

1930 — Soldier Field, Chicago. Snow, rain and sleet fall during game. Field covered with ice. Players so dirty no one can identitfy them. Notre Dame scores and Carideo kicks extra point. Army scores when King blocks Carideo's punt and twice falls on it over goal. Ohan, sent in to kick point—and he misses.

1933—Nick Lukats' inspirational

'08 Mercedes Wins Antique Auto Derby

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 12.—A 1908 Mercedes rolled into City Hall plaza today 1 hour and 8 minutes after leaving Trenton, N. J., 32 miles away, to win the annual antique auto derby.

The car was driven by Dan Valentine, who said "we were hitting 50 miles an hour at times."

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Hughes, of Upper Darby, arrived second in a 1908 Hupmobile. A 1910 Packard came third.

The "it-takes-the-cake" auto of the derby was a 1907 International, with wagon wheels and body and the gasoline tank in front for a bumper, which Sol Berman and Russel Gerhart drove in from Pennsburg, 40 miles away, in 1 hour and 45 minutes.

Robert Roan arrived from Bellefonte in a 1904 Ford, in running time of 8 hours and 45 minutes for the 200 miles to win the long distance record. He began the trip Tuesday.

With V. J. Calderaro at the tiller, his 1905 Waltham-Orient clipped 8 minutes from its own record for the Trenton run established two years ago, making the trip in 1 hour and 56 minutes.

George C. Green drove a 1904 Oldsmobile in from Lambertville, N. J., in 1 hour and 50 seconds.

The derby was held in connection with the opening of the automobile show.

Grimm, Wrigley Confer On Possible Trades

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Charley Grimm, manager of the Chicago Cubs, returned today for the first time since the city series, for a conference with P. K. Wrigley, owner of the club. Grimm said he talked over possible trades with a plan of obtaining a centerfielder. He admitted that Hank Leiber, of the Giants, and Wally Berger, of Boston, were under consideration. Grimm's contract as manager of the Cubs for next year was not discussed, he said.

Fiedler, Penn Guard, Is Lost for Grid Year

Philadelphia, Nov. 12 (AP).—Bill Fielder, star guard, was lost to the University of Pennsylvania football team for the remainder of the season today.

Dr. Illarion Gopadze, team physician, revealed Fielder suffered a broken vertebra in his back during the Michigan game last Saturday. The physician said the fracture was "not of a serious nature," and said Fielder, a junior, probably would be able to report for spring practice.

Fight to Be 12 Rounds at Atlantic City; Signing Due Next Week.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock and Joe Louis accepted terms today for a 12-round "nontitle" fight in Atlantic City's municipal stadium on February 22.

Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, accepted a guarantee of $300,000 with the addition of 50 per cent of the net gate above $500,000. This percentage addition was offered as a compromise by Promoter Herman ("Muggsy") Taylor, of Philadelphia, after Gould had insisted during a four-hour conference upon cutting in on the radio and movie rights. Louis will receive 12½ per cent of the net gate.

Promoter Taylor assured Gould that he would place $100,000 in escrow in a New York bank for Braddock tomorrow or Saturday—as demanded by Gould. The remainder of the money will be paid the champion after the bout.

Signing Next Week.

Articles for the fight are expected to be signed early next week, just as soon as the lone remaining obstacle is removed. That obstacle is possible objections by Madison Square Garden, which is party to a contract with New York's Twentieth Century Club for joint promotion of a Braddock-Max Schmeling title fight in June.

Promoter Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century, who has both Louis and Schmeling under contract and who will assist in promoting the Atlantic City Braddock-Louis brawl, started conferences tonight with President John R. Kilpatrick of the Garden, seeking some sort of a gentleman's agreement" regarding the February 22 bout.

Promoters Taylor and Jacobs desired friendly co-operation of the Garden before signing Braddock and Louis for the fight. And Jacobs admitted that he is ready to "trade" with the Garden in order to have the Eighth avenue punch emporium's good will for the brawl. If necessary, Taylor and Jacobs may cut the Garden in on the promotion.

If Garden Refuses . . .?

Jacobs emphasized today, in discussing the situation with newspapermen, that no matter who wins in Atlantic City, the victor will draw about four times as much in a title fight with Schmeling in June, as Braddock would if he met Schmeling with previous build-up after the champion's long absence from the ring. Jacobs estimated that a Braddock-Schmeling championship match—"staged cold"—would not gross more than $400,000, whereas a title tilt between Herr Maxie and the Atlantic City winner would gross at least $1,500,000.

"If the Garden will sanction Braddock's meeting Louis on Washington's birthday," Jacobs said, "I will naturally draw up a new contract with the Garden guaranteeing that the Atlantic City winner will meet Schmeling under joint Twentieth Century-Garden promotion in June. I am confident that President Kilpatrick and the Garden directors will see the benefits for both organizations from such an arrangement."

But what if the Garden flatly refuses to sanction the Atlantic City bout? Jacobs replied, "Well—that would be a serious situation. I don't know what we would do then. We'll have to wait and cross that bridge when we come to it."

Boys Club Boxers Tie Guard Team in Golden Gloves Bouts

By Bill McCormick.

The highly favored National Guard boxing team dropped into a tie with the Northeast Boys Club for the lead in the District Golden Gloves as the second night's action in the annual fisticuffing tournament was unreeled last night at Catholic University before a crowd of 1,800.

Both the Guard team and the Northeast Boys landed three contestants in the finals. Terminal Y. M. C. A. was running close to the leaders with two men in the finals.

The Terminal Y. M. C. A., Washington Boys Club, Marine Reserves, Merrick Club, Phil Bobys, Alexandria Boys Club and Police Boys Clubs were out of the running for the team trophy, although each had one representative reaching the finals.

All activity will be suspended in the tournament tonight. The boys will resume their battles tomorrow night when the finals will be held in the C. U. gym.

Creighton Allen, 160 pounds; Pat Cecchini, 126 pounds and Bobby Herdon, 112-pound division, will represent the Northeast Boys Club in tomorrow night's bouts. The Guard finalists are Eddie Saugstad, in the 118-pound class; Bob Mathias, a welterweight, and Steve Thompson, 160 pounds.

Individual favorites fell by the wayside with monotonous regularity, and their fall was the only thing monotonous on the entire evening's program. George Chappelle, the fighting cop; Joe Petro, the Police Club's flyweight, and Ray Morse, Jewish Community Center bantam, all entered the ring top-heavy favorites and left the ring defeated.

Eddie Saugstad, who won his Golden Glove in 1934, was the first of the favored fighters to win. After Chapelle, Petro and Morse had been upset, Eddie scored a second-round technical knockout over Gilbert Mayo, of the Alexandria Boys Club, in a brawl of Dempsey-Firpo proportions.

Saugstad was dumped for a nine count by a terrific right hand early in the first round. He picked himself up, dusted himself off—and promptly deposited Gilbert in the resin dust for a count of nine. The round ended with honors even at one down apiece.

Saugstad found the range in the second round, plumping Mayo to the floor for two nine counts and having him down and the count at three when the bell rang. Gilbert was perfectly willing to continue, but his handlers asked Referee Denny Hughes to halt the bout, stating that their charge was not in the best condition.

George Chappelle, the colorful policeman, made his first-and-last start of the tournament against Tom Jordon, a light-heavyweight representing the Phil Bobys Club, in a surprise-ending contest, won by Jordon on a knockout. The clouting cop completely outclassed Jordon in the opening round, but lack of training began to catch up with him in the second, which went to Jordon by virtue of superior condition and several low blows for which Georgie was warned.

Chappelle was doing fairly well right up to the last minute, when Jordon dropped him with a right to the chin. Georgie rose and ran smack-dab into another right which deposited him on the canvas for the

Calumet Dick, in Rousing Finish, Wins Headline Bowie Race

Bryson Entry Overcomes Caught

Precious King Rewards Backers, Returning $88.80 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 12.—E. K. Bryson's Calumet Dick, backed into odds-on favoritism, proved an easy winner in the first of the six stakes scheduled at this track when he drew out to take a 2½ length victory in the running of the $2,000 added Bowie Claiming Stakes today. James Butler's Caught was second after running a fine race with Silent Shot, from the barn of J. E. Hughes, third in the field of five.

Calumet Dick was the first favorite to win in Maryland in three days and paid a $3.50 mutuel. The gelded son of Gallant Fox ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:48 2-5, creditable time for the good track. He earned $1,820 for his owner and a neat piece of change for Jockey Bobby Root, who turned in a masterful ride.

The start of the long 15-day meeting at the Prince Georges County track drew only 7,500 customers, many being kept away by the threatening skies which leaked only intermittently up to the feature race.

Winner Closes Gap.

Four of the five horses in the feature got to the front at some stage or another. At the break Caught and Lemont went out to battle for the doubtful honor of setting the pace. Calumet Dick was under restraint and close up with Silent Shot next and Prince Abbot last.

Nearing the far turn, Lemont suddenly dropped out of it and Caught took a brief lead. Then Silent Shot made his move. With a rush, he took command and it appeared that he was headed for victory. However, Jockey Root had been biding his time with Calumet Dick.

In the stretch Caught wrested the lead from Silent Shot, but Calumet Dick, now placed to a severe drive, went bounding up to catch and pass the leaders and drew away at the end.

The daily double, with Showabal and Chanting in the winning positions, paid $127.20.

J. H. Loucheim's Showabal made a show of his field in the day's opening event at five and a half furlongs for maidens. Ridden by Harry Richards, Showabal was in front soon after the break and was taken in hand after taking a long lead. Shanteb, a $52.30 place proposition, was easily second with Marinella third in the field of twelve. Showabal paid an $8.10 mutuel.

Princess Athene Wins.

Princess Athene, owned and trained by Selby Burch, of Washington, won the second race by a head margin from S. Trenchard's Some Good. The camera was used but there was little doubt as to the winner. Princess Athene showed 15-1 on the odds board until the horses approached the starting point and then dropped to 6-1 and closed at 5-1. She had her hands full winning, however, as Some Good put on a determined stretch rush. The winner paid $11.10.

Jockey Jackie Westrope rode Chanting to victory in the third race. Mattapony was second and Time Me third in the field of a dozen sprinters. Chanting was forwardly placed throughout but had to be hard ridden through the stretch to stave off the close of Mattapony.

Herman Phillips' Scrooge, a speedy son of Haste, took the fourth race with the greatest of ease. Going to the front on the swing for the stretch, Scrooge drew far out and was being eased at the end. Passing Eve was a sensational second at a $111.60 place mutuel. Must Be, half of the Marks entry, was third. Scrooge paid a $7.90 mutuel.

Precious King at an $88.80 mutuel and ridden by Eddie Johnson, the Negro jockey, took the sixth race from a cheap field of 12. Repeal was second and Tambov third over the mile and three-sixteenth scourse. Precious King worked his way to the leaders and took command in the stretch to be opening a gap at the finish line. Few in the crowd recognized the winner and a strange silence marked the end of the race.

Top High took the day's finale and paid $12.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOWABAL, $8.10, $4.90, $3.10; SHANTEB, $52.30, $39.40; MARINELLA, $3.30.

SHOWABAL, off alertly and sent to the front at once, opened a good lead approaching the stretch and held sway to the end while in hand. SHANTEB, rushed to contention at once, pressed the pace of SHOWABAL and was taken in hand when beaten. MARINELLA had good early speed and ran evenly, though no match for the other two. HAPPY AND GAY was in tight quarters along the rail in the early running and showed a good effort. FLYING VIM came from far back to close resolutely. JOURNEY ON had no excuses. RED NOSE stopped.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:12. Off at 2:16. Winner, S. L. Burch's b. f. (4), by Pompey—Polyanthus. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCESS ATHENE, $11.10, $6.50, $3.80; SOME GOOD, $11.20, $5.30; MY SURPRISE, $4.40.

PRINCESS ATHENE, in the thick of contention from the beginning and forced to race on the outside, drew out smartly when put to hard drive midway of the stretch and had to be kept to pressure to withstand closing bid of SOME GOOD. The latter worked his way to contention on the swing for the stretch and closed with a belated rush on the outside. MY SURPRISE was hard ridden to reach the leaders, took a brief lead entering the stretch and hung on well. MINEY MYERSON was in tight quarters at the far turn and closed gamely. ELWAWA had good early speed. MY KIN tired. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:41½. Off at 2:51½. Winner, S. McPherson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANTING, $24.80, $12.30, $6.20; MATTAPONY, $10.60, $5.70; TIME ME, $5.40.

CHANTING, closest to the pace of SORCERESS from the start, came to the outside when placed to drive and disposed of rival, but had to be hard ridden to hold MATTAPONY safe. The latter, a forward factor from the beginning, came willingly in the final stages and was wearing down the winner. TRUE TUNE showed a good effort. SORCERESS stopped from hustling tactics while setting the pace. COMPLIMENT, off in a tangle, was forced to race wide all the way and tired. FLICKERING was blocked while trying to reach contention. WHITE SWEETS had early speed.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $127.20.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Copley. For all ages. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:18½. Winner, H. Phillips' ch. g. (2), by Haste—Curiosity Shop. Trained by J. Byer. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:15, 1:41, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCROOGE, $7.90, $5.10, $3.30; PASSING EVE, $111.60, $22.70; MUST BE, $2.70.

SCROOGE, under steadying restraint while closest to the pace of GOLDEN ERA, moved to the leader swinging for the stretch, took command and easily held sway to the end. PASSING EVE saved ground entering the stretch and closed with good courage. MUST BE gained steadily and closed with good energy. GOLDEN ERA was rushed to the front, opened a long lead and tired in the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,000; added. The Bowie Claiming Stakes. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:41⅓. Off at 3:42. Winner E. K. Bryson's dk. b. g. (4), by Gallant Fox—Martha Snow. Trained by H. Baker. Net value to winner, $1,820 second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 3-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALUMET DICK, $3.50, $2.40, $2.10; CAUGHT, $3.40, $2.50; SILENT SHOT, $2.50.

CALUMET DICK, rated along while within striking distance of the leaders, came to the outside in the stretch, and under energetic hand riding, disposed of CAUGHT to be drawing far out at the end. CAUGHT raced LEMONT into defeat, continued gamely when displaced by SILENT SHOT and was tiring at the end. SILENT SHOT went to the leaders with a bold rush leaving the far turn, took command and was tiring gradually in the last stages.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10½. Off at 4:13. Winner, O. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRECIOUS KING, $88.80, $26.70, $17.60; REPEAL, $8.50, $4.40; TAMBBOW, $5.00.

PRECIOUS KING gained steadily on the outside along the back stretch, and under good handling drew out on REPEAL in the closing sixteenth. REPEAL, a forward factor throughout, took command with a rush, but could not resist the winner under a drive. TAMBOV, hustled to the front going to the first turn, hung on well. MADDENING had a rough trip. HEARTEASE showed a good effort, but could not threaten. JIMMY D had speed in spots.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41½. Off at 4:42. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP HIGH, $12.60, $6.20, $4.70; ALICE BYRD, $4.80, $3.20; DEARZIN, $9.20.

TOP HIGH went to the leaders with a bold rush on the outside leaving the back stretch, took command and was drawing out at the end. ALICE BYRD was forwardly placed throughout, took the lead from INDIAN NEWS, but could not resist the winner. DEARZIN showed an excellent effort under good handling. MORE PEP went with the leaders and hung on well. INDIAN NEWS was used up setting the pace. HYMN was hard ridden and was in tight quarters in the stretch.

DEAR AL. Bowie, Md., Nov. 12.

The Prince Georges Autumn Handicap Saturday may be run with Roman Soldier, star of the handicap class in this State, munching oats in his barn. The weights for the week-end event were announced today and there was a big "130 pounds" opposite the name of the horse that finished second in the 1935 Kentucky Derby. Trainer Phil Reuter took one look and announced that Roman Soldier would not start. The ace would have to give 10 pounds to Memory Book and would spot Jay Jay, Jean Bart, Thursday, Aneroid, and other big chunks of poundage. Roman Soldier's underpinning is none too good which may account for the decision not to start him. However, trainers and owners have been known to change their minds. The track is hopeful that they will send the horse postward. He will draw a nice play in the mutuels. Jockey Sunny Workman was scheduled to ride here today, but he pulled up with a stiff neck as the result of golfing yesterday and he had to cancel his mounts. The Jeffords horses, trained by Preston Burch, of Washington, D. C., led in money won at Pimlico with $26,000. There is nothing wrong with Matey, contrary to rumors. Burch did not like the high weight assignment. The colt is here and ready to run a smashing race. Remember, bet everything a Burch sends to the post. BILL.

First race—Marfeu seems well placed in this maiden event and despite the top weight assignment figures to get home in front. Teneriffe has worked excellently and may be a dangerous factor. Clarion Call and Blue King want more distance but are fit and ready.

Second race—Free Again showed a flash of real speed at the other track. Needs three scratches to get in action but will be an important factor if sent postward. Golden Vein is not a sprinter but meets little opposition here and may get up in time to figure in the pay-off. Laura V. for the show end.

Third race—Iron Bound was a fair sort in New York and showed nothing in a recent outing in this State. This company is not tough and I expect this one to take the chief award. Star Special ran an improved race at Pimlico and could surprise. Bromide and Rhythmical to battle it out for the show.

Fourth race—The Shandon farm may account for the winner's share of this purse with My Elsie. She gets in with steadying weight and has worked well. Clamorous and Ritorno probably are the best of the others.

Fifth race—Scatter Brain is at top form and should handle that 116-pound assignment. The change of tracks may help Buck Langhorne, one that goes coupled with Kenty. Angus is bred for the mud and if the track is off could surprise even in this high grade company.

Sixth race—Albuquerque has a heavy impost of 120 pounds but has enough of a class edge over this kind to offset the weight. Silvery Cloud should like the soft course. Pomposity to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Quiet Please gets the call here. This is another good worker and prefers an off track. First Pigeon's last was a smashing race. Sleek and Speed have been tipped around.

Best bet—Scatter Brain.

Selections.

1—Addis Ababa, Clean Heels, Teneriffe.
2—Adams Eve, Laura V., Melody Maid.
3—Sandy Belle, Iron Bound, Italian Harry.
4—Clamorous, Mary Keen, Ritorno.
5—Nightcap, Teddy Haslam, Scatter Brain.
6—Petard, Albuquerque, Toby Tyler.
7—Miss Tiptoe, First Pigeon, Speed.
Best bet—Miss Tiptoe.

30 Golfers Seek District Open Title Today

Diffenbaugh Is Defending Titlist in Bannockburn Links Tourney.

Washington's last important golf tournament of the season will take place today at Bannockburn Golf Club's course, with a field of 30 pros and amateurs competing in the District Open Championship.

George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, is defending champion, and is rated a good chance to retain his title.

Al Houghton, promotion manager at Bannockburn, yesterday received five additional entries. They are Roy Rutherford, unattached professional; T. Gibraski, former Cincinnati pro; George Keene, Bobby Brown and H. Gillie, local amateurs.

Play will start at 9 o'clock. The final 18 holes will begin at 1 p. m.

Anxious to take down the title are Houghton, who holds the Maryland Open crown; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, and his brother, Glenn, of Baltimore; Walter Cunningham, of Burning Tree, and Al Treder, of Manor. Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic champion, and Roger Peacock, are the foremost amateurs entered.

Off to a flying start, George Nealis, 23-year-old medalist, shot a sparkling 67 yesterday to eliminate J. Andestad, 5 and 3, in his opening match in the Rock Creek turkey golf tournament.

The big upset of the title flight came when Nick Altrock, the Washington Baseball Club comedian-coach, birdied the nineteenth hole to put out Bob Leapley.

Other results:

Bill Jones defeated Leo Cullinane, 5 and 4; Hampton Hadley defeated Ernie Garlem, 5 and 4; Charlie Williams defeated John ("Squirrel") Charles, 3 and 2; Bill Wilhelm defeated L. Abrams, 5 and 3.

Landon Favored To Beat St. Albans

Landon Prep School will entertain St. Alban's eleven on hte Bethesda field this afternoon, and, for the first time in eight years, with a better than even chance of emerging victor. St. Alban's has won six and tied one in the seven-game series.

On the scoring capabilities of El Berkely and Huck Hughes will hinge Landon's hopes. This pair has scored all but one of Landon's touchdowns this year. The host team defeated Wilson, 18 to 0, while the Saints lost 12 to 0 to the same team, only basis for comparison.

Streit Cunningham, Landon back, will be a marked man today, Friday, the thirteenth, for once before he scored 13 points for the Landon juniors on his thirteenth birthday and wearing No. 13 jersey on his back.

Mrs. Booth Is Medalist In Turkey Tournament

Mrs. L. M. Booth, with an 87, won the medal in the women's division of the East Potomac Turkey Golf Tournament yesterday.

Pairings for match play follow: Mrs. L. M. Booth (87) vs. Mrs. Hope Wilkinson (93); Miss Betty Garter (90) vs. Mrs. A Stokes (92); Mrs T. F. Barnes (88) vs. Mrs. Florence Godfrey (95); Mrs. Margaret Rule (97) vs. Mrs. J. J. Long.

Mythical Hicksville Is Located; 2 American U. Stars Prove It

There really is such a place as Hicksville, that much maligned township always supposed to be the mythical home of a mythical athlete of more than one sports story, and American University has indisputable proof of its existence.

Said proof consists of two strapping football players who will have prominent roles in the Eagles' homecoming game against Johns Hopkins Saturday at Central High School Stadium. Both hail from a Hicksville, which, in this instance, is located on Long Island, N. Y. Pete Sitnik, regular tackle, and Bus Treharne, recruit halfback, are the boys.

Sitnik has been a standout in American's line two years now, but it wasn't until a few weeks ago when the team lost to the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., that he really hit his stride. Since then he has torn things apart with a smashing brand of play, and miraculously, is one of the few varsity men to escape serious injury.

In the Coast Guard game he blocked three punts, and recovered two fumbles to clinch individual laurels for the day. He was directly responsible for the Eagles' victory over Bridgewater, blocking Johnny Riggleman's attempted conversion after the Virginians had scored their touchdown. He also hogged the spotlight in last week's game against Randolph-Macon, but failed to save his mates from defeat.

Treharne is one of Coach Walter Young's pony backs and will get his first trial in a starting role this week. He weighs only 158 pounds and stands only 5 feet 6 inches, sans socks, but it's 158 pounds of dynamite. He scored the winning touchdown against Bridgewater on a 25-yard run through a broken field, and has distinguished himself in numerous other games throughout the season. Injuries to Hal Toner, giant veteran and Johnny Struble, his substitute, have paved the way for Treharne's big chance.

Local Lineman To Worry Md. Saturday

Strickler, Ballston Youth, V.M.I. Tackle, Held One of Best in Loop.

Maryland's debate with Virginia Military Institute tomorrow afternoon at College Park, which may produce more football in 60 minutes than the average fan sees in a couple of years, has a local angle to it that has been completely ignored in the advance reports which have been devoted almost exclusively to the brilliant rival backfields.

The local angle happens to be the presence of Dick Strickler in the Keydet line. A strapping 6-footer, weighing 198 pounds and as fast as the average back, Strickler hails from nearby Ballston, Va., where he starred with the Washington and Lee High School team two years ago.

You probably remember his brother, Billy Strickler, "Terminal Bulldog" of Washington fistic circles several years ago, who hung up a commendable record before retiring. He was a walking health-ad, possessing a big chest, well-developed arms and legs, and herculean muscles bulging with hidden power.

Three Best in League.

Dick, according to Roy Mackert, who scouted the Cadets, has a physique similar to his brother's and is one helluva tackle. He, along with Capt. Jim Farley and Ray Brittingham, end, are among the three best linesmen Mackert has laid eye on this season, and the Terp scout vows all three could make any team in the conference. They wreaked havoc with every V. M. I. opponent and on a basis of past performances probably will do the same with Maryland.

The Virginians will enbus for Washington this afternoon, while the Terrapins are applying the finishing touches to their practices, and will spend the night in this city. The Terps anticipate an even fight with their guests, even though they will enter the fray an odds-on favorite to win.

An all-day program has been arranged for the "home-coming" Old Liners, beginning at 8 o'clock in the morning and lasting until midnight. A soccer game, mixer, buffet supper are on the program, which also includes the annual meeting of the 'M' Club and home-coming ball.

Regal Clothiers Meet Trinity in Loop Game

Regal Clothiers, pacesetters in the National City Football League, will engage Trinity A. C. Sunday at Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant, in the feature league game, starting at 2:30. Arlington A. A. engages Washington Cardinals at Ballston, and Palace draws a bye.

Meade Ban to End, Coucci Is Released

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 12.—Jockey Silvio Coucci, who won the Walden yesterday at Pimlico with Edward Riley Bradley's Brooklyn, has been let out by the Kentucky sportsman, due to the latter being assured that his first-string rider, Don Meade, will be reinstated before Florida's winter season begins.

Coucci packed his tack and departed for his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he will rest for two weeks, prior to going to Tropical Park, Fla., for the meeting beginning December 14.

Prior to going to New York, Coucci stated that he had two offers from Eastern horsemen to join their stables, but will wait until he reaches Florida before making a decision.

Several months ago when The Post exclusively announced that Don Meade had been married at Lexington, Ky., The Post said at the time that he took the step only after being assured that he would be allowed to ride this winter. Meade has been keeping fit galloping horses all year in Kentucky.

McFadden, Lenz Star as Bullis Batters Devitt Prep, 14 to 6

Fones' 78-Yd. Run Averts Shutout

54-Yard March, Devitt Pass Bring Victors' Two Touchdowns.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Future Navy football stars, wearing the gold and black of Bullis Prep, strutted their stuff in Central Stadium yesterday as they battered Devitt Prep to a 14-6 defeat in the fourth annual game between the rivals. The result gave Bullis an even break in the four-game series.

Featuring Joey McFadden, a 173-pound shifty quarterback from Allentown, Pa., and Cliff Lenz, a 200-pound fullback from Latrobe, Pa., Bullis outclassed the Devitt crew from start to finish. McFadden scored both Bullis touchdowns. Only a brilliant 78-yard return of a punt by Lee Fones, former All-Virginia halfback for George Washington High, of Alexandria, saved Devitt from being shut out.

Bullis took command right from the start and McFadden tried a field goal from the Devitt 23-yard line. He failed to get it off, however, but shortly afterward he and Lenz opened up a 54-yard march in which a 17-yard run by McFadden was the biggest single gain. With the ball on the 6-yard line and fourth down, Lenz hit the middle of the line and then shot a shovel pass out to McFadden, who tore wide to his right for the touchdown.

Schulman's Blocking Good.

The second touchdown came in the third period after Don Bone, Bullis center from Kittaning, Pa., intercepted a pass from Fones and returned it 30 yards to the Devitt 30. Lenz, a big powerhouse with a terriffic drive, smashed through for 17 yards and McFadden picked up the rest of the distance to finally hit the Devitt left side of the line from the 3-yard line. He placekicked his second extra point in a row.

Fones' run in the fourth period was one of the classics of the local schoolboy season. He fumbled Lenz' punt on his own 20, but finally picked it up, ducked through a swarm of gold jerseys, picked up some helter-skelter interference and lit out down the sidelines. A neat block by Moe Schulman, former Tech All-High center, saved him from being cut down at midfield, but Howard Montgomery, a Western High boy, who didn't play in school, caught him on the 2-yard line. Fones went over on the second play but missed the extra point.

Fones and Schulman, incidentally, are headed for Georgetown. All but two of the Bullis team are to enter the Naval Academy, and Lenz and McFadden already have appointments.

second time. He rose as glassy-eyed as a stuffed fish and Referee Eddie Lafond halted the action after 1 minute and 20 seconds of the third round.

Mike Morton, Merrick Club, 135-pounder, spanked Willie Fearey, one of the hopes of the Guard team, in a fight as exciting and hotly contested as ever you saw. For two rounds there was little to choose between the two, but Morton finished stronger and punching harder to win a unanimous and well deserved decision.

Bob Mathias, one of the few favored Guard fighters to win, made a knockout of a debut in the tournament. He knocked out Glenn Drake, of the Terminal Y, in 1 minute and 45 second of the second round with as pretty a right hand to the chin as ever you did see. Glenn dropped on his face and became the first fighter of the night to take the full 10 count without rising.

Engineer Transfer of Browns to New St. Louis Owners

Associated Press RADIOPHOTO.

Central figures in the sale of the St. Louis Browns by the Phil Ball estate to a group of St. Louis business men yesterday at Chicago, where the transfer received the approval of the American League. Left to right, Donald Barnes, head of the buying group; League President Will Harridge, and Louis B. Von Weise, representing the Ball estate.

ably next Monday. Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Browns, whose contract at $18,000 a year, has two more years to run, undoubtedly will be retained, members of the syndicate said.

De Witt, who engineered the deal, grew up in baseball, starting as a peanut vender. Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals organization, became interested in De Witt as a youngster and urged him to study law, meanwhile working as a stenographer for Rickey. Later De Witt became Rickey's assistant. He will resign from the Cardinals organization to assume his new duties with the American League Club.

Members of the syndicate include socially prominent and wealthy men of St. Louis, who intend to sell stock around St. Louis with the idea of stimulating interest in the club. Among them are Talton T. Francis, Samuel C. McCluney, investment bankers; Frank Rand, Andrew Johnson, W. N. Sitton, officials of a shoe manufacturing company; George C. Foster, Anthony Bufford, Thomas C. McPheeters, Rhodes E. Cave, George H. Williams, all lawyers; Herbert Waltke, retired capitalist; James R. Kearney, sr., Howard Stephens, Bradford Shinkle, capitalists; W. C. Haeussler, investment banker, and Alonzo C. Curtis, Grand Rapids, Mich., president of a machinery manufacturing company.

After disposing of the St. Louis situation, the American League owners discussed a plan of placing all radio broadcasts of league games under uniform contracts to the league, so that announcers with a tendency to criticize umpires and players might be checked.

Wolfpack Finishes Practice for Cards

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 12 (AP).—N. C. State College's Wolfpack polished its offense and spent considerable time on pass defense today as Coach Hunk Anderson virtually concluded preparations for Saturday's game with Catholic University.

The Pack will leave here tomorrow after a final light workout.

Anderson said he would not start Alex Regdon or Dan Piloseno, injured monogram guards, but that both might see plenty of action. Eddie Entwistle, injured right halfback, probably will be in the starting line-up, he added.

Dixie Sweeps Draw Strong Pin Team

The Connecticut Blue Ribbons, purported to be the strongest group of duckpin stars ever assembled, arrived in the Capital last night to take part in the annual Dixie Sweepstakes classic scheduled to open tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Arcadia alleys.

The Nutmeggers will tune up for the event tonight at the Mount Rainier alleys against Hugh Waldrop's Dixie Pigs, a select team of local and Baltimore stars. The Ribbons have their original team intact, Nick Tronsky, Jack White, Mike Bogino, Wally Pipp, Ray Von Dreele, Perce Wolfe, Ed Blakeney and Hugh Crawley.

Rose Liquor pulled up into second place in the District League last night, swamping the Convention Hall team three games, aided by Henry May's 408 set. Astor Clarke's recent illness failed to keep country's No. 1 ranking bowler from collecting a 412 set in Occidental's three wins over Georgetown. Clarke's 8-pin spare in the last box of the first game accounted for the first decision. Sam Simon's 416 set featured Heurich Brewers odd-game victory over Lucky Strikes.

Daily News, tied for the leadership of the National Capital League with the Benmacks, shot a season record pinfall of 1,768 ni swamping the Washington Canoe Club. . . . Anabelle Patton and Mrs. Eddie Keith each recorded a 113 game to top the individual efforts in the C. & P. Ladies Telephone League. . . . Marie Anderson enabled the Pinettes to retain the leadership of the Ladies Procurement League, rolling a 125 game and 325 set. . . . Campbell and Chaconas were high in the American League, the former shooting a 137 game and the latter taking 363 for the set.

Carroll Feared Lost for N. C. State Game

Wolfpack Pennant Found Flying on Campus Flag-Pole; Rally Tonight.

"Irish" Carroll, Catholic University's freckle-faced halfback who scored the only touchdown in last year's game between the Cards and North Carolina State, may not be able to duplicate that feat tomorrow when the Wolfpack invades Brookland. In fact, he may not even try, for a severe Charley-horse promises to keep "Irish" on the bench throughout the game.

But Carroll's incapacity was a minor item to Catholic's undergraduates this morning when they viewed a scarlet flag with the letters N C S emblazoned on it, flying from the staff in front of McMahon Hall. Those initials mean one thing, and unless the pennant is hauled down today, which is unlikely because of the manner in which the ropes are tied high up on the pole, it undoubtedly will be struck tonight as a part of the huge homecoming rally.

A monstrous bonfire, parading, cheering and band music and speeches by the coaches will feature the rally, which promises to exceed any of its predecessors i nenthusiasm and color.

Smoker, Oyster Roast.

The home-coming program will open tonight with a smoker and oyster roast at Auth's, 625 D street southwest. The freshmen game with Mount St. Mary's, scheduled tomorrow morning, has been canceled because of numerous casualties among the Mountaineer yearlings, but the remainder of the entire original program will go on as scheduled.

Carolina will arrive early tomorrow morning, accompanied by its 65-piece band, which will parade from the depot to the Willard Hotel, where headquarters have been established. Tonight the North Carolina Society will meet at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock, and will be addressed by Coach Hunk Anderson. The society has reserved a section of the stadium for its members who will attend the game.

Eastern Hopes To Surprise Techmen

Victory for Leaders Today Would All but Insure Championship.

THE RECORDS.

EASTERN		TECH

Encouraged by the date, which is Friday the 13th, Eastern High expects to upset Tech High today and throw the inter-high series into a triple tie among Tech, Central and Western. The game starts at 3:15 p. m. at Eastern field. Eastern figures the date signifies bad luck—for Tech is unbeaten in the series.

Despite three broken noses received in recent games by Eastern regulars, the Lincoln Parkers are far from broken in spirit, although they are out of the inter-high race. On the other hand, Coach Hap Hardell, of Tech, voiced one of the most optimistic remarks in his career yesterday when he said "Tech is in its best shape of the season."

Last serious obstacle between Tech and the championship, Eastern enters the game with an endless supply of able ball carriers, but a line which is a question mark. With any blocking and hole manufacturing, such ball carriers as Gene Davis, Russ Kendrick, Al Kidwell, Jack Shugrue, Pat O'Brien and Russell Speith should be going places.

Whether 218-pound Joe LaSalle, big tackle, is able to start for Eastern and thus bolster the Light Blue forward wall, depends on Coach Artie Boyd securing a nose guard. LaSalle joined Al Stang and Russ Shugrue in the broken-nose corps last week in the Western game and Coach Boyd's supply of nose protectors is running low.

Eastern enters the game with four victories in seven starts, while Tech has four wins in six.

Whether the gray-clad gridmen can maintain their peak to the close of the series is a question which Eastern will do much to solve today. With such backs as Johnny Williamson, Jack Belote and Stanley Wells doing the leather legging the Eastern defensive is due for a busy afternoon, especially if Tech continues its activity from the punt formation which wrecked Central.

Georgetown Squad Off to New York

Facing their sternest test of the season, a squad of 30 Georgetown football players, with Coach Jack Hagerty at the helm, will entrain for New York this afternoon, ready for anything tomorrow's game with Manhattan may bring.

Although it still is undefeated, boasting a record of five victories and one tie, a 7-7 stalemate with New York University, in six games, the Hoyas, nevertheless, will enter the fray in the familiar role of underdog. Manhattan's towering line, considered one of the East's best, and its improved play against Kentucky last week, which it defeated, 13-7, give it the edge in pregame betting.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Catholic University coaches are feuding with Georgetown folk . . . on account Adam Zinkievich, the greatest ball carrier in prep school ranks hereabouts since Johnny Bozek graduated from Gonzaga ten years ago, will not enroll at Brookland next year but is definitely headed for Georgetown . . . Zinkievich, an outstanding star at Devitt Prep last season, was definitely pointed toward Catholic U. until mysteriously veered off his course by influences believed to be Georgetown's . . . anyway, C. U. coaches made no secret last year that Zinkievich would be on their 1936 freshman squad, but this season finds him at Staunton Military Academy, preparing to enter Georgetown.

POVICH.

After all these years, Maryland University has become All-American conscious . . . the Diamondback, student paper at College Park, yesterday launched a campaign to focus All-American attention on Bill Guckeyson, greatest Maryland back in recent years . . . as a starter they solicited opinions from local sports editors which will be published in a near-future issue . . . Guckeyson has been fomenting his own publicity with his Saturday afternoon gallops for the past two years . . . and in this case the Diamondback is, indeed, hitching its wagon to a star.

George Marshall's threat to transfer the Boston Redskins' professional league franchise to Washington has been sour reading to local college coaches . . . who are now hesitant to offer big guarantees to visiting teams in the fear that a pro club operating on Sundays would put a huge dent in their receipts . . . but the truth is that a pro team in Washington would doubtless stimulate football interest here to the benefit of the colleges . . . if Marshall, as he says, must average a $12,000 gate at each home game, he will be doing better than any college team has been able to draw in football history here.

Win, lose or draw against Joe Louis when they meet February 22, Jim Braddock will be remembered for at least one thing . . . he will be the only champion in heavyweight history to enter the ring the long shot in the betting . . but the $300,000 guarantee he will get for the battle ought to cover his disgrace . . . throughout last summer, Braddock's hands were full of arthritis, which caused the cancellation of his bout with Schmeling, but on the eve of February 22, methinks, he'll have his hands full of Joe Louis.

The most important development at Chicago yesterday when the American League met was not the sale of the Browns' franchise but the agreement that night baseball would be permitted in the league . . . night baseball might be unthinkable to the rest of the league, but at St. Louis it is an absolute necessity if the Browns are to operate . . . last year the gate receipts were so meager the Washington team failed to net expenses on any trip to St. Louis . . . and on one occasion attempted to cut out one whole series by playing a succession of double-headers on an early trip, thus saving car fare and hotel expenses . . . the Browns will be permitted to schedule seven home games at night . . . but must receive the consent of the teams they are scheduled to meet on those dates.

Commissioner Landis, who will presently rule on the case of young Bob Feller, is expected to give Feller back to the Indians despite the fact that the Cleveland club violated the major-minor agreement by signing the young star direct from the sandlots . . . firm application of the rule would result in the forfeiture by Connie Mack of almost his entire pitching staff, acquired by the same route . . . despite the fact that Feller, if declared a free agent by Landis, could sell his services for nigh onto $100,000, the lad has told Landis that he would prefer to remain with the Indians . . . because that club gave him his chance.

Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, president of the Laurel race track, and the late Tiny Maxwell, famed referee, played side by side in the line for the first professional football team ever organized . . . at Latrobe, Pa. . . . they represented a 600-pound sector of the defense . . . Bill Shofnos, famed first-nighter and man-about-town, next week will struggle with the horns of a dilemma . . . or, rather, the horns of a diploma, or a couple of 'em . . . when he takes his seat at the Georgetown-Maryland game this will be a house divided against itself . . . seein' as how he is a graduate of both institutions.

Wilson to Meet Western High Team Today

Woodrow Wilson High School's football team, which has been doing a bit of all right for itself in its first year of competition, will take the acid test this afternoon against a stronger Western High eleven on the Western field in what will be the Tigers' first clash with another local public school.

Although defeated in their last two games, the Chevy Chase gridmen have improved with age and are now a well-knit, smooth-working outfit capable of giving the Georgetown school boys an interesting scrap if they are able to put their strongest team on the field. This seems improbable, however, as the injury bugaboo, which has been hounding them for the last three weeks is still prevalent.

Western, fresh from a 13-0 victory over its ancient rival, Eastern High, and in a fight with Central for second place in the inter-high standings, is hardly expected to take this game very seriously. Thus rests Wilson's best hope for victory.

Whatever the case may be, at least some gauge should be made upon the caliber of the Heintell-coached boys when matched with local public highs, which they will be meeting in next year's high school series.

Terp Yearlings Defeat W.-L.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 12.—Washington-Lee's freshman football team was defeated by a heavier Maryland team here this afternoon by a score of 6 to 0, Carliss and Mundorff taking the ball on a sustained drive from Maryland's 34. Carliss, after three tries at the line from the 4-yard mark, drove over for the lone score of the game. Mundorff's try for point was blocked by Dietz, Washington-Lee right end.

The Brigadiers outpointed the Terps in first downs, 11 to 10, but lacked the necessary punch when in scoring territory.

Carliss, Maryland's fine quarterback, was the outstanding ball-carrier of the afternoon, while Litteral and Boisseau, tackles on Washington-Lee's team, turned in some very good work.

The Brigadiers found the Maryland line too heavy for their running attack to get under way and took to the air, completing nine passes for a total of 103 yards, while the Terps completed two for 21 yards.

The game was the last of the season for the Little Generals.

Army-Irish Series Is Tops in Drama

play in final quarter wins game for Notre Dame. Lukats leads two touchdown down drives for 13-to-12 victory, which constitutes one of season's greatest upsets.

1934—Andy Pilney throws two passes to Dan Hanley for winning score in last two minutes of play.

1935—Notre Dame beats the clock and gets 6-to-6 tie. Army scores early in game. Two minutes to go and Notre Dame on own 15-yard line. Irish drive deep into Army territory. Shakespeare passes to Millner, who misses, but officials claim interference and its Notre Dame's ball on Army 2. Danbom scores touchdown tieing score. One of greatest controversies in history over "interference" ruling.

Kaufman Hurt, Not to Play Saturday

Merka to Take Colonial Star's Position in Catawba Game.

Joey Kaufman, triple-threat dynamo in George Washington's backfield, joined the ranks of the idle yesterday when his left leg, just returning to normal after a previous injury, was reinjured in scrimmage. He will not appear in the starting line-up and, unless Catawba proves to be too tough, will not play at all against the Carolinians tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

Kaufman's removal from the line-up gives Frank Merka a chance to perform, and he has been assigned to the left halfback post and will do the punting. George Jenkins, whose activities heretofore have been confined almost wholly to blocking, will call signals and have a large hand in the ball carrying. Capt. Frank Kavalier, at halfback, and Herb Reeves, fullback, round out the backfield.

If things work out according to Coach Jim Pixlee's plan the fans also will see a lot of Jay Kenslow, 160-pound sophomore quarterback, and Lou Carroll, hard-running halfback, who have shown well in practice and deserve a chance to display their wares in actual competition. They will not get in unless the starting team rolls up a commanding lead on the visitors and seem to have the situation well in hand.

Catawba not only expects to make a better showing against G. W. this time than in any previous game, but expects to win, mainly because it has a plentiful supply of reserves to throw inot the fray. In 1932 the Injuns held the local school scoreless three periods and then gave way before superior reserve talent. Last year's game was played in the rain.

Am. Woolen Co. Gives 10% Pay Raise to 13,000

Commercial Solvents and Jewel Tea Vote Special Dividends.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 12.—The American Woolen Co. announced today a 10 per cent wage increase, effective November 23, to employes of its four greater Lawrence plants employing 13,000 persons.

The Arlington Mills announced a "new and higher" wage scale for the mill's 5,000 employes, effective Monday, November 23. Officials of the Sheldon Worsted Mills in nearby Methuen announced pay increases, the amount not made known, would be given to their 200 employes.

Pacific Mills officials also announced an "upward revision" of wages, effective November 23, in their worsted division. They said 4,800 would be affected.

Addressograph Bonus.

Cleveland, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation announced today its 1,600 employes are to receive a cash bonus of one week's pay. The minimum bonus, the company said, would be $25 even though the employes in the lower brackets do not receive this amount weekly.

Royal Typewriter Increase.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 12 (AP).—The Royal Typewriter Co. announced today wage increases of between 8½ and 9 per cent for its 5,000 employes. Officials estimated the action will increase the annual pay roll about $500,000.

Special Dividends.

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Directors of Commercial Solvents Corporation, manufacturers of alcohols and industrial chemicals, today declared a special dividend of 20 cents a share on the common stock and the regular semi-annual dividend of 30 cents, both payable December 15 to stockholders of record November 21.

Directors of Jewel Tea Co., Inc., nation-wide distributors of grocery specialties, declared a special dividend of $2 a share on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share, both payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 7.

U. S. Gypsum Extra.

Chicago, Nov. 12 (AP).—Directors of the United States Gypsum Co. declared today a regular dividend of 50 cents a share and an extra dividend of $1.25 a share on the company's common stock. They also authorized a regular preferred dividend of $1.75 a share.

Western Auto Extra.

Kansas City, Nov. 12 (AP).—The board of directors of the Western Auto Supply Co voted today an extra dividend of $3 per share on all outstanding class A and B common stock in addition to the quarterly dividend of $1. The board also ordered a 5 per cent wage increase for employes with salaries of $2,500 or less, effective November 18.

Sharon Steel Reserves.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 12 (AP).—Directors of the Sharon Steel Corporation declared today its first common stock dividend since 1930 a 30-cent quarterly dividend and an extra disbursement of 75 cents, or a total of $1.05 a share.

Western Maryland Initial.

Baltimore, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Western Maryland Railway Co. declared its first dividend today on its 7 per cent first-preferred stock, payable December 15 to stockholders of record December 1.

Stock Prices Continue Irregular Movement in Active Trading; Government Bonds Higher.

New York, Nov. 12.—Buoyancy in high-grade bonds was played against irregularity in stocks, where profit taking kept in check the bullishness inspired recently by increased earnings, dividends and prophecy of bigger and better things to come. Stocks were strong in some sections, and wobbly in others, the closing prices being about a standoff on a turnover of 2,500,000 shares, smallest in a week. Francs continued to slide in a dull exchange market. December wheat rose ⅝ of a cent to 115¼ cents a bushel.

Stock traders did not appear to be cheered much by the inspired stories coming from SEC headquarters in Washington that a watchful eye was turned on speculative activity in Wall Street. Although the SEC's record of detecting and punishing violations of the regulations designed to stop manipulation is scarcely one to raise the charge of tyranny, the commission can create a lot of trouble and give much annoyance if it feels so disposed. Moreover, it holds a fearsome weapon over the heads of stock brokers; the threat to segregate the functions of broker and trader.

From the public's standpoint the strongest force that might be shoved against rising prices, is that in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board, which has power to regulate margins. Little stock is taken in the suggestion that margin requirements will be changed only with the rise or fall in brokers' loans, as the last uplift came at a time when loans were not increasing to amount to anything. As it turned out, the higher requirement did not stop the bull market, but it put a good deal of irregularity into price movements for some time afterward.

May Limit Participation.

If business is doing as well as Government officials say it is, and if prospects are as hearty as the Government authorities think they are, stock prices are bound to go up. The Federal Reserve board may be able to hold down the rapidity of the rise, or at least to prevent the small fellow from taking much part in it; but prices certainly will be adjusted to earnings. What the investor should study is the effect that the rising costs and taxes will have on profits, from the standpoint of gross earnings as well as net.

Given no important setback in business activity, it does not seem likely that any large-scale liquidation of stocks will take place. The income tax on capital gains is too heavy for large holders to sell at this time, and no other satisfactory outlet is available for surplus funds. Our markets are drawing investment and speculation from abroad as well as from domestic sources, and thrown in for good measure is the drift toward inflation.

A balanced budget in 1938 may, as the Administration hints, be possible, but by that time it may be difficult to check inflation. At the moment the market for Government bonds is stimulated by the cheap money outlook, plus a rising demand from financial institutions which are finding that, in spite of the increase in indstrial activity, no adequate outlet for their funds is available in the usual channels. Just the same, active steps taken to balance the budget, even if no sooner than 1938, will aid the Government bond market. That consideration may have been a factor in the extraordinary strength shown in prices today.

Water Over the Dam.

Stock traders conversely may have thought they had lost a friend on the inflationary side, and short-term speculators also may have felt that much of the current bullish news is water over the dam. Extra dividends now being voted flow from business activity of last summer and early autumn, and there is a growing realization that in many cases stockholders will not get all the gravy. Many a stockholder would prefer to see his company retain the surplus profit for future earning power rather than to distribute part of it now to him and part of it as a bonus to employees. That policy also, in the public interest though it may be, is a new factor in tax collections.

Retail merchandising and mail-order shares were strong in spite of profit taking in some of the recent favorites. Amusement stocks also forged ahead, and enough gains were made in the two groups, along with scattered buoyancy among specialties, to give the market a good tone. Allied Stores, Kresge, Macy, Constable and May rose sharply. Sears Roebuck found a new high price. Spiegel was carried onward by a recapitalization plan. Montgomery Ward had an indifferent day.

Chrysler Fails to Hold.

Loews, Paramount and Columbia stood out in the picture group. Softness in Air Reduction and Union Carbide hurt the chemical group. Chrysler failed to hold all its early gain, and elsewhere among the motors the tone was a trifle heavy at times. Rail equipments were supported by a 3-point jump in Lima. Steel Foundries was well liked.

World's Wheat Seen Lowest Since 1922

Rome, Nov. 12 (AP).—The International Institute of Agriculture today reported the lowest estimates of world wheat production since 1922. Prospective crops in Russia, China and Turkey were declared to be normal, while Danubian and Argentine production was considered good. The institute set export wheat stocks at approximately 671,800,000 bushels or a 10 per cent decrease under 1935 and 1936. Wheat production of importing nations, the institute said, will be low and will necessitate aggregate imports of approximately 543,600,000 bushels, compared with 499,200,000 bushels last year.

Rails, steels, silvers and coppers fell back 1 to 4 points. U. S. Smelting was a big loser on a break in the silver price. Railroad stocks felt selling pressure, partly because of the indicated drop in car loadings for last week. Kansas City Southern preferred was an exception. Utilities, foods and rubbers lost a little ground.

What Goes Up.

If the Federal Reserve Board is as worried now as it was a few months ago about the rise of high grade and other bonds to what it considers too high prices the outlook would be for something to be done about it, according to conversation in some banking quarters. The rise in the Treasury list certainly presents the Federal Reserve banks with an excellent opportunity to move some of its securities and make a handsome market profit. The great fear is that member banks might take fright if the Reserve banks dispose of some of their Government loans.

Railroad Earnings.

The dark cloud of higher wages is looming before the eyes of railroad security owners. Just how the railroads would manage the higher wage bill which a seven-hour or six-hour day would impose—the purpose of which is to increase daily pay by means of heavy overtime—is a question. Most of them are still having difficulty in meeting their fixed charges and in keeping out of the bankruptcy courts. It is unlikely that they would be able to pass on higher costs to the public, for the buses and motor trucks would make futile any attempt to lift passenger and freight rates. On the contrary, the lowering of passenger fares has been the salvation of the passenger traffic, and freight surcharges now in effect may soon be stopped. It looks as though a showdown soon would come as to whether it is desired to see private operation of the railroads continue, or whether Government operation will be instituted. Any forced material increase in costs will certainly mean Government operation, which no doubt would be highly pleasing to organized labor, as making higher wages and shorter hours fairly certain.

Bank of England.

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Bank of England statement for the week ended November 11 (in thousands of pounds): Circulation, 446,622; decrease, 489; bullion, 249,573; decrease, 31; reserves, 62,950; increase, 458; public deposits, 14,915; decrease, 12,286; private deposits, 139,626; increase, 12,478; government securities, 80,433; decrease, 1,530; other securities, 28,913; increase, 1,291. D. C. Christmas Savings Exceed $6,000,000

More Than 73,000 Members of Clubs Will Share in Distribution.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

More than $6,000,000 in Christmas Savings Club funds will be distributed in Washington early in December to more than 73,000 club members. This is the largest amount saved by club members since 1932, last year year's total being $5,279,575 while the amount subscribed this year was $6,332,915.

ROBERT L. FLATHER,

Christmas Savings Clubs are sponsored by banks of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and its co-operative advertising has brought the amount subscribed per capita locally to a point larger than that of clubs in other parts of the country.

The association's committee in charge of this year's club included Robert L. Flather, American Security & Trust Co., chairman; Frank R. Ulmer, National Savings & Trust Co.; Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Nelson B. O'Neal, Riggs National Bank; Eliot H. Thomson, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and E. Percival Wilson, National Savings & Trust Co.

Riggs Bank Meeting.

Importance of public relations was emphasized and discussed at the first fall meeting of employes of Riggs National Bank this week, at the Wardman Park Hotel. Approximately 300 officers, directors and employes were in attendance at the meeting, over which William H. Taylor, chief teller of the institution and chairman of its customers, relations council, presided.

At this first of a series of meetings to be held during the winter months, the purpose of which will be to bring all employes together for discussions on phases of bank operation and their relations to public interest, President Robert V. Fleming, of the institution, and Vice President Frank M. Totton, of Chase National Bank of New York, were speakers.

Mr. Fleming talked on the importance of bringing to the public a clear understanding of the services rendered by banks and Mr. Totton discussed the general subject of customer and public relations. Mr. Totton has been a member of the Educational Commission of the American Bankers Association for a number of years and one of its main objectives has been to keep the public better informed on banking matters.

George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of Riggs National Bank, announced that a class in public speaking for its employes would be carried on this year in charge of Charles T. Akre, of the bank's trust department, who has won numerous prizes in public speaking contests. A buffet supper concluded the meeting.

Life Underwriters Dine.

At an informal dinner, members of the District of Columbia Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters last night expressed to their guests a message of encouragement. Guests were students and experienced underwriters of Washington who are preparing for examinations of the American College of Life Underwriters. More than 50 underwriters are enrolled in the classes, now being held three evenings a week. The current semester continues until June, 1937, when the annual examinations will be held throughout the country for chartered life underwriter candidates.

In the ten years since its organization, the American College of Life Underwriters has granted the "C. L. U." designation to 980 persons. An equal number has passed one or more of the five examinations and it is estimated some 2,000 others are in preparation. In Washington there are 33 designated underwriters, four of whom are instructing classes.

Silver Breaks Two Cents to 45½ an Ounce

Drop Follows Decline in London, Attributed to Speculative Sales.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—The price of foreign-mined bar silver dropped 2 cents an ounce in New York today following a sharp break in London, where the recent boom in nonferrous metals appeared to have been checked.

The new price here was set at 45.50 cents an ounce, three quarters of a cent higher than the level from which it was boosted Monday, for the first change since May, to meet the rising London quotations.

Bar silver at London dropped sharply 1⅝ pence an ounce today and was quoted at 20 13-16 pence (equivalent to 45.71 cents). At Montreal, silver futures were 3.0 cents to 3.55 cents lower. Traders here attributed the movement to selling by speculators following completion of short covering.

Export copper which a few days ago reached a new six-year high price of 10.90 cents a pound, was sold today at 10.45 cents. Tin broke sharply in London yesterday after a sensational advance of more than a week when the equivalent of more than 6 cents a pound was added to the price. The break followed an increase in production quotas by Malaya, Netherlands, East Indies, Nigeria and Bolivia.

Domestic copper remained at the 10.50 cents a pound fixed last week.

Brokers in London Plan Curb Exchange

London, Nov. 12 (AP).—A London curb exchange, originally registered with a nominal capital of £100, has decided to increase its capital to £63,000 to acquire premises in Angel Court, near the stock exchange.

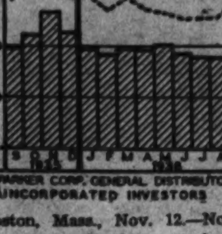
It plans to "fulfill in London the functions of the New York curb exchange and the Paris coulisse," according to an official statement. The purpose of the exchange is to supply a need not covered by any British financial institution.

Penn. Railroad Votes 2 Per Cent Dividend

Philadelphia, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad directors declared today a dividend of 2 per cent on the 1936 earnings. The dividend is payable December 21 to stockholders of record November 23.

This makes a total disbursement of 4 per cent, or $2 a share for the calendar year. The last dividend was in February when 2 per cent was disbursed on the 1935 earnings.

Factory Exports Up 10% Over Last Year



THE WARNER CORP. GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS UNCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Nov. 12.—Normally one-tenth of the products of United States factories are shipped to foreign countries. This export one-tenth is so important to many producers that it makes the difference between red and black ink. Export trade is improving. Both for September and the first nine months of this year, exports passed the corresponding periods of last year by about 10 per cent.

Cotton Declines With Liquidation

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Cotton sold off to the lowest levels since late August today under continued liquidation and renewed hedge selling. March declined from 11.64 to 11.52, and closed at 11.54, with final prices generally 4 to 16 points net lower.

Futures Price Range.

	High	Low	Last

October	11.13	11.05	11.10

Spot steady; middling, 12.10.

Cotton Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil declined 9 to 10 points early today under liquidation to rally somewhat later. Selling was promoted by the disappointing Census Bureau report showing consumption during October of only 253,000 barrels, against 401,000 barrels last year. The easiness of cotton and lard also were factors. Coverings and Southern buying appeared on the setback, with the market closing 2 to 5 points net lower. Sales, 134 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; December closed 9.82; January 9.92; March 10.00; May 10.05.

Brokers' Loans Drop $8,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $973,000,000 for the week ended November 11, a decrease of $8,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $855,00,000.

Member Bank Excess Funds At New High

2.26 Billion Total Is 408 Million Above Requirements.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement last night showed that during the week ended November 10 excess reserves of member institutions climbed to another new high since reserve requirements were raised by 50 per cent on August 15. The statement estimated excess reserves at $2,260,000,000, an advance of $120,000,000 over the previous week and $408,000,000 over August 16.

The increase in excess reserves reflected a $132,000,000 rise in member bank reserve balances to $6,825,000,000 on November 10. This increase, in turn, was attributable to a $66,000,000 decline in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks, a $47,000,000 rise in monetary gold stock and a $9,000,000 decrease in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts.

One offsetting factor to these influences was a $15,000,000 rise in money in circulation to $6,393,000,000, or $647,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

Butler Bros. 5% Preferred Offered Today

Convertible Stock Issue Is Priced at $31 Per Share.

An issue of 285,000 shares of Butler Brothers 5 per cent convertible preferred stock, par value, $30, is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Hornblower & Weeks. The stock is priced at $31 per share with dividends from December 1.

According to the registration statement, $5,176,500 of the proceeds will be applied to the retirement on February 1, 1937, of outstanding 5 per cent gold debentures. The balance of the proceeds will be added to the working capital of the company and used for the reduction of bank loans and for other corporate purposes.

The new preferred stock is convertible into common stock as follows: to and including December 1, 1938, two shares of common stock for each share of preferred; thereafter and including December 1, 1940, 1¾ shares of common stock for each share of preferred; thereafter and including December 1, 1946, 1½ shares of common stock for each share of preferred; and thereafter 1¼ shares of common stock for each share of preferred.

Curb Prices Yield In Late Trading

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Selling flurries in late trading today took some toll of prices in the curb market stocks, but failed to cancel sizable gains in industrial leaders.

Improvement carried to the close was mostly confined to the inactive division. Pepperell soared up 9⅞ to finish at 134¾. Montrose rose 2½, to 52½; Sherwin-Williams, 3½, to 139, and Pittsburgh Plate Glass, 1, to 133½.

Utilities showed a drooping tendency from the start and leaders ended fractions to a point lower. Oils suffered reverses after early gains.

Newmont and Aluminum Co. of America each declined 2. Northern States Power "A," Sunshine Mining, Wayne Pump, Electric Bond & Share, and American Gas & Electric gave up fractions to a point.

Transactions totaled 684,000 shares, against 680,000 on Tuesday.

Standard Electric Output.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas & Electric Co. system for the week ended November, 1936, totaled 108,460,268 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 14.1 per cent, compared with the corresponding week last year.

Bath Iron Corp. Common Stock On Market

Shipbuilding Issue of 50,000 Shares Is Priced at $12.

Of an issue of 194,000 shares of common stock, par value $1, of Bath Iron Works Corporation, 50,000 shares, representing new financing, is being offered today at $12 per share by a group of investment banking houses headed by Hemphill, Noyes & Co. The remaining 144,000 shares consist of stock owned by stockholders in the company and are subject to options, specified in the prospectus.

The net proceeds of the sale of 50,000 shares will be applied to the redemption of all the outstanding first mortgage 7 per cent serial bonds in the principal amount of $73,000; to paying off $200,000 second mortgage serial notes, and to increase working capital for the six months ended June 30, the company reports net income of $147,119, transferred to earned surplus. The shipyard, covering 14 acres, is at Bath, Me., on the Kennebec River. About 1,350 men are now employed there.

The present company was incorporated in 1927 in Maine. During the past five years the most important development of the business has been the construction of naval vessels, of which it has built three destroyers, seven Coast Guard patrol boats, a quarantine tug and a lighthouse tender. Last year the company was awarded contracts for three more destroyers. A private contract recently received is to build a new cup defender for Harold S. Vanderbilt at an estimated cost of $300,000.

Associated with Hemphill, Noyes & Co. as underwriters are: Riter & Co., Mackubin, Legg & Co., Babcock, Rushton & Co., Parrish & Co. and Drumheller, Ehrlichman & White.

B. & A. to Continue South Shore Buses

Baltimore, Nov. 12 (AP).—The Baltimore and Annapolis Railroad assured the Public Service Commission today that bus service for the South Shore route between Baltimore and Annapolis would be continued after the Red Star Bus Lines cease operations November 15.

The Red Star had asked that its franchise be extended or that it be allowed to stop the South Shore service. The B. and A. offered to furnish service if the Red Star stopped. The commission denied the extension and asked the B. and A. to take over the bus operation.

COMMERCIAL SOLVENTS CORPORATION
NOVEMBER 12, 1936.

The directors declared today a semi-annual dividend of thirty cents (30c) per share and a special dividend of twenty cents (20c) per share on the outstanding common stock of this corporation both payable on December 15, 1936, to stockholders of record at the close of business on November 21, 1936.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 12.—Trading was fairly active in today's stock market with steel, motor and tobacco issues in demand. Tin stocks were strong while copper shares tended downward. Rubber stocks sold higher, and oils, transatlantics and gilt-edged securities remained quiet, but steady.

Paris—Prices were mixed at the closing of the bourse today, rentes reacting 25 centimes to 1 franc and Bank of France stock declining 100 francs to 8,800 francs. Electric and international securities also were heavy. Railroad shares sold higher.

Loverpool—Wheat futures finished fractionally lower following ideal weather reports from Argentina and Australia. Demand for foreign wheat was extremely small. Profit taking and commission house selling caused cotton futures to close 1 to 5 points lower. The decline uncovered stop orders with sentiment unsettled.

Bank of France.

New York, Nov. 12.—Settlements through the banks were restricted during the latest period, which included the Armistice Day holiday, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today.

The total for 22 leading cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the five days ended Wednesday, November 11, was $5,144,728,000, against $4,741,075,000 last year, an increase of 8.5 per cent. This contrasted with a gain of 6.2 per cent a week earlier.

New York City clearings amounted to $3,342,670,000, a gain of 9.5 per cent over the $3,051,728,000 in the corresponding week a year ago. At outside centers the aggregate was $1,802,058,000, or 6.7 per cent higher than the $1,689,347,000 recorded in 1935.

Total clearings dropped $153,428,000 below the amount for the week previous. Between the two comparative weeks in 1935 there was a reduction of $246,329,000.

Figures at leading cities, with percentage increases or decreases from 1935, are printed herewith:

Wages in U. S. Suffered Most In Depression

Decline From Index of 100 in 1929 to 57 in 1933 Tops Major Nations.

Geneva, Nov. 12.—Statistics of total salaries and wages in 20 countries, which have been compiled for the first time by the International Labor Office here, reveal that with the exception of Austria, and possibly of Poland, the United States was harder hit by the depression than any of the other countries.

From an index of 100 in 1929, the statistics show the nominal value of wages and salaries in the United States dropped to 60 in 1932, and 57 in 1933.

In 1934 it rose to 65, but it was still lower than in any country except Austria; and though, in 1935, it climbed to 70, it was still below that of other countries for which figures are available. The index for Germany in 1935 was 74; for France, 76; and for Australia, 80.

Again, a comparison of the real value (i. e. purchasing power) of salaries and wages in the various countries shows that from 100 in 1929 the index in the United States had dropped to 76 in 1932, and 75 in 1933. By 1934 it was up to 82, but still lower than in any country except Austria; and while, in 1935, it was up to 86, it was still below that of other countries for which figures are available. The index for France in that year was 91; for Germany, 93; and for Australia, 99.

The index of the nominal value of wages and salaries in the United States, at the nadir of the depression in 1933, was 8 per cent lower than in Australia; 22 per cent lower in The Netherlands; 28 per cent lower than in Norway; and 30 per cent lower than in France.

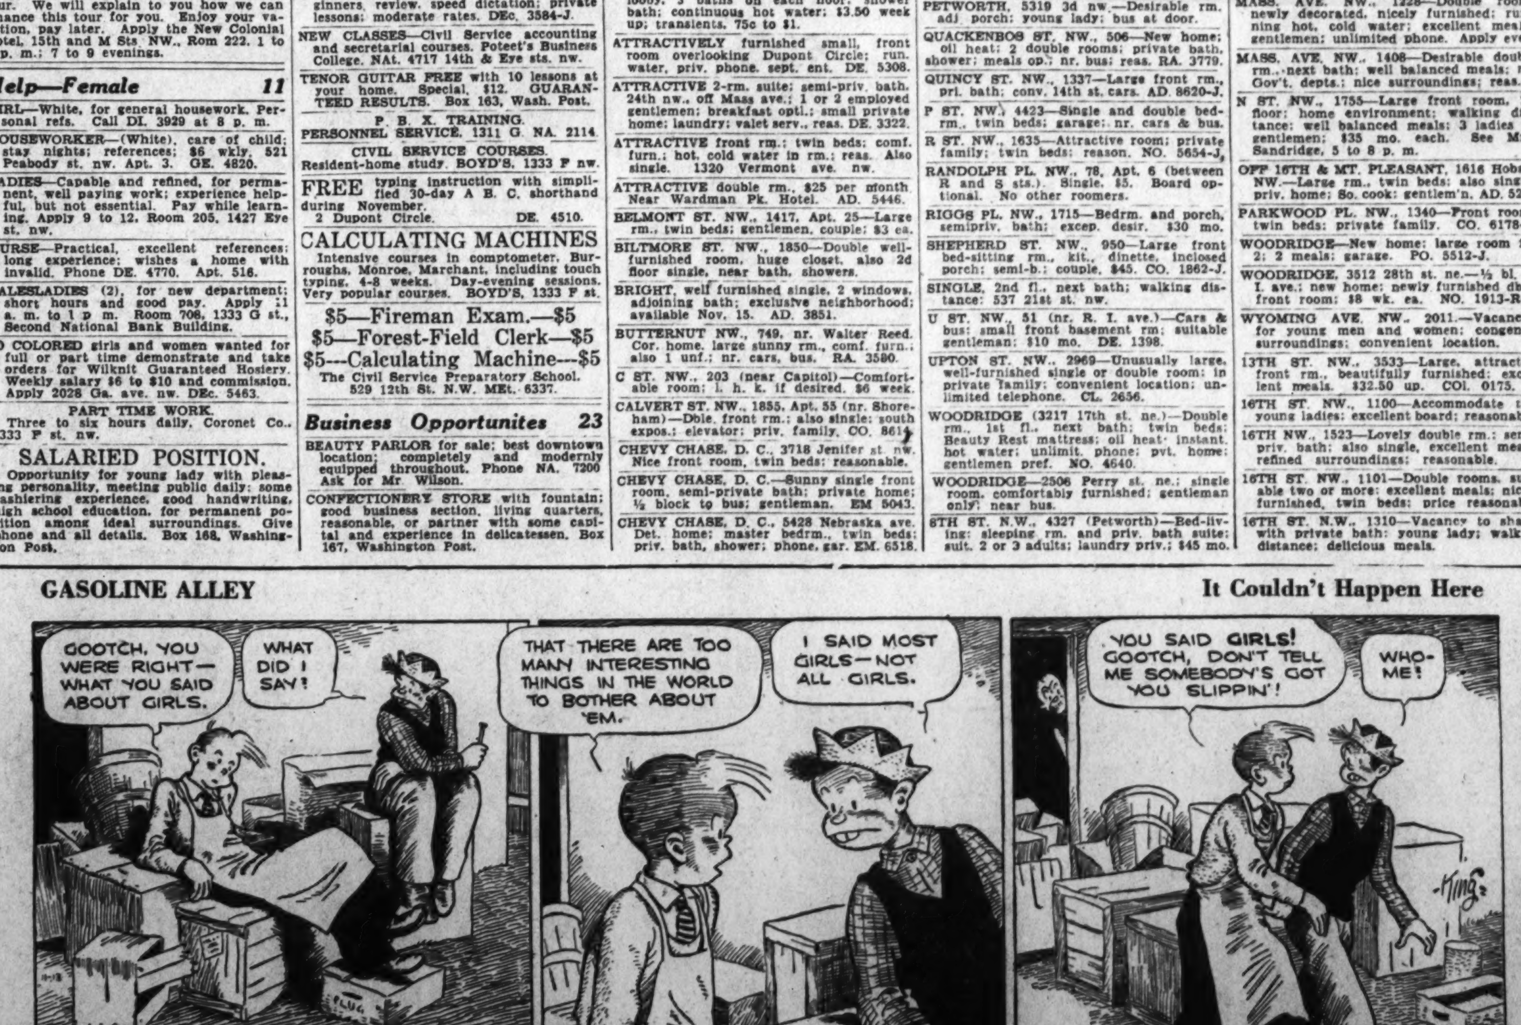
It Couldn't Happen Here



GOOTCH, YOU WERE RIGHT— WHAT YOU SAID ABOUT GIRLS.
WHAT DID I SAY?
THAT THERE ARE TOO MANY INTERESTING THINGS IN THE WORLD TO BOTHER ABOUT 'EM.
I SAID MOST GIRLS—NOT ALL GIRLS.
YOU SAID GIRLS! GOOTCH, DON'T TELL ME SOMEBODY'S GOT YOU SLIPPIN'!
WHO—ME!

Maryland Woman, 72, Critically Hurt in Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Emma Blackford, 72, Sharpsburg, Md., was probably fatally injured last night on the Sharpsburg Pike when the automobile driven by her daughter, Mrs. Alice Hutzell, Keedysville school principal, and a car driven by Walter C. Moates, Fairplay, collided. Other occupants of the two machines escaped injury.

Mrs. Blackford suffered a fractured skull and other injuries.

Virginia Grocer, 72, Dies of Bandit Wound

Portsmouth, Va., Nov. 12 (AP).—Portsmouth police today sought the holdup slayer of William H. Bassett, 72-year-old grocer, who died in a hospital here yesterday of a wound received in his store Tuesday night.

He was found, shot through the chest, by two of his acquaintances, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Ford, when they entered his store. The cash drawer had been rifled.

Farley Hailed As Sportsman By Rockefeller

Financier Congratulates Democrat Chief for Election Talk.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 12.—The Democratic National Committee made public today a letter from John D. Rockefeller, jr., congratulating James A. Farley for his election midnight statement and calling it "the finest kind of sportsmanship."

The letter follows:

"My Dear Postmaster General:

"As one citizen to another, I want to give myself the satisfaction of telling you I think the radio talk which you made after midnight on election night * * * was one of the most statesmanlike utterances made on either side during the entire campaign.

"Such words as these—'we may look forward to four years of uninterrupted effort to accomplish the completion of economic recovery, of industrial welfare and of permanent establishment of real liberty in the United States,' and 'no American need have any fear of the future. Franklin D. Roosevelt's mission is to see that all of us have a square deal,' and 'I know that all who hear these words will join with me in the hope the scars of this great political battle will soon be healed.'

"Such words as these, I say, coming from you, will go a long way toward inspiring confidence and bringing about the co-operation of all citizens, irrespective of party, in dealing with the many problems so vital to our national life that confront us as a people. Your statement exemplifies the finest kind of sportsmanship. I congratulate you on it.

"Very sincerely,
"John D. Rockefeller, jr."

The letter was made public with Rockefeller's permission. In replying, the Postmaster General and Democratic chairman said, "I do not know of any letter I have received since election that gave me greater pleasure than yours. It was very kind and generous of you to write me and I am indeed grateful."

In his reply, Farley said he asked Rockefeller for permission to make the letter public "because I feel that your letter would have a helpful effect on the country."

The Rockefeller family has been identified with the Republican Party for many years. John D. Rockefeller, jr., his father and other members of his family, as in other years, were large contributors to the Republican campaign this year.

$2,000 Landon Bet Charged by Wife In Support Suit

In a city where virtually everyone with any claim to powers of political forecasting is boasting of at least a victory prediction for President Roosevelt, a man who bet $2,000 on Landon came to light yesterday—almost.

Through her attorneys, Mrs. Anne Etherdidge Risley Sommers, of Vienna, Va., told the District Court she made available to her husbnad a $1,500 brokerage account to pay off the bet.

The story was told in her suit for permanent maintenance.

On November 5, her petition stated, her husband, Fred W. A. Commers, came and pleaded for the brokerage account, predicting dire consequences unless the bet were paid. Mrs. Sommers said she hasn't seen her husband since.

Mrs. Sommers said he husband made $15 a month on a WPA project in Washington. A man whose name is similar to the name given in Mrs. Sommers' petition was found in Washington yesterday.

Approached at a WPA project in Wisconsin avenue, the man said he had never heard of the Mrs. Sommers named in the suit, didn't know where Vienna, Va., is, and anyway, he siad:

"I only bet $20 on Landon."

Rally of Baptists Will Open Tonight

Mrs. Howard W. Smith, president of the Women's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, of New York, and Dr. Theodore Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Richmond, Va., will give adresses at a banquet tonight opening the District of Columbia-Maryland State Baptist Student convention in Calvary Baptist Church.

The speakers will present messages on the convention theme, "The Will of God." Ermes Knight, of George Washington University, who is president of the State Baptist Union, will have charge of this first meeting, and Elizabeth Burnett and William Raymond will present a musical program.

Sessions will continue through Saturday, and will reach a climax at a night meeting, which will be addressed by William Hall Preston, associate southwide secretary, Nashville, Tenn.

I. C. C. Aide's Daughter Asks Divorce in Reno

Mrs. Marion B. Mitchell, daughter of Ulysses Butler, chief examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission, yesterday filed suit in Reno, Nev., for a divorce from Alva Edwin Mitchell, also of Washington, the Associated Press reported last night.

The couple was married June 20, 1935. Mrs. Mitchell charges cruelty.

Bride-to-Be

By VIDA HURST

Synopsis.

Becky Stern is the pretty young secretary of Francis Rhodes, elderly owner of a prosperous paper manufacturing company. Because of her employer's illness, Becky has been working in his home, where she has had to repulse the attentions of Francis, jr., a madcap youth of her own age. Here also she met Philip, handsome, embittered architect nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, who has just returned after eight years in Mexico City. Philip is an orphan and self made. He is the object of the envious hatred of Francis, jr., to whom he has been held up as a model.

Regina, Philip's married cousin, and her mother are convinced he has returned from Mexico City to win Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow who had jilted him eight years before. They do everything in their power to further the romance, as does Lelia herself. Within two weeks of Philip's return, Becky is forced to admit to herself that she is in love with him, and that her love is hopeless. As she lies on the sofa in the library while her employer goes for his afternoon ride, she is awakened by a kiss.

CHAPTER 4.

For one drowsy moment Becky fancied it might be Philip, whose lips were pressed against her own, then her eyes flew open. She sat up, startled and indignant at the sight of Francis, jr.

"Don't!" she gasped, pushing him away.

Putting an arm about her shoulders he lifted her mouth to his and kissed her again. As she drew back, too angry for words, she saw Philip's surprised face over the other man's shoulder.

Realizing that it was too late to retreat, Philip said, "I'm sorry! I thought you were alone."

"You needn't apologize," Becky stammered, blushing. "This is only Francis, jr.'s idea of a joke.

"The heck it is," the boy denied. "Don't be coy, Becky! It isn't becoming."

Her face burned. Tears stood in her eyes. To think that Philip, of all persons, should have witnessed the silly scene! Naturally he would think there was more than this to it. That it had happened before.

Junior Is Jealous.

Francis, jr., continued, "Funny how I never come into the library any more without running into Philip. I tear myself away from the factory to see what is transpiring at home during my father's absence and find his secretary, who is always too busy to talk to me, in constant conference with my charming cousin."

"Don't be an ass!" admonished Philip. "Becky has been kind enough to write some letters for me. That's all."

"Sez you!" retorted the heir to the Rhodes fortune. "Okay! I get it. And I'll get out, but don't think I'm blind."

"Shut up, will you?" his cousin requested lightly. "How about it, Becky? Will you take some letters now or do you have time?"

Clutching at her vanished dignity with both hands, Becky replied, "Certainly!"

Francis, jr., laughed significantly and disappeared as Becky took her place at the desk and opened her notebook. She copied the letters he dictated without comment but when she had finished she said, "Mr. Rhodes, please don't misunderstand what happened this afternoon. I really couldn't help it. You see I was asleep . . ."

Protests Too Much.

She stopped, unable to continue before the amusement in his eyes.

"The lady doth protest too much," he smiled. "Besides, it's none of my business."

Picking up the letters she had typed for him, he left the room just as his uncle entered it. The color had receded from Becky's face now, leaving it paler than usual. She looked so different from her ordinarily composed self that her employer said, "I think they must have worked you too hard yesterday. Do you want to go home?"

She refused but never in her life had she felt less capable of working. The keys of her typewriter jumbled together in her brain until her fingers could not distinguish between them. She, who prided herself on her immaculate copy, made the most stupid errors and was forced to snatch the paper from the machine time after time and start again.

Her status in Philip's eyes had been lowered far more by the kiss he had witnessed than by Regina's treatment of her the day before. There was little affection between Philip and Francis, jr. Could be no admiration on the part of the older man for a boy so shallow and erratic as his cousin. What would be his opinion of Becky, thinking that there was a romance between them?

"Not that it seemed to matter," she reminded herself.

Philip had insisted that it was none of his business. He had no idea that she had lain awake for hours the night before, heartsick to realize that she had, against her will, fallen in love with him.

To add to her discomfort, Lelia Meade called to ask in lilting tones if Mr. Philip Rhodes had left the house yet. So he had an enegagement with Lelia again today? Becky could imagine his calling for her and the fluttering of Lelia's heart as she cried, "Philip! Philip, darling!"

Can't Forget.

If Becky lived to be a hundred she would never be able to forget their meeting the night of his arrival.

"You must be losing your mind, she scolded herself, "to think that anything you do or say is of the slightest importance to him. Aside from the fact that you are a darned good stenographer, with an interest in the Spanish language, he doesn't know you exist."

Such reasoning may have been excellent for her wayward heart, but it was not conducive to a cheerful frame of mind. She left the house that night feeling lower than the proverbial snake. As she walked toward the car line, paying no heed to the line of automobiles flashing past her, she heard a grinding of brakes and looked up to see Francis, jr., with Stubby Vinton beside him.

"Climb in, Becky, and we'll take you home," he offered.

"No, thank you! I'll take the street car," she replied.

"Don't be that way!" he pleaded. "I know I'm in the doghouse and I'm sorry."

Stubby Binton's blue eyes surveyed her with owl-like intensity.

"We've plenty of time," she volunteered, "and plenty of room if that's what bothers you."

They had, also, had plenty to drink, Becky decided as the car swerved down the street—without her. Anyone was a fool to ride with Francis, jr., when he had been drinking. Reckless enough at any time, he had been arrested more than once for speeding. But Stubby was crazy about him. She had looked at Becky as if suspecting that she was competing for Francis, jr.'s, attentions. Had he been silly enough to tell Stubby about it? If so, what kind of version had he given her?

Nothing to Fear.

"Not that I care what that empty-headed little youngster thinks," thought Becky, "except for her own sake. If she only knew it she has nothing to fear from me."

But in that Becky was mistaken, for soon after dinner Francis, jr., was calling over the telephone.

"Look, Becky, I've finally gotten rid of the Vinton brat. How about having dinner with me?"

"I've had my dinner," she said ungraciously.

"You have? What time is it anyway?"

"Time for you to go home," she reminded him. "You shouldn't be driving when you've been drinking."

"Who said I'd been drinking?" he demanded aggrieved. "Which would you rather I'd do, make the round of the various bars in town alone or spend the evening with you?"

Becky thought of her employer and decided to be diplomatic.

"I can't see you tonight, Francis," she said, more kindly. "Why don't you go home and have your dinner?"

"Why should I?" he retorted. "I want to see you and get things straightened out. You're still angry with me about this afternoon."

"I'm not angry," she denied. "If you'll go home and have dinner with your family I'll agree to say no more about it."

Insistent.

"But, Becky, I want to talk about it. Will you see me tomorrow?"

"Perhaps," she conceded. "But not unless you do as I say tonight."

He telephoned later from his room, which Becky knew was separated from Philip's only by a connecting bath.

"I'm in my own little bed now," prattled the scion of the Rhodes Paper Co. "And I want credit for it."

"That's fine!" Becky answered as she might have one of the twins.

"Night, Becky darling! See you tomorrow!" he reminded her.

She turned from the telephone, sick at heart.

Her father said, "The young man is overdoing it, isn't he? Calling you twice in one evening."

"It was Francis, jr., she explained.

He frowned.

"Your employer's son, Becky?"

She nodded.

"He wont let me alone."

"You're very sure you don't give him any encouragement, my dear? You know there's more than one way to say 'no.'"

"I've said it every way I can think of," she assured him, "but I'm beginning to think the only way to get rid of him is to give up my position."

Use Your Head.

"Better not do that until you've found another one," he advised. "I'm not any too certain of my own just now. There's been a change in management and hints that some of us who were loyal to the former head may be fired. Just use you head, Becky! See to it that he has no opportunity to be alone with you."

"That's not so easy as it sounds," she objected. "He knows that his parents take a drive every afternoon from 1 to 3, and although he's supposed to be working at the factory he doesn't hesitate to leave there any time he feels inclined. I'll try, though. Goodness knows, I'm certainly not interested in him."

The inflection of her voice made her parents exchange glances. Was it possible that their daughter was interested in someone else then? And if so, whom? She had given no evidence of it in any of the various young men who were accustomed to taking her dancing or to the theater.

Embassy of U.S. A 'Snug Village' Within Madrid

55 Adults, Children Each Assigned to His Chores; Politics Is Taboo.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 12.—The United States Embassy has become a snug little village of refugees in the heart of this siege-bound capital city, with each resident taking an active part in its daily "chores" and administration.

Each of the 33 men and 22 women —and even children—contribute something toward making it as safe and comfortable as possible.

Under the supervision of Military Attache Stephen Fuqua, the men are assigned to guard duty or assist in clerical work, while the women direct the cooking, laundering and other housework. The children help with minor chores.

Some of the male refugees, including newspapermen, use the embassy only at night, attending to business outside during the day. Except for those few exceptions, the refugees, once inside, are not allowed to leave the embassy grounds.

Politics Taboo.

There are very few restrictions imposed on the embassy's guest. But one thing is absolutely taboo—discussion of Spanish politics.

Those whose work demands coming and going carry cards signed by Secretary Eric Wendelin, specifying that the embassy assumes no responsibility for them while they are outside.

The day starts with breakfast at 8:30 a. m. Most of the inhabitants are up long before then, however. The heavy reverberations of artillery rocking the city make alarm clocks unnecessary.

Free to Amuse Selves.

After the work of cleaning the embassy is done, the guests are free to stroll in the gardens, play games, read or amuse themselves as best they can—under the ever-present menace of whining shells or insurgent bombers droning overhead.

Because of the limited food supply, the refugees are on strict rations.

Many of the guests brought canned goods, bar chocolate and tea wafers, and use them to supplement the menu.

In addition to the 61 Americans, meals must be provided for 77 other persons, including 14 guards and their families and 24 employes and servants and their families.

Firm Accused of Asking For Bombs in Strike

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 12 (AP).—Mayor Rolland B. Marvin of Syracuse, testified at a National Labor Relations Board hearing yesterday that Remington-Rand Co. officials sought to have him order "militia and bombs in large quantities" after one riot accompanying a strike of the company's workers at the Syracuse factory.

Marvin was the principal witness at a session of the board's inquiry into charges brought by the union that the company was guilty of unfair labor practices.

Ackerman Favors Unit To Study Public Opinion

New York, Nov. 12 (AP).—Dean Carl W. Ackerman Wednesday proposed in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler the establishment of a foundation in the graduate school of journalism of Columbia University to study public opinion.

"There is no agency, politically and economically independent," Dean Ackerman said, "which is qualified to make a fact-finding study of public opinion."

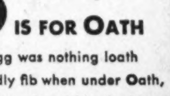
Ode to Otard by
Ogden nash



O IS FOR OATH
Osric Ogg was nothing loath
To blandly fib when under Oath,
And shysters loved him for his fitness
To nullify a hostile witness.
Osric moved from court to court,
Cashing in upon his forte,
Until his dear defendant mother
Pled, "One cognac's like another."
Said Osric, "Filial though I be,
"That's too perjurious for me.
"Mamma," said Osric, "Pooh to you—
"Though all be false,
Otard is true!"
Ogden Nash

This unique distinction assures you that OTARD, in fullness of body and delicacy of bouquet, will always measure up to its tradition as one of the world's great brandies!
